Hitler Meets 'Key Man' to Speed Austria Nazification

Schuschnigg Seen Nearing Collapse

Surrender to Germany Hinted as London and Paris Refuse Help.

The European Situation.

Nazis and non-Nazis rioted in Czechoslovakia. Twenty were arrested.

Arthur von Seyss-Inquart, new Austrian minister of the interior, conferred with Chancellor Hitler in Berlin on further Nazification of Austria.

Concern was felt in Austria for the health of Chancellor Schuschnigg, who collapsed from the strain of six days of tension.

Hitler Meets 'Key Man'

By the United Press.

Berlin, Feb. 17.—Fuehrer Adolph Hitler and his key man in the reconstructed Austrian cabinet, minister of interior Dr. von Seyss-Inquart, today mapped a program understood to jail for "intense and rapid Nazification of Austria in every field.

The plan, reaching into military, political, economic and cultural branches of the Vienna government, was said to have been elaborated after Dr. Seyss-Inquart reported to Der Fuehrer that the danger of resistance by force to Nazi ambitions appeared to have disappeared.

Informed sources said it was agreed, as result of the conference and frequent telephone calls to Vienna, to permit thousands of Austrian refugees to cross the German border and return to their homeland.

These refugees, it was understood, will include many of the 30,000 members of the outlawed "Austrian Legion" that fled from Austria after the Nazi assassination of Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss in 1934.

[Meanwhile concern was felt in Austria for Chancellor Schuschnigg's health after Schuschnigg abruptly halted an address to the Sturmkorps, a new strong-arm squad formed to fight the illegal Austrian Nazis, the Associated Press reported.

[Sturmkorps sources said Schuschnigg had suffered a nervous attack and had fainted. The official version, however, was that he was

Russians Arrest Legal Adviser to American Envoy

Moscow, Feb. 17 (AP).—Roman Biske, a Russian adviser of the United States Embassy on Soviet law, has been under arrest several days.

His seizure followed arrest of a number of Soviet citizens working for foreigners, including diplomats. Biske, who studied at Oxford and Cambridge, was a member of the British bar before the Russian revolution.

The State Department yesterday received from Moscow a cable confirming the arrest of Roman Biske, a Russian employed by the American Embassy at Moscow.

State Department officials did not indicate what action, if any, would be taken. Biske is a Soviet citizen and therefore subject to Soviet laws.

Alcatraz—The Government's Story

Bennett Says There Are No Tear Gas Tubes in Cells; Underground Crypts Are Not Used, and 'Slain' Man Is Still Alive.

[The following article is a reply to the stories by William Malcolm Ritchie, former inmate, about conditions at Alcatraz Prison. The Post invited the director of the Bureau of Prisons to reply to any statement make by Ritchie which was untrue or distorted. He finds several such statements.—EDITOR'S NOTE.]

By James V. Bennett,
Director U. S. Bureau of Prisons.

My attention has been called to a series of articles in The Washington Post dealing with conditions at the United States Penitentiary, on Alcatraz Island, Calif.

These articles contain many inaccuracies which ought to be corrected. The lurid and distorted picture they give of Alcatraz can not be set right in brief compass, but their credibility may be judged not only by the character of the author, but also by the number of misstatements they contain.

For example, in one of the articles it was asserted that one James Lucas, in an attempt to scale the wall, had his 25-year sentence cut short by a machine gun. Lucas has never made an attempt to escape. Certainly, he was not shot. He is today in good health at Alcatraz.

In another part of the same article it is stated that every cell has a pipe running into it which contains tear gas and that the tear gas is turned into the cells from time to time. This is totally without foundation. There is no built-in tear gas equipment in any of the cells at Alcatraz.

In another of the articles the statement is made that Al Capone, while at Atlanta, received special privileges; that he was permitted to have money in his possession while there, and that when transferred to Alcatraz he had some $300 in his pocket.

This is absolutely false, as Capone had no special privileges while at Atlanta; was not permitted to spend more than the $10 per month allowed all inmates, and never was permitted to have in his possession at any time any currency.

It should have been obvious that Ritchey, to whom the articles are ascribed, could not know anything whatever of Capone's conduct in Atlanta, because Ritchey never has been in that institution.

(Publication of this picture can not be blamed on the writer of the Alcatraz stories. The picture, from the library of The Post, had been

Relief Refused To 1,161; Low Funds Blamed

6,935 Cases Helped in January, Assistance Director Reports.

Relief was refused to 1,161 applicants in January, Miss M. Alice Hill, director of the Public Assistance Division of the Board of Public Welfare, reported yesterday.

"Eighty-eight per cent of this amount were refused aid because of the inadequacy of public funds," she said.

These figures were made available yesterday when Miss Hill submitted the monthly report of the division to the Board of Public Welfare. She added that "no cases were accepted unless they seemed to the interviewer to be eligible for assistance under the Federal Social Security plan."

The report shows that 7,890 cases of all kinds including general relief, aid for dependent children, home

Power for FTC To Control Pay, Hours Is Urged

Ramspeck Proposes Brief Addition to 1914 Act as Compromise.

Power for the Federal Trade Commission to prevent wage cutting or hour increases to gain profit advantages over an industrial competitor was proposed yesterday as a compromise for the Administration's wage-hour bill.

The proposal was offered as a complete substitute for the pending wage-hour measure by Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, a ranking Democratic member of the House Labor Committee. He outlined his suggestion at a special meeting of the committee.

Ramspeck said his plan was aimed specifically at "sweat shop" conditions and alleged labor "chiseling" for profit between competitors in the same business.

"The time has come to talk compromise," said the Georgian, who recently laid his proposal before the President. "There is no possibility of passing the wage-hour bill submitted to the House last session, and we might as well admit it."

Ramspeck is a supporter of wage-hour legislation, and voted against recommittal of the bill turned down by the House in December. He said conferences with members have convinced him opposition to the original measure has increased; that an entirely new and more moderate approach is necessary.

Meanwhile, Chairman Mary T. Norton called another meeting of the committee for next Thursday t. consider a new wage-hour bill draft she is having prepared, elim-

U. S. Should Build Own Ships Or Buy Abroad, Kennedy Says

By Edward T. Folliard

In his last press conference as chairman of the Maritime Commission, Joseph P. Kennedy yesterday said it would be "much better" to build American merchant vessels in European shipyards than to pay the "shocking" prices now being asked by shipyards in this country.

Kennedy said that either that should be done or the American Government should go into the shipbuilding business "100 per cent," establishing new yards or rehabilitating old ones.

Apropos the idea of building abroad, Kennedy pointed out that the Maritime Commission had recommended to Congress that American ship operators be permitted to build ships in foreign yards when the prices on this side were twice those abroad. He conceded, however, that there probably would be "political difficulties" in the way of such a plan.

The red-headed, hard-hitting Bostonian, who will take the oath of office as American Ambassador to Great Britain at 11 a. m. today at the White House and then board a plane for New York, was aroused to action by the "breath-taking" bids submitted February 1 for 12 Government cargo vessels. In a letter yesterday to President Roosevelt, he said:

"I believe that I should tell you that prices now being quoted on Government work threaten to balk our program for the rehabilitation of the American merchant marine."

Kennedy said that the Maritime Commission virtually had decided to reject all bids for the 12 cargo ships. Of the eight companies that

Talk to Buoy Prices Slated By Roosevelt

'Important' Discussion of Commodity Policy Planned Today.

President to Expound Findings of Official Economists.

By Franklyn Waltman.

President Roosevelt at his press conference today will make what was termed in a high quarter as "an interesting and important" pronouncement regarding commodity prices. Whatever the President says is expected to have the effect of bolstering the dropping price level.

Although a great deal of mystery was attached to the forthcoming Presidential pronouncement and to a White House conference yesterday on the price situation, there was no indication that Mr. Roosevelt would announce any definite course of action today.

On the contrary, it was understood from reliable sources that his pronouncement would be confined to an exposition of the current price situation and an elucidation of the Administration's price policies.

Great Powers in Reserve.

Behind the enunciation of his attitude, however, the President has in reserve great powers in the field of monetary and credit manipulation which might be used if the price level fails to respond to his announcement today, it was pointed out.

Mr. Roosevelt is expected to expound to his press conference the facts regarding current prices which were given to him yesterday by a group of the Administration's top-flight economists and statistical analysts and the Government's chief financial officers. It was rumored last night that each correspondent might be supplied with a chart or graph in order to be able to follow the President's words more closely.

The President's purpose is under-

Hull, Roosevelt Meet Leaders in Mystery Parley

A White House conference believed to have dealt with trade treaties and tariffs, but which it was also reported might have discussed war debts was held yesterday with President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull as the leading figures.

The other conferees, none of whom would discuss the meeting, were Vice President John Garner, Senator Pat Harrison, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee; Representative Robert L. Doughton, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee; Herbert Feis, State Department Economic Adviser, and Acting Budget Director Daniel W. Bell.

Since Secretary Hull is in charge of the Administration's reciprocal trade plans, it was assumed these were discussed together with taxes and foreign tariffs. Ie was believed war debts might have been a subject because of the idea debtor nations wishing trade treaty favors might resume payments.

Mine Flood Traps 10 Men, 2 Saved In Rescue Fight

Hazleton, Pa., Feb. 17 (AP).—Ten men were trapped in a flooded coal mine near here today. Two were brought out uninjured by rescuers a few hours afterward. The fate of the eight remaining underground was not known.

The miners were trapped when a flooded stripping collapsed at the Lehigh Valley Coal Co.'s No. 1 slope at nearby Jeanesville.

The water soon receded, leaving tunnels choked with mud and debris. Rescue crews fought their way through the passage seeking the imprisoned men.

The Tahoe at 6 p. m. was about 300 miles east-northeast of the steamer, which had 51 aboard.

Congressional Traffic Offenders Are Chastised on Floor of House

Parked contrary to three "no parking" signs, the driver of this Congressional-plated car even refused to comply with regulations prohibiting parking more than 6 inches from the curb. It was found by a Post photographer yesterday at South Capitol and B streets, near the new House Office Building. The driver had apparently "overlooked" a large sign "Do Not Enter" and left his car in the middle of the street. Other "no parking" signs can be seen. Arrows point to a Congressional tag and a courtesy card left by Capitol police.

'No Better Than Anyone Else,' Rep. Rich Warns Colleagues

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Congressional traffic troubles and a story appearing in Thursday's Washington Post threw the House of Representatives into stormy debate yesterday as members alternately assailed and defended officialdom's special motoring privileges.

Waving a copy of The Post, Representative Robert F. Rich (Republican), of Pennsylvania, pointed to a front page picture showing a car with "Congressional" tags parked contrary to local regulations.

"Members of this House," he thundered, "deserve a real chastising—and I'm going to give it to them. The District of Columbia has traffic laws to be obeyed the same as you have back home. The trouble is, you just don't give a damn!

"If you don't obey the laws you make yourselves, how can you expect anyone else to obey them?" Rich shouted, as cloakroom doors opened and absent members entered the chamber to hear his attack.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 17.—Izzy Einstein, prohibition "spotter," of many madcap disguises and scourge of the speakeasy, died today after a leg amputation.

A star insurance salesman since his retirement from the "prohibition business" in 1925, he was taken ill with a leg infection several days ago and succumbed to shock.

To veil their 250-pound bulks and private-detective miens from the scrutiny of hapless gin-mill impresarios, Izzy and Moe metamorphosed themselves into coal heavers, farmers, comedians, negroes, gravediggers, violinists, fishermen, grocers, night-watchmen, German immigrants, truckmen, garbage men, beggars and millionaires.

Their especial concern was the kindly finesse with which they would preface an arrest.

Against their renown as zanies stood their record of once "knocking off" 26 places in succession, without benefit of disguise; and Chief Justice William Howard Taft once cited Einstein in a liquor case as "an agent of prudence and caution."

Two Rescue Fliers Fall in Polar Sea

Moscow, Feb. 17 (U.P.).—Two Russian aviators arranging the rescue of four Soviet scientists stranded on an ice floe off the Greenland coast escaped death in icy waters late today when they became lost and were forced down in the Arctic Sea.

The fliers were rescued by another plane from the ice-breaker Taimir, headquarters of the rescue expedition.

Earlier Pilot Gennedy Vlasev had flown from the Taimir with a supply of beer and 40 tangerines for the scientists. Vlasev reported they were in "excellent spirits" and in no hurry to get off.

Modifications End Deadlock On Family Tax

Complete Bill Expected to Reach Floor of House Within 10 Days.

By Robert C. Albright.

A deadlock that has held up the Administration's 1938 tax bill for weeks was broken yesterday by last-minute modification of penalties on "closely held" corporations.

Ways and Means Committee Democrats will report tax changes to the full committee today, and daily executive sessions will be held in an effort to rush the completed bill to the House, possibly within the next ten days.

Additional concessions were made to ameliorate stiff opposition to the proposed heavy penalties on wealthy corporations controlled by families or by from one to ten outsiders.

Foremost among the concessions—which fell far short of satisfying all opposition criticism—was an agreement to exempt corporations earning up to $75,000 from the new surtax penalty. The original provision exempted corporations earning up to $50,000, and would have affected nearly 1,000 "closely held" firms. The added exemption will cut down the number of companies affected by the penalty tax.

This change, and other minor modifications, brought the Administration the one additional Democratic vote it needed to assure full committee approval. Six Democratic committee members have

Six 'Air Forts' Fly Nonstop Miami to Peru

By the Associated Press.

Lima, Peru, Feb. 17.—Five United States Army "flying fortresses" resumed a good-will flight to Buenos Aires tonight after six hours' rest following a non-stop flight from Miami.

The sixth bomber of the group participating in the mass flight was delayed here by a defective propeller. The plane, commanded by Maj. J. V. Meloy, was expected to resume its flight tomorrow.

Lieut. Col. Robert Olds, of Washington, the flight commander, said the planes would fly south to Valparaiso, Chile, and thence east across the Andes, a total distance of approximately 2,500 miles.

The six four-motored bombers, which carried 49 men on the longest flight the Army Air Corps has made, left Miami after midnight and landed here 15 hours and 34 minutes later after spanning 2,695 miles of sea and South American soil at an average speed of nearly 200 miles per hour.

They are en route from Langley Fields, Va., to participate in ceremonies Sunday attending the inauguration of Roberto M. Ortiz as president of Argentina.

Latins Are Amazed.

Leaving Miami, they passed over Cuba an hour later while Secretary of War Harry Woodring and Lieut. Col. Robert Olds, of Washington, the flight commander, exchanged greetings by radio.

At 7 o'clock they crossed the Canal Zone and entered communication with Lima.

Passing the Equator at 10:50 a. m. they dipped their noses in a salute to Father Neptune.

"The inhabitants of the small Ecuadoran town of Punta Baitena will long remember the startling sight of six huge bombers roaring out of the heavens over their peaceful village," Commander Olds radioed Langley Field. "It is also believed that many members of the flight will continue to live the moment even after they are old men mumbling in their beards."

From the Equator they followed the coast line to Lima. The big ships roared in review past the Peruvian cabinet and a large crowd of spectators at Limatambo Airport, 6 miles from the city. They alighted about half an hour later.

Storms in Japan Kill 5.

Tokyo, Feb. 17 (AP).—At least five persons were killed and more than a score missing today after violent winds and snows swept Japan.

Children Invade House, Wreck $4,000 Fittings With Swords

Five Chevy Chase children between the ages of 7 and 12 years were mighty sad last night after they had spent three days inflicting $4,000 damage on the interior of a home at 3708 Morrison street northwest.

On three of the last ten days they had entered the uninhabited home through a basement window and armed with two decorative swords had slashed furniture, rugs and curtains, and carved the floors.

Further they had hurled everything they could pick up at the walls so that in some places debris lay a foot and a half deep on the floor.

With a .22 caliber gun they had shot out all the light bulbs and drilled all the mirrors.

The damage was reported to police Tuesday by W. Frank Tyson, retired real estate dealer, owner of the house, who has been living with relatives a few houses away. He said he had not visited the house for ten days.

Detective Sergt. Richard J. Felber, of the Eighth Precinct, solved the case yesterday.

After surveying the wreckage and finding some toy soldiers and stamps missing and finding a pair of child's woolen gloves, he began to see the solution. Taking the gloves in hand he started ringing door bells in the neighborhood.

A 7-year-old girl readily admitted that they were hers. Confronted with discovery of her deeds, she admitted that she had accompanied four boys, from 7 to 12 years, while the damage was done.

Tornado Kills 35, Hurts 100, Wrecks Town In Louisiana

Nearby Cities Rush Aid to Storm Area

Oil Derricks Toppled, Phone and Light Lines Torn Down.

By the United Press.

Rodessa, La., Feb. 17.—A tornado that ripped through the west end of Rodessa tonight killed at least 35 persons and injured more than a hundred, it was estimated by rescue workers.

The estimate was made by R. J. Ellis, a pharmacist at a drug store in Vivian, La., where most of the injured were taken for first aid treatement.

Jack Hart, Rodessa drug store employe, in a short telephone call to Shreveport at midnight, said "probably 50" were killed.

"I myself recognized 25 or 30 of the dead," he said.

Probably Above 50.

He added that the toll probably would go above 50 and that "hundreds" were injured as the north end of the town was wiped out.

Hart, asked for a list of the dead, had only time to mention "Mr. and Mrs. Crowder and the mother-in-law." He was not specific and said the need was too great to aid the injured to talk further.

All available nurses and doctors from Shreveport were rushed 33 miles north over rain and wind swept roads after a Western Union operator here sent out a call for aid.

Most communication lines were torn down by the storm.

Texarkana and northeast Texas towns were telephoned for aid.

Hart, describing the storm, said it hit so suddenly that "nobody knew what happened."

"Houses, buildings and farm homes were broken like matchwood," he said.

Path Mile Long Leveled.

Hart estimated the twister leveled a path a mile long. He said it came within 100 yards of the drug store where he was working.

[Buildings in the business district went down like cards before the wind, which lasted about five minutes, the Associated Press reported.

[Lights in the business district were out.

[Emegency calls for ambulances went out to Shreveport, Vivian and Atlanta, Tex., over the few telephone lines which remained up.—Editor's note.]

Rodessa is a small town of only a few hundred residents, but thousands of workmen and their families live in the far-flung oil field around it.

Town Partly Razed.

Shreveport, La., Feb. 17 (U.P.).—All available doctors and nurses tonight were rushed to tornado-swept Rodessa, little oil town 35 miles north of here, and Charity Hospital attendants were standing by to treat injured being brought here "by the carloads."

Thirty-five doctors and nurses and all available officers here were mobilized hastily and speeded to Rodessa.

Mertzon, Tex., Feb. 17 (AP).—Twenty-four persons were injured when a twisting windstorm ripped through this west Texas town early today. Mrs. Sweet Davis, 36, was in a critical condition and eight others also were seriously hurt.

Business Group Asks Revision Of Labor Board

Advisory Council Urges Roosevelt to Give Employer Equal Rights.

By the United Press.

President Roosevelt's business advisory council yesterday recommended a far-reaching program for industrial peace which contemplates drastic revision of the embattled national labor relations act and curtailment of the powers of the Labor Board.

The proposal calls for a "consistent industrial relations policy, fair to employers, employes and the public trust," and recommends that it be achieved through voluntary action and through State and Federal legislation. The Wagner-Connery act as written, it was charged, fails to provide the employer with means of redress in labor disputes.

John D. Biggers, unemployment census director, and Charles R. Hook, of the National Association of Manufacturers, presented the program to the President. Donald R. Richberg, former NRA administrator and close adviser to the President on industrial problems, attended the conference.

Changes Recommended.

The council's recommendations include:

1. Voluntary agreements and arbitration awards to be enforceable by law.

2. Employer and employe to exercise the right of self-organization and collective bargaining, free from interference, restraint or coercion from any source.

3. Neither the Wagner act nor the Labor Board to favor any particular form of labor organization—either industrial or craft. The American Federation of Labor has accused the board of discriminating against its unions in favor of Committee for Industrial Organization unions.

4. Imposition of corresponding responsibilities on employers and employes and impartial enforcement of these responsibilities with a dominant regard for the public interest.

5. Banning of all controversial activities which interfere with public service or jeopardize the national defense.

Rights for Employers.

6. Enactment of Federal and State legislation encouraging the settlement of labor disputes through creation of public (arbitration) agencies.

7. Separation of the fact-finding and judicial duties now confined in the single Labor Board.

8. Permission to the employer, as well as the employe, to invoke the services of the board in labor disputes. Labor leaders oppose this change, fearing that employers might use the board to entrench company unions.

9. More specific definition of the rights and obligations of employes, employers, and their representatives to eliminate discretionary definitions of such rights and obligations by the board.

Neither the White House nor the conferees disclosed Mr. Roosevelt's reactions to the council's program.

Farmer Foregoes Beer To Help Out Treasury

By the Associated Press.

A Missouri farmer passed up a drink of beer, and the Treasury's "conscience fund" has gained a dime.

"I resolved that when I felt a desire for a bottle of beer or any alcoholic drink," the Missourian wrote, "I would send price of same to the Treasury Department, thus paying the whole sum to help balance the budget instead of just the tax on same."

Unlike most contributors to the "conscience fund," this man signed his name. Officials considered advising him that he must be tempted with 13,299,999,999 more bottles of beer if he wants to wipe out the red ink for the current year.

1st Ward Boys Show Ingenuity In Presenting Clubhouse Plea

C. VIRGINIA DIEDEL

30 Youths Appear Before Association With Petition Representing Desires of 140 Members; C. Virginia Diedel, President, Tells Aims.

By Christine Sadler

Boys of the old First Ward area showed how ingenuous they were when they appeared before the First Ward Citizens Association and presented their case in favor of a boys' club. Not one, but on two different occasions, approximately 30 of them appeared with a petition representing the desires of 140 boys for a club of their own.

"Naturally, the boys' club movement is the big thing in our lives today," C. Virginia Diedel, president of the association, said yesterday.

"There is less than one-fourth of an acre of playground in our whole area, and that is adjoining Grant School."

As a result of interest created by the association—and the boys—the Y. M. C. A. offered its club facilities on a temporary basis. Association members started scouring the neighborhood for a suitable building which could be purchased and asked the Boys' Club of Washington to make a survey of the situation.

Serve Both Groups.

"We believe a clubhouse so situated it would serve needs of both the boys in the old First Ward and boys of Georgetown would be an admirable solution to the problem, and are hoping such can be managed," Miss Diedel said.

Other activities of Miss Diedel's association at present include a Commodore Stephen Decatur citizenship contest sponsored in two junior high schools to acquaint students with the life of this early American hero and to stimueate interest in preserving Decatur House. Miss Diedel is chairman of the Professional Writers' Club committee seeking preservation of the historic home.

The association worked last summer to have municipal swimming pools open free to children between the ages of and 12 throughout the District. It co-operated with the group which secured night classes for Western High School and with groups which were instrumental in having a new 24-room school building for the ward included in the five-year building program of the Board of Education. The members sent a representative to the Commissioners asking that parking arrangements at the Western Markets be left so as to accomodate the greatest number of farmers.

"We like the market and want to see it preserved," Miss Diedel explained.

Formed 2 Years Ago.

The First Ward Citizens Association was formed two years ago and has been invited to become a member of the Federation of Citizens Associations. It has approximately 50 members, all active, Miss Diedel said.

Miss Diedel is a native of Washington and a law graduate of George Washington University. Her friends call her Virginia, but on the door of her law office C. V. Diedel is considered enough.

She loves to practice law, to hike, to dance, to attend parties, and "just talk." In addition to being president of the First Ward group, she is a delegate to the Federation from the Arts Club, where she is chairman of the civic committee. She also finds time for active participation in the Professional Writers Club, although she declared she had "nothing much to show for my writing this year."

On Monday—Allen Culling Clark, veteran president of the Columbia Historical Society, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

By the Associated Press.

The House Appropriations Committee rebuked the Budget Bureau yesterday for proposing a slash in funds for the Federal bureau established to serve business and industry.

It took this action while approving a $130,071,105 appropriation for the State, Commerce, Labor and Justice departments and the Federal judiciary. The fund is to meet expenses of these establishments during the year beginning July 1.

Action Slated Today.

The Appropriations Committee described as "serious and disturbing" the Budget Bureau's proposal to give the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce $291,600 less than it had for the current year. The House group restored all but $3,500 of the proposed reduction, recommending that the bureau be allowed a total of $3,038,100.

Unless amendments change the amounts, the bill will carry $16,608,750 for the State Department, $46,899,660 for Commerce, $24,332,950 for Labor and $42,229,745 for Justice. The latter includes $18,577,275 for the judiciary.

The measure came up for debate in the House yesterday and was slated for House action today.

The Budget Bureau recommended the bill's total be $4,011,345 more than the current appropriation; the committee approved an increase of only $2,172,799.

Lawyers' Work Checked.

Representative Ditter (Republican), Pennsylvania, arose to rebuke the Justice Department for employing special attorneys to check spelling, quotations, dates and capitalization of "less well-educated attorneys."

He said that, at hearings on the bill, Julius C. Martin, director of the Bureau of Veterans' Insurance Litigation, said he had on his staff a woman who was an aide to Supreme Court Justice Black when the latters was a Senator.

She reviewed the work of less well-educated attorneys, Martin told the committee.

Court Dismisses Suit to Restrain Coal Price Fixing

Suit of the Indiana Gas & Chemical Co. to restrain imposition of minimum prices on bituminous coal, as fixed by recent orders of the National Bituminous Coal Commission, was dismissed here yesterday. A three-judge tribunal held the company should first have sought the aid of a circuit court of appeals.

The three judges, Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner of the United States Court of Appeals, and Justices Oscar R. Luhring and Peyton Gordon, of the District Court, intimated attorneys for both the commission and the company were employing "battledore and shuttlecock" tactics.

The remark was made by Justice Groner, after he learned the hearing was being held while the commission was still pursuing an inquiry into the prices to be set for coal.

German Nazi Groups In Brazil Must Close

Porto Alegre, Brazil, Feb. 17 (AP). German Nazi organizations today came under a ban which ordered closed all foreign political associations in the State of Rio Grande do Sul.

Two Bills Introduced To Aid D. C. Teachers

Two bills designed to aid public school teachers in the District of Columbia were reintroduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator Bone (Democrat), of Washington. Both were referred to the District Committee.

One proposes to give the teachers a sabbatical holiday every seventh year with part pay, while the other seeks to amend the teachers' retirement act so as to provide for the inheritance of uncollected annuities.

The Gallup Poll

Shipment of Arms to China Opposed, Although Voters Favor the Chinese.

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Feb. 17.—With the Japanese armies penetrating deeper and deeper into China, with some Americans advocating a more aggressive policy in the Far East and others calling for a "hands off" attitude, a question of prime importance today is: How far should the United States go in giving material aid to China?

GEORGE GALLUP.

The views of the public on this issue are indicated by an American Institute of Public Opinion survey, which asked a representative cross-section of voters throughout the Nation: "Do you think the United States should allow shipment of arms or ammunition from this country to China?"

An overwhelming public desire for neutrality is shown in the results. More than six out of every ten voters say arms shipments should not be allowed. The actual vote is: 36 per cent for sending arms to China, 64 per against.

Sympathy With China.

This attitude especially significant because other Institute studies have found that American public sympathy is predominately with the Chinese side. In a survey last October, conducted through the Institute's 600 field reporters, only 1 per cent of voters were in favor of Japan, whereas 59 per cent sympathized with China, and 40 per cent favored neither side.

The vote against arms shipment seems to indicate that voters do not want the Nation's tacit sympathy for China to influence the policy of neutral conduct. In this respect they are in agreement with Secretary Hull's recent decision not to aid League powers in re-arming China.

Attitude Summarized.

The survey is the latest of a series which the Institute has conducted from time to time on the Sino-Japanese war. These studies, when combined, trace a clear pattern of public sentiment regarding the conflict.

Overwhelmingly in favor of a policy of strict neutrality, voters have gone on record as opposing, by a ratio of 95 to 5, war loans to either Japan or China. Boycott of Japanese goods was disapproved by a vote of 59 per cent to 41 per cent, the majority declaring that such action would not only be ineffective in stopping the war, but would cause further friction between the United States and Japan.

Sentiment was also found, in other surveys, for withdrawing our armed forces from China as well as our nationals. The prevailing attitude as indicated by one voter was: "Let's keep out of the mess over there."

"Mind Own Business."

Similar sentiments are reflected in the survey of arms shipments. "It's none of our business" and "Let's not help either side" are typical statements made by voters who disapprove shipments to China. Others in the same group declare that "it's wrong to be a party to war," arguing that arms shipments would only prolong the fighting. "If no one sends arms or ammunition," said one voter, "the war would soon end."

The minority who favor aid to the Chinese give three main reasons for their attitude. First, they say that in helping China we will keep Japan from eventually attacking us. "Let China fight our war against fascism" is a typical comment. Second, they declare that since the warring nations must buy arms from someone, they might as well buy from the United States, thus stimulating our industries. Finally, some voters argue that in the matter of armaments we should give the Chinese the same "break" as we give Japan. "If we send arms to Japan," said one voter, "we should send them to China."

If the question of national prohibition should come up again, how would the country vote? See the Gallup Poll in Sunday's Post.

U. S. Population Will Reach 'Stability' Years Ahead of Time, Census Expert Tells House.

The population of the United States may reach the stabilization point—where births equal deaths—many years before the normal time for a "new" country to do so, Congress learned yesterday. Economic conditions, birth control, the number of employed women and related factors are deemed responsible.

William L. Austin, director of the Census Bureau, gave this information to a House Appropriations subcommittee. He said births have been falling off for a number of years while the number of deaths has been increasing. But Austin declined to predict when the two would be equal, declaring he had not given the trend sufficient study to do so.

The bill to limit freight train lengths to 70 cars continued to be attacked yesterday before the House Commerce Committee. Cleveland A. Newton, general counsel of the Mississippi Valley Association, said the bill would result in higher freight rates and more accidents. The added rates, he said, would be paid by the producer and consumer. H. A. Smythe, of the Roanoke (Va.) Chamber of Commerce, and Charles R. Seal, of the Baltimore Association of Commerce, also opposed the measure.

A two-year extension of the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium act which expires March 3, was approved yesterday by the House Judiciary Committee. The Senate voted last July to make the law permanent. The act permits farmers to enter a type of bankruptcy which forbids mortgage foreclosures for three years. During this time the farmer pays his creditors a stipulated rent which the courts and conciliators determine.

After a conference with Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, attended also by Senators Schwartz, of Wyoming; Hatch, of New Mexico; Johnson, of Colorado, and Pope, of Idaho, all Democrats, Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming said he would support a pending bill he had previously opposed for making wool loans. Wallace said steps would be taken to make the loans as soon as Congress approves pending legislation to increase resources of the Commodity Credit Corporation to $100,000,000.

Legislation to control production of peanuts was advocated yesterday by Representative Kerr (Democrat), of North Carolina. He declared the peanut was the principal crop of 225,000 farmers and added:

"It is apparent to those of us who represent the areas where peanuts are grown that if the production of corn, cotton and rice is to be restricted and controlled, then the same legal methods to prevent overproduction should apply to the peanut crop."

That great American institution—the hamburger stand—is to have its usual place beside any super transcontinental highways, when and if they are built. Senator Bulkley (Democrat), of Ohio, one of the sponsors of super-highway legislation, promised yesterday the corporation building the roads would be empowered to acquire 550 feet on each side of the roadway which it would sell or lease for hot dog, hamburger and soda pop stands.

Townsend Off for Jail; Disciples Sing Farewell

Los Angeles, Feb. 17 (AP).—Several hundred singing followers were at the train tonight as Dr. Francis E. Townsend, old-age pension leader, left for Washington, D. C., to serve a jail term for contempt. Several of the elderly women wept and all followers joined in singing "I'm Grateful to You."

Dr. Townsend was sentenced to serve 30 days in jail and pay a $100 fine for refusing to testify before a House investigating committee about his promotion of the $200 a month pension plan.

Australians Burn Mussolini Effigy

Melbourne, Australia, Feb. 17 (AP). An angry crowd of 2,000 today burned an effigy of Premier Mussolini as a result of a complaint by a taxi driver that he had been attacked aboard the Italian cruiser Raimondo Montecuccoli.

The crew of the United States cruiser Louisville, also visiting Melbourne, entertained a party of Italian sailors during the demonstration.

Roosevelt to Take Rest at Hyde Park

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt, having obtained enactment of two of his six legislative recommendations, will leave this afternoon for a four or five-day rest at Hyde Park, N. Y.

Security Costs 6 Million.

The Social Security Board reported yesterday unemployment benefits at the close of the third week of payments totaled $6,277,801 in 20 States and the District of Columbia, the Associated Press reported.

Iota of Pa. Ave Bridge Jam After 11th St. Bridge Closes

This is a typical jam on the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge yesterday after the Eleventh Street Bridge across the Anacostia was closed for repairs. The old bridge was unable to accommodate the extra traffic and cars were blocked for nearly a mile during rush hours. The Eleventh Street Bridge is to be reopened today. Lone Legislator Present at D. C. Taxes Hearing Supporter of Income Levy Is Sarcastic at Absence of Committee.

District income tax advocates had a round before the House fiscal affairs sub-committee yesterday, but only one member of the sub-committee was on hand to hear them.

The absence of members drew sarcastic comment from Sidney R. Katz, of the Washington Industrial Council of the C. I. O., who also agreed to exemption of members of Congress, "their secretaries, and their uncles and aunts" in order to get the income tax through the reluctant House.

Urges Net Profit Levy.

Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the citizens committee on fair taxation, a labor and Government employe group, also urged a graduated income tax and a levy on the net rather than gross profits of corporations.

Lagging interest in the hearings, both on the part of citizens and sub-committee members, caused postponement of a hearing scheduled for today. The next meeting will be Monday, when the Board of Trade is to present its case for the sales tax and against the business privilege levy.

Katz argued that the income tax of a flat 1 per cent, as carried in the bill, should be amended to provide a graduated scale tax that would increase with incomes. He predicted that such a tax would produce all the revenue necessary to balance the District budget for the next fiscal year.

Sees "Class Legislation."

Katz, who said he spoke for about 10,000 laboring men, denounced both the business privilege tax and the suggested sales tax. The latter he labeled "class legislation of the worst kind."

Mrs. Boyle likewise opposed the sales tax and offered the levy on corporation net profits as a substitute for the business privilege tax.

A. D. Calvert, president of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association, spoke in defense of the sales tax. He suggested that bread, potatoes, medicine and coal in quantities of half a ton or less should be exempt.

Baltimore Woman, 62, Is Slashed to Death in Kitchen

Baltimore, Feb. 17 (AP).—Her throat slashed and clothing torn, Mrs. Sophia Fagan, 62-year-old grandmother, was found dead in her home late today.

Police said there was no doubt the woman had been attacked and murdered. Her son, Attorney J. Charles Fagan, attributed robbery as the cause of the murder.

A squad of detectives and patrolmen began a house-to-house search of the neighborhood for persons who could identify a colored youth seen washing steps and windows in front of the Fagan house two hours before the body was found.

After a cursory examination Coroner Charles Woods said the case "was an open and shut" murder.

Wife Testifies She Left Spouse for MacFadden

New York, Feb. 17 (U.P.).—Mrs. Abbie Rheinhardt Adams, whose husband has brought a $100,000 alienation of affections suit against Bernarr MacFadden, publisher and physical culturist, testified by deposition today that she left her husband because she found in MacFadden a "better means of support."

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Army Firing Squad Executes Mexican For Slaying Girl, 8

Tijuana, Mexico, Feb. 17 (AP).—An army firing squad dealt swift death to a sex killer today to ease mob tension which had gripped Tijuna for 72 hours.

Thirty soldiers, appearing suddenly at the Tijuana jail just before dawn, took charge of Juan Castillo Morales, 24, one of their comrades who allegedly had confessed attacking and killing 8-year-old Olga Consuelo Conancho, a bartender's daughter. They marched him to a cemetery and shot him to death.

Military authorities said a court martial had decreed the death sentence.

Tuesday night a mob of 800 men and women set fire to the city jail, police station and federal building in an unsuccessful attempt to seize the killer.

Mexican civil law provides a maximum penalty of 25 years in prison for homicide and rape.

Man Hurt by Auto 6 Weeks Ago Dies

Lewis Hartman, 71, 221 Thirteenth street southeast, died in Casualty Hospital early yesterday, apparently from injuries suffered in a traffic accident at Ninth and F streets northwest on New Year's Day.

Police say that Hartman was taken to Casualty at the time, treated and then allowed to go home. February 4, he was readmitted and treated for an injured left shoulder and forearm and broken left upper arm.

Police say they have no record of the accident.

Langdon to Plead To Limerick Death Indictment Today

Robert F. Langdon, former patrolman, will be arraigned before Justice Jesse C. Adkins in Criminal Court at 2 p. m. today on a charge of murdering Beulah Limerick, "Whoopee Girl" who was found shot to death on New Year's Eve, 1930.

Lieut. Floyd Truscott, investigating the case, stated yesterday that "Langdon has not indicated whether he will plead guilty or not guilty." It is expected, however, that he will enter a not guilty plea.

Following his arraignment, Langdon will be taken to District Jail. He has been held at the Twelfth Precinct since Wednesday night, when he was brought to Washington from New Haven, Conn. Langdon was booked on a charge of murder yesterday.

No. 9 Behind Bars, Miss Georgia Says She'll Stay Single

New York, Feb. 17 (AP).—The much-married Virginia Overshiner, of Georgia, today summarily renounced—and denounced—husband No. 9, who was held in jail on a warrant charging non-support of a wife and three children in the Bronx.

"From now on I am 'Miss Cogswell' (Cogswell was No. 8) and I hope I always will have sense enough to be that," sighted the comely "Miss Georgia" of 1922.

The man who walked into a police station last night and identified himself as Rudolph Kaplan was, she told Detective Thomas Hines, the man with whom she eloped to Elkton, Md., last Saturday. They were married as Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Bromley, of Atlanta, after a courtship of less than a week.

General Motors Deal Is Claimed In '34 Election

Davey Given $25,000 in Return for Future Business, Inquiry Told.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Feb. 17.—Lee Bradley, a salesman, testified today General Motors Corporation contributed $25,000 to the 1934 campaign fund of Martin L. Davey, elected that year to Ohio's Governorship. In return, Bradley said, General Motors was to receive half the State's motor business.

Bradley, who said he represented Davey for a time and later worked for the Democratic State Committee, appeared before a special State Senate committee which has been investigating prices paid by the State in various purchases.

Davey, at Columbus, described Bradley's statements as "slanderous falsehoods."

Bradley said the $25,000 arrangement with General Motors was made at a New York hotel. He testified L. L. Tramper represented General Motors, and that Davey told Tramper to send the money to Francis W. Poulson, State Democratic chairman.

Bradley also said there was an arrangement whereby he was to receive commissions of 10 to 20 per cent on General Motors sales to Ohio, and that Davey was to receive half Bradley's commissions.

Bradley described Tramper as "general fleet salesman" for General Motors.

2 Tenderfoot Robbers Plead Guilty to Killing

Las Cruces, N. Mex., Feb. 17 (U.P.).—Harry Dwyer and Henry Lorenz, two tenderfoot badmen who tried a train robbery in the style of the old West, pleaded guilty today to second degree murder in the death of a trainman killed during the hold-up attempt last Thanksgiving Day. The plea made by the two Eastern youths probably will enable them to escape a death sentence.

Japanese Mark Billion More to Continue War

New Account for Cabinet Vote Brings Costs to $2,146,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Feb. 17.—The Japanese government earmarked $1,392,000,000 for the army and navy today to continue the undeclared war against China.

The new military expense account, as completed by the finance ministry, brought the bill for the seven months of warfare to $2,146,000,000.

The 4,800,000,000 yen ($1,392,000,000) "special account for extraordinary military expenditure" is a supplement to the ordinary budget. The finance ministry's figurse will be submitted to the cabinet for approval next week.

The sum already spent on the war is more than four times as much as the total for the Chinese-Japanese war of 1894-95 and the Russian-Japanese war of 1904-05 combined.

Insist in Parity.

At the same time the naval spokesman reiterated Japan's stand on naval parity

Japan holds the 5-5-3 naval ratio, putting Japan in an inferior position to Great Britain and the United States, was abolished when Japan denounced the London 1936 naval treaty.

The naval spokesman, commenting on the United States' projected "two ocean fleet," declared that the fact the United States has two oceans to defend against Japan's one does not alter Japan's parity stand.

The newspaper Chugai said editorially "Britain and the United States are intending to expand their navies with future hostilities in the Far East as their objective. In other words, both countries are expanding their navies with Japan as their mark."

The increased Japanese army and navy estimates were received calmly by business and financial circles.

Chinese Claim Gains.

Shanghai (Friday), Feb. 18.—Japanese declared today their forces were poised for a smashing thrust south of the Yellow River in the western sector of the central China front.

Chinese guerrilla units and Communist troops, however, were reported to have taken 75 miles of the Peiping-Hankow Railroad, Japan's main supply line for the sector.

Regular Chinese forces on the eastern side also were said to have stopped the Japanese and to have launched a counteroffensive.

13 Planes Bomb Canton.

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

Canton, Feb. 17.—Thirteen Japanese planes bombed Canton today, throwing large areas of the city into panic. The raid was centered on the Tienho airdrome east of Tungshan. About 30 bombs fell near the water front in the vicinity of the Anglo-American area on Shameen Island.

Loyalists Trap 1,000 Rebels in Aragon Battle

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France, at the Spanish Frontier, Feb. 17.—Spanish government forces reported tonight they had trapped 1,000 insurgents in fierce fighting for control of the Aragon front.

The insurgents, government advices said, were caught in a pocket in the village of Villanueva del Rebollar, about 36 miles north of Teruel, in the center of an active sector.

In southern Spain the government reported their counteroffensive northwest of Cordoba had recaptured all the positions lost a week ago to the insurgent drive eastward against the Almaden mercury mines.

In the serious fighting, government dispatches said, not only the old government positions were taken but also a dozen fortified hills long held by the insurgents.

Insurgent reports said their front lines in the bitterly contested Aragon salient of east Spain were anchored near Villanueva del Rebollar.

Paris Launches Inquiry On Trotzky Son's Death

Paris, Fed 17 (AP).—An official investigation was launched today into the death of Leon Sedoff, 32-year-old son of Leon Trotzky, to determine whether poison was a cause of death. Sedoff died yesterday in a Paris hospital after a week's illness. (Sedoff was named together with his exiled father in the Moscow treason trial of January, 1937, as a conspirator against the Soviet state.)

Hitler-Approved Austrian Ministers

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Dark Stranger in Italy, Claiming to Be Missing Soviet Charge d'Affaires in Bucharest, Not the Right Jodor, Russians Say.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Feb. 17.—The Russian government today branded as an imposter a man who turned up in Rome and identified himself as Jodor Butenko, missing charge d'affaires of the Soviet legation at Bucharest, Rumania.

Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff informed Rumanian authorities his government was convinced that the real Butenko was in the hands of kidnapers in Rumania, or was dead, and that the man in Rome was a white Russian, enemy of the Soviet regime.

A stocky, black-haired man who said he was Butenko appeared in Rome yesterday and announced he fled the Bucharest legation because of a fear that Russian secret police were attempting either to kill or abduct him. The man was toasted in Rome as a hero whose desertion of bolshevism gave Italy a boost in her crusade against communism

Litvanoff said Serge Alexandrovsky, Soviet minister to Prague, had been ordered to Bucharest to conduct an investigation and to confer with Rumanian authorities.

Falls to See Butenko.

Rome, Feb. 17 (AP).—Efforts of the Russian embassy to identify a man claiming to be Jodor Butenko, missing charge d'affaires of the Soviet legation in Rumania, failed today after a former classmate at the diplomatic school tried in vain to see him.

The embassy secretary said he knew Butenko as a student at the diplomatic school and that he came to Rome about the time Butenko was sent to Bucharest. He said he found the man claiming to be Butenko so well guarded at his hotel that he could not see him.

King George Receives Military Mission Head

London, Feb. 17 (AP).—King George today received Rear Admiral N. A. Wodehouse, head of a military mission which leaves tomorrow for Portugal on what informed diplomatic sources described as "a maneuver to gain the use of the Azores and Madeira in time of war."

The Azores and Madeira in the Atlantic form a gateway for shipping between Latin America, where Britain holds vast oil resources, and the British Isles.

Camp Work Begins.

Leonardtown, Md., Feb. 17 (AP).—Construction of buildings for a girls' camp on a site purchased by the Sisters of the Holy Cross, of Washington, on St. Georges Island has begun. It is expected to be completed by spring.

Britain, France Alarmed Over Austrian Crisis

Paris Charges Duce Plans African Conquest in Deal With Berlin.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 17.—British and French official circles today expressed frank alarm at the spread of Nazi influence in Austria.

"Is this drift toward change by force never to be stopped?" demanded Lord Allen of Hurtwood in bitter debate in the British House of Lords.

In France, foreign office officials voiced the suspicion Premier Mussolini of Italy had abandoned Austria to Germany in return for a German promise to support him in further territorial conquests in Africa.

Accuse Mussolini.

The French long have charged Mussolini with an ambition to take over the French colony of Tunisia in North Africa, and today a French official in Paris said France had reason to believe the "price" of a free hand for the Nazis in Austria was support of a projected Italian campaign in Africa.

[At the same time, French official quarters reported that Adolf Hitler has promised, in response to Anglo-French inquiries, to make a strong pledge of respect for Austrian independence and integrity in his Reichstag speech Sunday, the United Press reported. Hitler agreed, it was said, after informal approaches by the British and French ambassadors during the last 24 hours to reiterate Germany's peaceful intentions and calm the fears of western Europe's capitals that he is preparing to penetrate eastward.—Editor's note.]

Lord Halifax, lord president of the council, who conferred with Fuehrer Adolf Hitler last November, tried to staunch the vehement outbursts in the House of Lords. He said Europe was "not so dangerous as confused."

Meanwhile, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons:

"While I am not in a position to estimate the exact effect of this (Austro-German) agreement, his majesty's government are following developments with close attention and his majesty's ambassador to Berlin already has been instructed to indicate to the German government the interest which the government take and always have taken in the Austrian question."

French Concerned.

But in Paris, French officials expressed concern at the "lukewarm attitude" which they declared had suddenly developed in the British government in regard to aiding Austria.

They said Britain had indicated she wanted to keep her hands free for developments in the Mediterranean and the Far East.

Meanwhile a hundred members of the foreign affairs committee of the government met in the British House of Commons and pledged themselves to support the government if "a more positive attitude by this country in Europe" was called for.

Hitler and Vienna 'Key Man' Speed Austrian Nazification

exhausted by the strain of the last six days and was too tired to continue.—Editor's note.]

It was announced, simultaneously, that French Ambassador Andre Francois-Poncet visited Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and discussed "problems of interest to both nations," meaning, probably, France's demarche asking assurances that Hitler will maintain Austrian sovereignty.

Any armed opposition to the German coup, it was held, would have come Saturday night or Sunday after the surprise "reconciliation" conference of Chancellor Schuschnigg of Austria and Hitler at the latter's Berchtesgaden retreat when Der Fuehrer launched his demands for Nazi penetration into the Austrian Fatherland Front government.

Dr. Seyss-Inquart, arriving in Berlin, went at once into conference with Hitler, Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and Austrian Minister Stephan Tauschitz.

Sees Police Head.

Later he consulted with Heinrich Himmler, chief of the Nazi secret police and the S. S. and S. A. Storm Troopers.

His discussions with Himmler indicated one of the first steps of the "intense and rapid" Nazification would be inclusion of the now outlawed Austrian Nazi Storm Troops—said by Nazis to number 150,000—into the Fatherland Front that is the nucleus of the Austrian government.

Forcing the Nazi Storm Troopers into the Fatherland Front undoubtedly would lead to Nazi domination of the stronghold of anti-German sentiment in Austria.

[Enthusiastic Nazi spokesmen, following the Hitler-Seyss-Inquart talks, predicted a monetary union between Germany and Austria, the Associated Press reported.

[Another cabinet shakeup is imminent in Vienna, they said, with Seyss-Inquart emerging as vice chancellor.

[Hitler's first move, they asserted, would be to tackle the Austrian unemployment problem by vast public works centering about road building. A customs union was taken for granted. The monetary union they envisaged would synchronize banking currencies.

[Austria will be "another Danzig" before many weeks, the Nazi spokesmen predicted.—Editor's Note.]

Near Surrender.

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

Vienna, Feb. 17.—Austria tonight was on the verge of surrender to Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's demands for complete Nazi "pacification" of the government, after Great Britain and France refused aid against German encroachments.

Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg and the Fatherland Front struggled to prevent the ministries of finance and propaganda from being added to the five cabinet posts which Schuschnigg turned over to Nazis or Nazi sympathizers when he capitulated to Hitler's demands 48 hours ago.

Germany also was seeking to gain control of Austria's army by claiming the vacant post of minister of defense.

The Austrian Parliament will meet February 24 to hear Schuschnigg make a declaration concerning Austro-German relations, it was announced tonight.

There was deep gloom in Vienna tonight and general resignation to the eventual creation of a Nazi Austrian state, similar to German-dominated Danzig, under a "gleichshaltung" — co-ordination—of German and Austrian internal and foreign policies.

It appeared Austria was about to come under "cold Nazification," or subjection by administrative measures without an actual merger, and by a constant application of pressure by Hitler.

This "cold Nazification," it was believed in many quarters, might include the following steps:

Austrian withdrawal from the League of Nations under the urging of Germany and Italy, both of whom have quit Geneva.

An Autsro-German customs union.

Informed quarters understood Hitler was insisting upon removal of Victor Kienboeck, governor of the national bank of Austria and former finance minister.

Blamed for Break.

Failure of Austro-German trade negotiations, broken off suddenly Monday, was ascribed to Kienboeck's opposition to extending further credit facilities for Austro-German trade.

Germany bulwarked her demands by requesting, it was understood, the removal of Col. Walter Adam, former army officer, from the press and propaganda office because of his anti-German attitude.

There was growing evidence of unrest among leftist workers and certain sections of the peasantry.

One report said some desperate elements were arranging to organize a form of minute men to resist any attempt to force an open "anschluss"—Austro-German union—upon the country.

Anti-Italian feeling also increased with mutterings that "these Italians have again betrayed us."

League Withdrawal Seen.

Berlin, Feb. 17 (AP).—The quick visit of Austria's pro-Nazi minister of the interior to Rcichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler today has intensified the feeling that the changed relations between Austria and Germany are even more sweeping than have been indicated.

Reports, however, that Hitler was making new demands, such as Austrian withdrawal from the League of Nations and adherence to the anti-Communist pact, and that these demands had snagged the new alignment, brought only sarcastic laughter in foreign office circles.

It was not denied, nevertheless, that Austria's withdrawal from the League might be announced some time latter, perhaps when Hitler and Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria visit Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy this spring.

Europe's chancelleries were warned by the German press that the time had passed when other powers could presume to sit in judgment on agreements reached between German states.

Czech Nazi Chief Hurt.

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Feb. 17 (U.P.).—A leader of the Sudeten Czech Nazis was seriously injured today and 20 persons were arrested in a clash between the Nazis and their bitter enemies of the German Social Democratic Party.

THE PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD
SUMMARY OF ANNUAL REPORT FOR 1937

THE 91st Annual Report of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company covering operations for 1937 will be presented to the stockholders at the annual meeting on April 12, 1938. Total operating revenues increased over 1936 by $14,508,320 or 3.3%. Operating expenses increased $23,873,593 (due principally to higher wage scales, larger expenditures for maintenance, higher costs of materials and supplies and greater expenses incident to increased business). Net income was $97,278,638, as compared with $38,743,091 in 1936. Surplus was equal to 2.0% upon the outstanding Capital Stock as compared with 4.8% in 1936. Surplus per share (par $50) was $1.45 as compared with $2.38 in 1936.

OPERATING RESULTS	1937	Comparison with 1936 Increase or Decrease
Total Operating Revenues were	$455,933,309	I $14,508,320
Total Operating Expenses were	337,961,293	I 23,873,593
Leaving Net Revenue from Railway Operations of	117,972,016	D 9,365,273
Taxes amounted to	39,332,751	I 4,618,602
Hire of Equipment and Joint Facility Rents were	7,073,138	D 2,804,308
Leaving Net Railway Operating Income of	73,000,927	D 11,179,666
Income from Investments and other Sources amounted to	33,189,247	I 1,410,594
Making Gross Income of	106,190,174	D 9,739,072
Rental for Leased Lines, Interest on the Company's Debt and other Charges amounted to	83,284,736	I 1,723,482

Surplus (Equal to 2.9% on Capital Stock)	23,134,172	D 10,265,779

Dividends aggregating 2½% ($1.25 per share) were paid during the year and charged against 1937 income. Both gross and net income were adversely affected to the extent of about $15,000,000, as compared with 1936, by the elimination of the so-called emergency charges on freight traffic.

FINANCE

The net increase in total funded debt was $46,121,050 due to the issue of $53,670,700 Fifteen-year 3½% Convertible Debenture Bonds (used principally for electrification), and the issuance and sale of $7,740,000 Fifteen-year 2½% Equipment Trust Certificates on a 2.99% basis. Reductions in funded debt were made by payment at maturity of $9,130,000 Equipment Trust Certificates, $2,300,000 of Thirty-year 4% Serial Bonds, $3,000,000 Pennsylvania Company 3½% Guaranteed Trust Certificates. Other redemptions were made through operation of sinking funds.

ELECTRIFICATION

Rapid progress was made on extension of electrification of the Company's main line between Paoli and Harrisburg, Pa.; the freight route between South Amboy and Monmouth Junction, N. J.; the low grade freight line between Morrisville and Enola, Pa., and the freight route between Columbia, Pa., and Perryville, Md., and certain branches. The present program supplements and extends the electrification completed in 1935 between New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, and will bring to a consummation the Company's originally announced comprehensive plans for electrification of its principal lines on the eastern seaboard.

The section of line between Paoli and Harrisburg was opened for operation of passenger service on January 17, 1938, and will be ready for freight service in the near future, which will permit electric operation of passenger and freight service over the line between New York, Philadelphia, Washington, and Harrisburg.

This work has furnished direct employment to approximately 10,000 men and to a similar number in the industries furnishing the materials.

NEW AND IMPROVED EQUIPMENT

At a cost approximating $10,750,000 and affording over 5,000,000 man-hours of employment, orders were placed for building 11 new electric passenger locomotives and 2,800 new freight cars, including 1,000 automobile box cars, 1,700 mill type gondola cars, and 300 covered hopper cars. Of these, 1,000 box cars, 1,134 gondola cars, and 5 electric locomotives were placed in service during the year. Other new equipment included 360 covered hopper-bottom containers, 5 steel car floats, and 5 steel deck barges, and 6 steam passenger cars were converted into double unit electric motor and trailer cars. Air conditioning was installed in 65 additional coaches, 8 passenger baggage cars, 2 cafe cars and 30 dining cars.

BETTER SERVICE

Train schedules were further quickened, electrified service adding to the comfort and speed with which passengers are transported.

Freight service is operated almost entirely on regular schedules, furnishing speedy and dependable transportation and permitting shippers to carry lower inventories. Complete door-to-door collection and delivery service for less-than-car-load freight is now an established part of the Company's service, including a supplementary service whereby there is a cash on delivery arrangement at a slight extra charge.

PASSENGER AND FREIGHT RATES

On October 19, 1937, the Interstate Commerce Commission granted, with some exceptions, the petition of the carriers for certain revisions in freight rates which should yield the railroads of the country approximately $30,000,000 per annum.

This Company, with other railroads of the country, petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission on November 5, 1937, for authority to increase freight rates and charges 15 per cent, with certain exceptions, and also to increase their passenger fares in Eastern Territory from a basic rate of 2 cents a mile in coaches to 2½ cents.

GRADE CROSSINGS

Cost of grade crossing eliminations, which are so closely identified with highway transportation growth, continues to be a heavy burden upon the railroads. In the early days of grade crossing elimination by the railroads, the elimination of crossing danger was the controlling factor, but in the present era that is an incidental factor, as crossing eliminations for many years have been made primarily to expedite highway movement. Highways and superhighways are constructed with public funds and the same authority that is responsible for their building should be responsible for the grade crossing eliminations.

LEGISLATION

The necessity for a constructive national transportation policy including relief from costly, wasteful and unnecessary national and state legislation such as excess crew and train limit laws, continues to be one of the most important problems confronting the country. The railroads of the country earned on their investment in road and equipment—3.59% in 1936, 1.94% in 1935, 2.79% in 1934, 1.83% in 1933, 1.25% in 1932, 2.00% in 1931, 3.30% in 1930, and 4.84% in 1929, and 1937 will be lower than 1936.

STOCKHOLDERS

Capital Stock of the Company at the end of the year was owned by 215,629 holders, a decrease of 3,091 compared with December 31, 1936. The average number of shares owned was 62.

The Pennsylvania Railroad invites the active interest of its stockholders and bondholders in getting people to travel and ship via The Pennsylvania Railroad.

THATCHER COLT nabs the Mysterious Shadow!

1. "Hello, Mr. Colt? This is Thomas McElroy. Can you meet me for dinner tonight?—I need your help. For the past two weeks a mysterious young man has been shadowing me. Frankly, I'm worried for I'm sailing to London tomorrow night on a rather important business matter."

2. "Look, Colt, there he is now at the next table. Every time I go into a restaurant or bar, he follows me in."
"So that's your mysterious shadow, eh? Looks like a harmless chap, but I'll have my men pick him up and bring him in for questioning."

3. "Nothing sinister, Mr. Colt. A friend of Mr. McElroy's wanted to surprise him with a bon voyage assortment of his favorite liquors and I volunteered to find out what they are. Guess I've bungled it all around, for so far I've heard Mr. McElroy order only BLACK HAWK Rye."

4. "So this is the explanation of the mystery! Well, thanks for helping me, Mr. Colt—and now help yourself to a drink of BLACK HAWK! I had to turn detective myself to discover it, for good rye whiskey is hard to find, you know. Just taste it and see what a swell sleuth I am!"

U. S. Ship Costs Block Building, Kennedy Holds

Maritime

competed, he said, only two submitted "reasonable" bids. And there was considerable doubt, he added, as to whether these two companies—one in Philadelphia and the other in Tampa, Fla.—could qualify.

Kennedy said similar ships were being built in Belfast for about one-third of the average of the bids submitted to the Maritime Commission on February 1. These bids, he said, were even out of line with shipbuilding prices in this country during the hectic World War period.

"It is extremely difficult to explain this situation," Kennedy said. "All available indices seem to show that the cost of materials entering into ship construction are much lower today than they were during the period when the Hog Island vessels were built and that labor costs, even though higher on an hourly basis, are probably no more if overtime and other factors are taken into consideration. Even if wages today were double those of the war era, they still would not account for present prices, as only 30 to 40 per cent of the cost of a ship is spent in the yard."

Cannot Compete, He Says.

Asked by a reporter what he thought was wrong with American shipbuilders, Kennedy replied:

"I couldn't answer that while there are ladies in the room."

Looking at the problem from a cold-blooded business standpoint, Kennedy said that if American merchant ships were to cost what the larger shipbuilding companies are now asking, they simply couldn't compete with ships built more cheaply abroad. The original investment would be too great.

Under the 1936 Merchant Marine subsidy act, Uncle Sam pays the American ship operator up to 50 per cent of the domestic cost of building a ship to equalize cheaper costs abroad; that is to say, if a ship cost $2,000,000 to build in this country and only $1,000,000 abroad, the Government would chip in $1,000,000 as a construction subsidy to make up the difference.

But even this liberal policy couldn't stand up under the high bids recently submitted by the standard companies, Kennedy said.

"This is a serious situation," he told President Roosevelt. "It is obvious that, unless shipbuilding costs can be brought down far below those quoted by the larger yards, there will be no American merchant marine worthy of the name.

"Private industry simply cannot afford to build at these prices, even with Government assistance; few of the lines, moreover, could afford to operate such expensive tonnage."

Describing the situation "rather bluntly" to President Roosevelt, Kennedy said the Government can follow any one of these courses in the "present dilemma":

"One is to pay the prices asked by the larger yards. That, I believe, would be a mistake. A merchant marine built at such prices as those quoted on the C-2 vessel would collapse of its own weight.

"Another course would be to build in the navy yards. This probably will not prove to be practicable. The navy yards are organized for naval work and would find it uneconomical to work on merchant vessels, especially the smaller types. These yards, moreover, are needed for naval work.

Could Build Itself.

"A third course would be the rehabilitation of private facilities. It might even be necessary to establish new yards, although this would involve the danger of overexpansion.

"A fourth course would be to permit American operators to build abroad. The commission has already proposed that certain subsidized construction be given to foreign yards whenever American prices are more than twice those available abroad.

"The commission, as a last resort, could ask authority to build ships itself."

Alcatraz

labeled "Alcatraz" and the error was not discovered until after publication.—EDITOR'S NOTE.)

In a number of places it is stated that there is a rule of silence at Alcatraz. This likewise is absolutely false, as there is no such rule at Alcatraz or any other Federal prison. Naturally, we do not allow the prisoners to ramble or loiter about the buildings, and they are not permitted to talk while in line, on the cell tiers, in the mess hall, or shout from cell to cell. They may and do converse without restriction while in the recreation yard and during the rest periods, which occur twice a day in all of the shops. They may also carry on conversation while at work if it does not interfere with their duties.

The articles also state that certain underground dungeons are used for disciplining those who breach the regulations. It is true certain basement cells do exist at Alcatraz, but they have never been used since the prison has been under this department.

Breaches of discipline are punished by confinement in solitary in exactly the same manner as prevails in other penal institutions. Every inmate in solitary must, under the regulations of the department, be visited twice each day not only by our officers but by the medical director or his representative, who is a commissioned officer of the United States Public Health Service. A report on each case must be submitted to this office.

Ritchey a 'Trunk Switcher.'

I admit that Ritchey's long experience ought to make him fairly conversant with conditions prevailing at Alcatraz and several other institutions where he has served time, but his story is a wide departure from the facts.

Ritchey specialized in the "trunk switching" racket. His trip to Alcatraz began when he obtained possession of a trunk containing $20,000 worth of watches by cleverly switching the baggage checks on his own "dummy" trunk for those of the trunk containing the jewels. He is now wanted by officials of at least two States.

The conditions at Alcatraz are matters of record and are set forth in many authentic public statements concerning that institution and in official documents as well. As I stated in my last annual report:

"Alcatraz has continued to have a most salutary effect upon the discipline of our institutions. It forms an important link in our program to integrate and specialize our institutional system. Habitual criminals, desperate escape artists and unregenerate long-term prisoners are transferred to this institution."

"Out of an average of about 16,000 Federal prisoners it has been necessary to maintain but 300 in Alcatraz. Some few even of these may show such unmistakable evidences of improvement that they may be later transferred to some other Federal prison. But even men of the type sent to Alcatraz can be securely kept and society protected from their depredations for as long a period as the courts may think necessary without resorting to any semblance of barbarism, or infliction of torture.

"We believe that Warden James A. Johnston, of Alcatraz, has the intelligence, the experience, the ingenuity and the humanity to see that nothing but the sentences of the courts are being executed at that institution. We do not take the law into our own hands."

Steady Work Provided.

Alcatraz is an institution of maximum security and minimum privileges. The discipline is firm but fair. Sustaining food and adequate medical attention are available, the services of chaplains have been secured, and a well balanced library has been provided.

We have also made extraordinary efforts to provide steady work for those who are required to spend their days in this penitentiary. The administration, routine and discipline require no apologies. This institution forms an important link in the Federal Government's diversified penal system, which protects the public through individualizing the treatment of every Federal offender.

While Alcatraz is open to inspection and thorough examination by judges, public officials, members of Congress, and others who have a legitimate interest in our work, we do not believe that a morbid and sadistic interest in the approximately 300 prisoners at Alcatraz should be permitted to throw out of focus the rehabilitation work we are trying to do with the other 16,000 Federal prisoners.

Nor do we believe that the egocentric tendencies of the inmates of any of our penal institutions should continue to be aggrandized through feeding their desire that their criminal acts be exploited in the public press.

A complete statement of conditions existing at Alcatraz together with a set of the rules and regulations may be found in a speech delivered by the Hon. Wright Patman in the House of Representatives on April 1, 1936.

2 Escapes Confirmed In Bureau Account.

The Bureau of Prisons, still a bit chagrined and embarrassed by the escape of two convicts from Alcatraz Prison last year has confirmed in part the story of that escape as suggested by William Malcolm Richey, whose story of Alcatraz appeared in The Washington Post.

The bureau's story, as told by James V. Bennett, director, in his testimony before the House Appropriations Committee, was made public yesterday. That part of the testimony bearing on the escape, with questions put by Representatives Robert L. Bacon, of New York Thomas S. McMillan, of South Carolina, and Louis C. Rabaut, of Michigan, follows:

Mr. Bacon. You have recently had an escape from the island (Alcatraz), how did those two prisoners get off the island?

Mr. Bennett. At Alcatraz we have a building on the side of the island which is occupied as a mat shop, where rubber mats are manufactured. That shop is divided into two different rooms. The officer who is supervising those prisoners is required to go from one room to the other, and apparently, when he was out of the room where these men were working, they were able to obtain some sort of tool—we do not know just what—to saw one of the bars of the detention sash, preliminary to making this escape. Apparently that bar remained sawed for some time, and on December 16 there was a rather heavy fog about the island, and these inmates utilized that opportunity to break through this sash, crawl out of the window and got down on the rocky shores of the island. Somehow or other they managed to get through the protecting wire fence by means of a tool that they had, prying open the gate, and then went down to the water's edge. They came out of this window [indicated on photograph], dropped down inside of that protecting fence, went behind the building and down to the water's edge.

Mr. McMillan. And the condition of fog enabled them to do that without being seen, I assume.

Mr. Bennett. Yes, sir.

Mr. Rabaut. They could not, however, saw that sash at one time. That must have been going on for some time.

Mr. Bennett. We do not think they sawed it at that time, because the escape from the building was all accomplished within a period of 30 minutes, between 1 and 1:30 p. m.

Mr. Rabaut. That sash must must have been receiving a jab day after day, or something like that.

Mr. Bennett. Perhaps so.

We have on top of this building a guard tower, but on account of the fog that day, the guard was unable to perceive these men as they dropped down. He could not see, according to the data we have, beyond the edge of the water line.

These men are off the island, but practically everyone who has any knowledge of the affair believes that they did not succeed in gaining their freedom.

Mr. Rabaut. The only way they could have gained their freedom would have been to have some accomplice who had a boat somewhere out in the fog.

Mr. Bennett. I do not believe it would have been humanly possible at that time to swim to the mainland without assistance, and according to my information the tides were so fast that day it is doubtful that anything but a power boat could have approached the island.

Mr. McMillan. There was a raft, apparently, that showed up in the bay a few days later, according to the newspaper accounts. Have you been able to connect that raft with anyone from the outside?

Mr. Bennett. No, sir. We have had a number of rumors of that kind, and we have checked every rumor. We have had the very able assistance of the San Francisco police and the California State police. The Coast Guard were most helpful during this emergency, and the Federal Bureau of Investigation has co-operated with us all through. They have thoroughly investigated the escape, and they are now looking for any trace of these men. Mr. Hoover and his bureau have been most helpful in this as in other cases involving our service.

Mr. Rabaut. What about this raft?

Mr. Bennett. Nothing has been found in regard to this particular raft, nor have any of the other numerous rumors which we have had produced results.

Mr. Rabaut. Has the raft been found?

Mr. Bennett. I do not know about this particular one but there were a number of rafts which were called to our attention which might possibly have been used for this purpose.

Mr. McMillan. But there is no proof of any connection with the escape?

Mr. Bennett. No, sir. As a matter of fact, every boat we have checked indicated that they could not possibly have been used for this purpose.

Mr. Rabaut. The lumber did not come from Alcatraz?

Mr. Bennett. No, sir.

Mr. McMillan. While you are telling us about the escape of these two prisoners from Alcatraz, I will ask you this: What was the total number of escapes from all of the institutions last year?

Mr. Bennett. Last year, Mr. Chairman, the total number of escapes was 19, and we apprehended 18 of those sometime during the fiscal year, most of them with our own men. All of those escapes took place at our so-called minimum security institutions—at the prison camps and reformatories.

Mr. Bacon. There is one still at large, then?

Mr. Bennett. There is one still at large; yes, sir.

Mr. McMillan. That number does not include the two from Alcatraz?

Mr. Bennett. No, sir. These figures are for last fiscal year.

2 Public Enemies Seized in Poland, F.B.I. Chief Hears

By the Associated Press.

J. Edgar Hoover cabled the Warsaw, Poland, police chief yesterday asking whether Jacob Shapiro and Louis Buchalter, New York labor racketeers, had been arrested there.

Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, had unofficial advices that Polish police had jailed the two Federal fugitives on a kidnap charge. Shapiro and Buchalter were said to have attempted the abduction of a wealthy Polish citizen's fiancee.

Shapiro was convicted in Federal court at New York on November 8, 1936, for violating Federal anti-trust laws, but jumped $10,000 bond and failed to surrender when the conviction was upheld by an appellate court.

Buchalter is wanted in New York for failing to appear for trial on a similar charge.

Attorney General Cummings posted a $2,500 reward for each of the two men.

Wallace Praises Crop Control Law

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace said yesterday the new crop control law was "a new charter of economic freedom" for the American farmer.

At the same time, he told a nation-wide radio audience, it provides consumers with "legal protection for the first time against scarcity."

Wallace, replying to critics of the farm law which President Roosevelt signed Wednesday, denied it would establish a "dictatorship" of agriculture, or "regiment" farmers.

Modifications End Deadlock On Family Tax

Taxes

been holding out against the penalty, while 12 have been for it. With seven Republican votes in the full committee, opponents had hoped to defeat it 13 to 12.

At least one of the six former Democratic opponents is known to have agreed to go along with the tax after the last modification. This switch alone would reverse the full committee vote to 13 to 12 for the modified penalty. With full committee approval thus certain, in the end it may be a straight party ballot.

The Democratic vote for the modifying amendment was unanimous, opposition members regarding it, they said, as an "improvement." They made clear this did not mean their indorsement of the penalty as modified.

The full Ways and Means Committee meeting called for this morning by Chairman Robert L. Doughton will be the first session since conclusion of public hearings, to which Republican members have been invited. Basic work on the bill draft has been done by the Democrats.

The proposed penalty tax on closely held corporations is only one feature of a revenue bill broadly revising the tax structure and designed mainly to remedy inequities in the undivided profits tax and to smooth out some of the sharpness in the present tax on capital gains. These two levies have met the virtually unanimous criticism of business men, who claim they have accelerated the effect of the recession.

Seek to Release Credit.

The tax sub-committee headed by Representative Fred Vinson (Democrat), of Kentucky, refused to repeal the undivided profits tax entirely. It exempted companies earning less than $25,000, but left the principle still in effect on a modified 16 to 20 per cent scale of rates on earnings of wealthier companies. Substantial modification was ordered in the capital gains tax in an effort to release frozen credit.

In announcing changes made in the tax on "closely held" companies, Representative Vinson last night declined for the time being to disclose other alterations in the general provisions of the bill.

The increase to $75,000 in the exemption on "closely held" or so-called "third basket" companies was ordered in addition to other modifications recently made in an effort to get committee agreement.

Companies affected would be permitted to deduct from their tax base $60,000, or 30 per cent of their adjusted net income, or money used or set aside to pay debts incurred prior to January 1, 1938, whichever deduction was greater.

Companies hit by the levy would have to pay a special 20 per cent surtax, in addition to the so-called "normal" undivided profits tax applied to corporations not closely held.

Special aid is provided for "third basket" companies incurring deficits, to relieve them from the penalty tax until enough money (which would have been taxable) has been accumulated to make up the deficit.

Capital Losses Considered.

Capital losses would be taken into account in arriving at the penalty tax base, Vinson explained. Where companies incur capital losses, they could retain money, free from the surtax, to replace the loss.

Other provisions that Vinson said made the tax less severe would:

Permit carry-over of operating losses until the following year to be used in reducing the surtax base.

Authorize exemptions for dividend distribution. For example, a $100,000 corporation would be exempt from the surtax if it paid out 20 per cent of earnings in dividends. But where 30 per cent of the adjusted net income was greater than $60,000, companies would be exempted only if they paid out more than 57.6 per cent of earnings in dividends.

Companies coming out of receivership or bankruptcy would be exempted from the penalty tax for two years.

Personal holding companies and "closely held" corporations would be allowed two and one-half months after the end of a taxable year in which to declare additional dividends up to 10 per cent of those paid out in the taxable year. This could be used as a dividend credit to lighten the surtax.

Allow closely held companies 60 days in which to pay dividends to meet deficiency tax assessments against them by the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Although these modifications serve in some cases to lighten the proposed penalty, several Democratic opponents declared themselves against the "principle" of the special session, and continued to seek added exemptions for plant expansion and curtailment of the 20 per cent penalty rate.

Representative Arthur P. Lamneck (Democrat), Ohio, one of the leading opponents, will make a radio speech Monday night assailing the levy. Lamneck contends the tax, although designed to prevent individual tax avoidance, fails to distinguish between companies using the corporate form for that purpose. He complains it discriminates between companies doing precisely the same business, where one of the two is "closely held."

Earlier yesterday, Ways and Means Committee Democrats agreed to repeal an excise tax on matches.

An experiment in decentralizing tax dispute negotiations meantime was inaugurated at Los Angeles by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. Southern California and Arizona taxpayers after March 1 may protest against tax assessments at the Los Angeles office, and get a hearing and possible settlement there, instead of carrying their cases to Washington.

Power for FTC To Control Pay, Hours Is Urged

inating much of the language of the old bill, but embracing essentially the same major features.

Mrs. Norton disclosed her intention to the committee yesterday, and expects a completed draft of the bill before the week-end. Her bill, like the old one, would prescribe wages up to 40 cents an hour and a work-week as low as 40 hours, to be administered by a single official with the advice of a board of nine. It would eliminate exemptions carried in the old bill, leaving them to the administrator.

Ramspeck's proposal, on the other hand, would abandon this approach to the problem entirely. His plan would empower the Federal Trade Commission to issue cease and desist orders when it found one firm "unfairly" competing with another through lowered wage scales and long working hours.

He submitted his plan as an 88-word amendment to the Federal Trade Commission act of 1914.

Text of Plan Is Brief.

The brief text of it follows:

"The employment of workers at at wages substantially below the the prevailing minimum wages paid to persons employed on similar work or the employment of workers for a work-week longer than that prevailing for persons employed on similar work, when the payment of such wages or the found by the commission to proutilization of such work-weeks is found by the commission to provide the employer with an advantage over competitors, or to result in substantial injury to competitors in commerce, shall be an unfair method of competition within the meaning of Section 5."

Ramspeck said he is pressing for immediate action on this plan, but believes it will be increasingly discussed along with similar methods when members realize the virtual impossibility of passing the original bill.

finite deadlock," said the Georgia "We have reached a pretty de-Representative. The situation is this. We had a wage-hour bill up here last session. We were unable to get a rule for it. It was brought to the House by petition, and finally was sent back to committee.

Position Unchanged.

"I am convinced the Rules Committee has not changed its position. If anything, it is more set than ever against the former bill. Mrs. Norton has indicated that no petition will be offered to discharge the committee, and I doubt that one could be signed up if it was offered.

"If we are to have action this session, it is necessary to make an entirely different approach with a compromise, and I have framed my amendment with that in view."

While the Ramspeck compromise would not attain one Administration objective—general raising of wages — the Georgian expressed doubt that the original bill would have accomplished that end, even with the "40-40" wage-hour standards included.

Whereas the old bill laid stress on the low-paid groups, Ramspeck said his plan would be equally effective with low and higher paid working classes, "by protecting the man making 70 cents an hour as well as the man making 40."

"It would prevent a man from profiteering at the expense of his employes," he said. "It would prevent this by stopping one firm from cutting wages and lengthening hours to obtain an advantage over his competitor. It is this sort of 'chiseling' that businessmen themselves have mostly complained of."

Lost Boy, 12, Dies 100 Feet From Aid; Sister, 8, Is Saved

Pittsburg, Kans., Feb. 17 (AP).—Searchers found 12-year-old Bert Lee Walker dead of exposure yesterday—only 100 feet from two brightly lighted mines where he could have found a haven for himself and his 8-year-old sister, Vivian May.

Bert Lee and Vivian May became lost on a bicycle ride Saturday night.

Rescuers found Vivian May, on the verge of pneumonia, in a field 15 miles from home late Monday. Returned to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Walker, she incoherently told of vainly having sought directions at two farm houses.

Finally, Bert Lee had told Vivian to remain in the field alone—"and don't be scared of the dark"—while he sought help.

That was the last anyone saw of Bert Lee until his body was discovered, face down, in several inches of water in a drainage ditch.

Pete, Sen. Bone's Pet Dog, Is Hero In Apartment Fire

Pete, pet cocker spaniel of Senator Homer T. Bone (Democrat), of Washington, and Mrs. Boone saved his owners' apartment at the Mayflower Hotel from possible destruction by fire yesterday.

When curtains in the apartment caught fire at 6 p. m. from defective radio wiring, Pete's barking aroused residents. Unable to enter the apartment, they summoned fire apparatus.

Firemen threw up ladders to the second floor apartment and extinguished the blaze. Damage, estimated at about $200, was confined to burned curtains and blackened ceilings.

550 War Veterans Sign in Idle Census

More than 550 war veterans had registered as totally or partially unemployed yesterday in the census being taken by the Veterans of Foreign Wars at 1624 H street northwest.

Next week the applications will be classified and business firms employing more than five employes will be circularized to see if they have jobs for the veterans who average about 45 years, a difficult age to find re-employment.

Past Department Commander Daniel E. Campbell, chairman of the national employment committee, will give a radio speech at 7:30 a. m. today on employment for men over 40 years of age. Past Department Commander Oscar W. Hollingworth is in charge of the census.

Roosevelt Talk Slated to Stop Falling Prices

Prices

stood to have the twofold objective, first of setting in motion a psychological forces to raise prices unduly low and out of line and, secondly, of clearing up the confusion which exists generally over the Administration's price policies. Mr. Roosevelt is expected to make a differentiation between various classes of prices, some of which he regards as too high and others as too low.

In recent weeks Administration economists in talking prices have distinguished between what they call "controlled prices" and "competitive prices." The latter prices are held to be low while some of the so-called "controlled prices" are regarded as even now too high, such as certain building material commodities. It is contended that "competitive prices" have been very responsive to fluctuations in supply and demand, while "controlled prices" remain comparatively unaffected by such economic forces.

Two Types of Prices.

The point which the President is expected to make is that there are two different types of prices—"rigid prices" and "free prices"—and while the latter have fallen sharply, the former show only comparatively negligible declines. If all prices moved evenly upward or downward there would be no problem, it is contended, because then what the producer loses when selling he makes up when buying.

The "rigid" or "controlled prices" are said to be found chiefly in finished manufactured commodities, although some raw materials are placed in this class. At the other end of the graph are farm commodities which are in the "competitive price" class.

The situation is illustrated by Administration economists by reference to the decline between the high monthly average last year and the level for the week ending last Saturday. Thu the Bureau of Labor Statistics index figure, based on the 1926 average as 100, for the composite average wholesale price for farm products dropped from 94.1 last March to 70.1 last week, or a decline of 24 points. The index figure for raw materials, including agricultural commodities, dropped from 90.1 last March to 73.4 for last week, a decline of 16.7 points. The semi-manufactures price index figure fell from 89.6 last March to 76.2 last week, or a decline of 13.4 points.

Decline Since March.

In each of these three classifications—farm products, raw material, and semi-manufactured commodities—the high for the average monthly price was reached last March and has declined since that time. But in the case of finished products the index figure did not reach its peak until September at 89.1. Since that time it has fallen to 83.3, a decline of only 5.8 points. The average wholesale price index figure for finished products last week was only 3.1 points less than it was last March. In other words, whereas the average price of farm products has dropped 25.5 per cent since last March and raw material prices have dropped 18.5 per cent, the prices for finished products in the same period have declined but 3.7 per cent.

Just how Mr. Roosevelt proposes to correct the maladjustment in the price situation has not been revealed. It was definitely stated in one quarter that no further monetary or credit expansion moves are contemplated at this time—but the emphasis was on the phrase "at this time." This was taken to rule out, at least for a week or two, any further release of yellow metal from the Treasury's sterilized gold fund, any change in deposit reserve requirements or any further devaluation of the dollar. Nor is serious consideration being given "at this time" to increasing government spending, it was asserted.

Rumors Are Denied.

In recent days there have been many rumors to the effect that further devaluation of the dollar was being contemplated. Apparently these rumors have played a part in advancing the price of gold at London and strengthening the pound against the dollar. But at the Treasury the rumors privately are denied as without foundation.

Asked about such rumors, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau yesterday said they were not serious enough to talk about. He was asked whether the Administration had any further monetary moves in mind.

"I prefer not to answer that question," the Secretary replied, but added his reply should not be construed as a confirmation that such moves were being considered.

The only information given to the press regarding the report on the price situation which the Government economists and statisticians carried to the White House came from Secretary Morgenthau. He said the study of the price situation had been completed. He confirmed the understanding that the report contained no recommendations or proposals, but consisted entirely of a factual analysis of the situation.

Those at Conference.

The conference at which this report was laid before the President and which discussed the price situation included the following.

Secretary Morgenthau, accompanied by his assistant, Herbert E. Gaston; Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Dr. George C. Haas, Treasury director of research and statistics; Dr. Harry L. White, assistant Treasury director of research and statistics, and Edmund M. Daggitt, principal economic analyst of the Treasury.

Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, accompanied by Dr. E. A. Goldenweiser, Federal Reserve director of research and statistics, and Dr. Laughlin Currie, assistant director of research and statistics for the Federal Reserve system.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, accompanied by his economic adviser, Dr. Mordecai Ezekiel, and Dr. Albert G. Black, chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Isador Lubin, Commissioner of Labor Statistics, accompanied by A. F. Hinrichs, chief economist to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

None of these conferees would discuss their report or what transpired in the session with the President. Lubin and Gaston remained at the White House, after the others left, conferring with Stephen T. Early, secretary to the President in charge of relations with the press. It was assumed they discussed with Early the details of making public their findings today. Gaston is the press liaison man for the Treasury.

Lubin yesterday made public the regular weekly report of the Bureau of Labor Statistics on wholesale prices for the week ended last Saturday. This showed a decrease from 80.1 to 79.6, or six-tenths of 1 per cent in the bureau's wholesale price index figure, which is based on 100 for the 1926 average.

Relief Refused To 1,161; Low Funds Blamed

Relief

care (mothers' pensions), old-age assistance and aid for the needy blind were handled in January. Of these, 6,935 received relief or grants-in-aid.

During the month, 328 cases were closed, leaving 7,562 on January 31, including 6,940 which had been approved for relief or grant and 622 others which were receiving services only, or were held pending the completion of investigation.

The 6,935 cases which received relief or grants during January included 14,641 persons. The total payments were $208,545.70 and the average monthly payment was $30.07.

Many persons on relief need only a "helping hand to tide them over a particularly difficult situation."

The report shows that 224 previously active cases were closed by the Public Assistance Division during January. Of these, 85 had been temporarily unemployable, but became employable. In 42 cases, sufficient resources became available, including 15 in which employable persons in aid for dependent children families secured work, 15 who left the city or moved, leaving no address; 11 who went to live with employed relatives, and one who received a legacy.

Miss Hill cited a case where a "helping hand" had been extended by the Public Assistance Division. It follows:

"Mr. and Mrs. F. separated after he lost his WPA job. For almost a year Mrs. F. meagerly supported herself and her children by housework. Finally, however, she became seriously ill and was forced to apply for relief.

"In the meantime she had brought legal action against her husband for non-support. Workers in the Public Assistance Division investigated the situation and found that he was in poor health, living a hand-to-mouth existence, and unable to get work.

"Mrs. F. was carried on a small relief allowance for a short time while the case worker arranged with relatives of Mr. F. to care for him until he recovered sufficiently to accept work. After he recovered he was given WPA employment at $48 per month.

"The couple effected an immediate reconciliation. Mrs. F. drooped the legal action against her husband, and relief was discontinued."

On Embarrassing Santa Claus.

No one, it has been observed, shoots Santa Claus. No one, it might be further stated, even embarrasses Santa Claus if it can be avoided. Thus, in Washington, automobiles bearing Congressional tags are rarely ticketed for traffic violations. For Congressional tags indicate owners who, by their votes, control every penny the local government spends.

Fortunately, only a handful of Congressmen take advantage of this unnatural immunity. The great majority of members are too deeply impressed with the double responsibilities imposed by public office to stoop to such petty business—though it is not so certain that all their secretaries and families have the same high integrity. The overwhelming sentiment of the House must have been indicated by Representative Rich yesterday when, in commenting on The Post's photographs of Congressional cars parked in "No Parking" areas, he asked: "If we don't respect the law, how can we expect others to?"

The telling question goes beyond traffic regulations. Disrespect for minor law leads insidiously to contempt for all law. This is not to say that the few Congressmen who ignore District traffic rules will break more important laws tomorrow. But it is reasonable to believe that their example is encouraging others to commence the minor infractions with which criminal careers begin.

Only one reasonable attitude can be taken toward this sort of conduct on the part of a relatively few officials who seem to think they have special privileges in the Nation's Capital. The law should be enforced without favor. It may be said that such a policy would create an extremely difficult problem for officials who must go to Congress for all appropriations to operate the local government. But that does not minimize the responsibility of the police to enforce the law impartially.

What it does emphasize is the urgency of granting the District a local government that will be able to cope with lawlessness in all forms, without fear on the part of officials that some Congressman may be able to punish them for doing their duty.

The Dispute Over Mediation.

On the eve of resigning his position as chairman of the Maritime Commission to become Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, Joseph P. Kennedy has made a vigorous plea for extension of the authority of the National Mediation Board to prevent strikes and lockouts in the shipping industry. In so doing, he sharply criticized Secretary of Labor Perkins for arguing that the industry is not "ripe" for such legislation. In that case, Mr. Kennedy says tartly, it is "overripe for ruin."

There can be no doubt in the mind of any informed person as to the gravity of the situation created by perpetual labor disturbances which tie up merchant vessels with resultant severe losses, not only to shipowners and maritime labor, but also to producers, consumers and workers throughout the country. Differences of opinion are confined to methods of dealing with the problem at present.

Secretary Perkins explained her position at length in testifying recently before the Senate Commerce Committee. Apart from objections to the proposed division of responsibility in dealing with maritime labor problems under the Copeland bill, she maintains that it might even be disastrous to apply to the shipping industry methods which have been successfully followed in case of the railways.

Maritime labor, she claims, is not sufficiently well organized and employers are not yet convinced that collective bargaining is a good policy. The railway labor act functions effectively, in her opinion, because the carriers are willing to deal with the unions and because the unions are powerful and well disciplined. Moreover, the railway labor act is the outcome of the co-operative efforts of the roads and the railway unions. Whereas they have the kind of mediation machinery they want, the system would have to be imposed upon maritime labor over the bitter opposition of certain union leaders.

For the reasons thus stated, it is quite likely that a Federal mediation board would be less able to prevent strikes and lockouts in the shipping industry than in the case of the railroads. However, the possibility that a needed reform may fail certainly does not justify delaying action in a pressing emergency. And, as Mr. Kennedy insists, there is now an emergency calling for immediate and positive action. "Neither collective agreements nor mediation machinery," he explains, "will eliminate . . . disputes. But the function of the system of mediation which has been suggested is to facilitate and to expedite the process of obtaining these collective agreements and the settlement of disputes as they arise."

To defer action until the maritime unions have reached a stage of development that would put them on a par with the rail unions would be to risk the ruin that Mr. Kennedy fears. Secretary Perkins' recommendation that "present promising developments" should be permitted to work themselves out with the conciliation service of the Department of Labor standing by to assist the settlement of disputes shows an optimistic blindness to certain unpleasant facts.

For instance, Mr. Kennedy calls attention to the 451 labor tieups occurring during a 10 months' period last year, causing a loss of nearly 1,000,000 man-hours of work to seamen alone. The Government would scarcely be justified in subsidizing the American merchant marine if its chances of survival are jeopardized by an indefinite continuance of such disorders.

Still A Constitutional Test.

President Roosevelt has properly linked the farm bill which he signed on Wednesday with the original AAA. The "Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938" is clearly an outgrowth of the earlier experiment in Federal control of farming. The President is also right in regarding the new law as a long step in advance of the first adjustment program, if a policy of collectivized farming is the intent.

From this viewpoint one of the foremost weaknesses of the first AAA was its leniency in dealing with non-cooperators. They were simply denied Federal benefits. Congress soon recognized that more drastic measures would be essential to keep independent farmers from wrecking the program. So it began passing compulsory measures to force the "chiselers" into line. This principle has been generally applied to basic crops in the new act. Perhaps that is why the President says the 1938 farm bill "represents the winning of one more battle for an underlying farm policy that will endure."

In tracing the evolution of his farm policy, however, the President completely ignores the fact that the relatively mild adjustment act of 1933 was found to be unconstitutional. He speaks as if the Administration's efforts to control agriculture had never been interrupted—as if, through a process of gradual improvement, the policy of the AAA had been established without challenge.

That confident note is probably addressed to the Supreme Court. Mr. Roosevelt seems to take it for granted that the legislative monstrosity which he has just signed will be found in accord with the basic law. Despite the fact that his plan to enlarge the court by six justices of his own choosing was emphatically defeated, he assumes that the court will reverse its opinion when a far more questionable statute than the original AAA is put to the test of constitutionality.

Since the Hoosac Mills case was decided two of the six justices who considered the AAA unconstitutional have been succeeded by Roosevelt appointees. That might seem to reconstitute the former minority of three into a majority of five. But such an assumption disregards the fact that none of the present justices has rendered an opinion upholding Federal control of agriculture by coercive methods.

In the case which destroyed the AAA the majority concluded that its program was an unconstitutional invasion of rights that had been reserved to the States or the people. The minority regarded it as a legitimate use of conditional gifts of money. In his minority opinion Justice Stone drew a careful distinction between the first AAA and the "coercive provisions" of the Bankhead cotton control act. It is clear from the following language of the dissenting opinion that Justices Stone, Brandeis and Cardozo upheld the measure at least in part because they believed it was not compulsory:

> The power to tax and spend is not without constitutional restraints. One restriction is that the purpose must be truly national. Another is that it may not be used to coerce action left to State control.

The present act is disguised as an exercise of the power of Congress over interstate commerce. But its coercive regulation of individual farms is not open to question. Farmers refusing to abide by quotas fixed by the Secretary of Agriculture and approved by a two-thirds majority of the growers concerned would not only be denied conservation and price adjustment payments under the act; they would also be penalized by drastic penalties on the sale of their basic crops. As Justice Stone said in his dissenting opinion: "Threat of loss, not hope of gain, is the essence of economic coercion."

Viewed against this background, the President's statement seems to imply that the Supreme Court has been whipped into submission and that no thought need be given to the constitutionality of the present act. That is a challenge which no institution with the Supreme Court's historic record for independent judgment is likely to ignore.

Outpost Of Democracy.

Resembling in outline nothing so much as a tadpole, Czechoslovakia stretches its wriggling length across the map of central Europe. From east to west this racially composite republic covers almost 13 degrees of longitude. Its greatest width from north to south is just over 1 degree of latitude. Considerations of defense were not, and could not have been, uppermost when this long and narrow sliver of land was made an independent nation 19 years ago.

From west to east the population of this curiously shaped country changes pronouncedly in character. In Bohemia the people are predominantly of German blood. In Prague and neighboring territory they are mostly Czech. Then come districts which are, successively, primarily Slovak, Magyar and Ruthenian. Two or three other minorities can be identified, but not isolated, in this land where political boundaries could never be made to conform to racial lines.

The political composition of Czechoslovakia is as interesting as its territorial and racial characteristics. Lying as an isolated island of democracy amid a sea of totalitarian states, it is the only nation of central Europe which still preserves, and swears by, parliamentary institutions. It is the only nation in this area with any real freedom of speech, press, assembly and worship. Germany, Austria, Hungary, Rumania and Poland border its wandering, indented frontier. This one democracy is girdled by five more or less avowed dictatorships.

The strength of this democracy is now to be tested. The stability of the foundations laid by its two great statesmen—Masaryk and Benes—is to be put to the proof. For the strains on Czechoslovakia are greatly intensified by the current subordination of Austria to Hitler's will. And whether or not this young but sturdy republic can survive these strains is of far more than academic interest to every people which puts its faith in the careful processes of democracy.

Throughout the world dictatorships are in the ascendant. They have learned, as the democracies have not, that strength lies in co-operation. They have learned to be patient, as well as determined, in working for long-range objectives. They have learned that the democracies are always likely to play into their hands by squabbling over details, by indulging in petty recriminations, by assiduously refusing to consider their major interests until it is too late.

It will be of vital importance, as Czechoslovakia faces her clouded future, to see what help, if any, she may count upon from the countries on whose institutions her own are modeled. It will be important, specifically, to see whether our pending trade agreement with the Prague government will be in any way helped toward completion by recent developments in central Europe.

That trade agreement, with its aim of assisting Czechoslovakia to solve her serious economic problems with benefit to ourselves, is a more important element in the current picture than many realize. For there is no doubt that a failure to reach the proposed accord, now subject to strong criticism by certain immediately affected American interests, would be regarded with the utmost satisfaction in Berlin.

For As Long As It Serves.

Unlike the Reichswehr, which seemingly is still undergoing a process of Nazification, the Schuts Staffel, being Hitler's Praetorian Guard, is thoroughly Nazi in spirit and membership. The point of view of the S. S. leaders, therefore, must be regarded as reflecting either the actual or the prospective view of the government itself.

It is thus of no small significance that the Schwarze Korps, official organ of the S. S., chooses this moment to come out with a strong blast against the concordat negotiated with the Vatican a short time after Hitler came into power in 1933.

By that agreement the Third Reich agreed to respect the long-standing rights and interests of the Roman Catholic Church in the matter of education, youth organizations, liberty for the monastic orders, the Catholic press, Catholic Action groups and so on. Since then, as all the world knows, Hitler has honored this agreement more in the breach than in the observance. The Schwarze Korps now proposes to go further. It suggests that the time has come to scrap the concordat altogether.

This is interesting and important. But even more interesting and important are the reasons advanced in support of this thesis. In substance it is argued by the S. S. mouthpiece that while the concordat might have been useful to the Third Reich in the past it is so no longer, since the observance of the agreement conflicts with the principle of totalitarianism. It is thus stated:

> "In the National Socialist Society there is no such thing as personal liberty above or independent of the state that should be respected by the state on the basis of any international treaty."

In other words, there is no place in the Third Reich for any such principle as the sanctity of treaties. The state is superior to any obligations it may voluntarily have entered into and has the right to ignore them whenever this is deemed necessary.

The cynicism of this attitude should be considered with some care by those Catholics who believe that the triumph of Gen. Franco, with Nazi assistance, would be likely to aid the cause of the church in Spain.

"Spurious Democracy."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to thank you for publishing in The Post of February 14 the article "Spurious Democracy," by Dr. Richard Heath Dabney, of the University of Virginia.

In my opinion, Dr. Dabney has correctly stated the chief fault with our American system of education. He speaks as a college professor; I, who have been teaching at Eastern High School, of this city, for the last 18 years, can speak as a high school teacher.

We do, indeed, sacrifice the most intellectually intelligent of our youth in an attempt to overeducate those of a lower intellectual ability. We give identical diplomas to the boy who is brilliant and to the one who has taken twice as long to acquire painfully less than half as much information which will be of no earthly use to him in the life which he will lead after graduation from high school.

The first boy might have been better prepared for his college training in law; the second might have, in a different way, been more appropriately trained for a carpenter's job. The lawyer and the carpenter follow two equally honorable occupations. There is opportunity for success in both. But the training for the two vocations during high school should be different. A differentiation in curricula and diplomas is what is needed. This is the problem. The solution is more difficult.

Unfortunately, our high school courses are planned either by college professors of pedagogy who have never taught high school boys and girls or by administrative officers who have not come into direct contact with our young people for so long that their conception of youth is blurred.

So all the poor teacher, who knows from daily experience both the problem and its solution, can do is to thank a newspaper when it prints such an article as yours did the other day.

OLIVIA TAYLOR.
Washington, Feb. 15.

From A West Virginian.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When the United Mine Workers' organization at its recent convention in Washington went out of its way to attack the junior Senator from West Virginia it but showed the true character of the element that now dominates that body and seeks to extend its control over all organized labor.

If Senator Holt shares the opinion that is held by thousands of West Virginians and by millions of Americans elsewhere (including many of his colleagues on Capitol Hill) in regard to those forces now disrupting the labor organizations and does not fear or hesitate to speak his mind, he will do labor a service and will be praised for it by real friends of decency and orderly government everywhere.

To be berated by the same tongue that would vilify the organization of America's wives, mothers and daughters, devoted to the upholding of our noblest ideals and the preservation of our most cherished traditions, could not reflect discredit on any man.

Senator Holt is no "yes man," no rubber stamp, no "pussyfooter." If he were, he would better please the kind that now oppose him.

J. B. MERRITT.
Great Cacapon, W. Va., Feb. 12.

Fear Wartime Fascism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Washington labor peace committee representing 30 local trade-unions and over 3,000 trades-unionists in the District of Columbia has gone on record as unanimously and unequivocally opposing the passage of H. R. 6704, known as the Sheppard-Hill bill, H. R. 9381, known as the May bill, or any bills with similar intent.

Our body feels that the industrial mobilization provisions of the above bills giving the President of the United States control, in wartime, over prices, resources, wages, trade-union organization and activity, the press, radio and licensing of public services, mean the establishment of a Fascist dictatorship in time of war. Such control by the Executive constitutes the removal of all the traditional civil and political liberties of the American people.

Furthermore, the bills completely fail to accomplish what they claim to be one of their chief aims, the elimination of profiteering during wartime. It is clear to us that this avowed purpose is merely a blind to cover the real intent of the proposed legislation.

We feel that these bills must be defeated if democratic principles are to survive in the United States.

FLORENCE BARNES,
Chairman.

Unwanted Hyphens.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I believe heartily in full naval defense for this country, but cannot see the point of raising it to staggering figures on account of the Monroe Doctrine. Of course, none of us like to see Nazi or Fascist influence get so strong a hold in South America. But why should we become so exercised about these influences in South America and contemplate with serenity the large number of armed Nazi camps in our own country? The President has not presented any program concerning this very near danger. Apparently he is not disturbed by it. We wish he would be.

I am sure I voice the feeling of very many millions of Americans when I say that every person in the country—Nazi, Communist, Fascist, or of any nationality whatsoever—whose allegiance is even divided, should return to the government to which he subscribes. We don't want any hyphens. We expect everyone to take the full oath of allegiance or depart. And certainly our citizenship does not hyphenate very well with the erratic governments under Hitler or Mussolini.

Fast Driving.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The editorial of February 14, "35,000 Dead in 1937" is much to the point in these days of wild and reckless drivers as they cross intersections at 30, 40 and 50 miles per hour in city and country.

One sentence, however, I hold up to question and comment: "Only a divided roadway at the point of the recent fatal collision on the Lee highway would have helped." Consider that accident. Two cars were rushing along at a speed of over 50 miles an hour through an intersection with ice and sleet on the pavement.

At a recent meeting of the Engineering Research Council the question of 60, 70 and 80 mile speeds on superhighways came into the discussion. One engineer said, "Very few drivers can, with safety to all others whom he meets, maintain such speeds on the open highway." No one disputed him.

I am sure the enforcement of our 22-mile speed limit law would reduce accidents both to cars and pedestrians at least 33 per cent. This has been proved last year in Minneapolis. The 20-mile law has been enforced without fear or favor, 30 miles in the outlying districts. The result: a reduction of 25 street fatalities in 12 months, so their fatality record for 12 months per 100,000 is 50 or 60 per cent of that of Washington.

Borrow A G-Man?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the matter of the Capital's crime, I suggest that J. Edgar Hoover, with the consent of course, of the Commissioners, be requested to detail one of his best men to take charge of the city's law-enforcement machinery. This, I believe, would clean up the mess in Washington with the utmost efficiency and dispatch.

Bombing Of Caceres.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If I may offer an analysis of the criticism raised by Mr. Pedro Villa Fernandez, in your column of February 17, I would like to suggest to the gentleman that he has overlooked the important distinction between Caceres as the target of an utterly futile (in the military sense) air raid and Caceres as the site of a land battle. What Mr. Fernandez claims would have some point if, as in 1823 and 1836, during the campaigns he describes, Caceres had been the point of conflict between two armies composed exclusively of infantry and cavalry.

There were absolutely no troop concentrations at Caceres on the day I mentioned, as I myself who was on the spot was careful to observe. There was not even a single plane at the airport. The bombing raid by Russian pilots in Russian planes took the civil population completely by surprise. What military objective was accomplished by the killing of 65 innocent women and children, the wounding of hundreds of unarmed civilians?

Furthermore, Mr. Fernandez has only to draw upon his knowledge of contemporaneous history to recall that Badajos, not Caceres, was the "chief transportation juncture between the rebel forces in the north and south." That is why the so-called "massacre of Badajos" had to be invented by the red propaganda machine in order to cover the chagrin experienced by the loss of this truly important strategic rail and highway junction early in the war. Any decent military history of the civil strife emphasizes this fact.

DR. JOSEPH F. THORNING.
Emmitsburg, Md., Feb. 17.

Land Instead Of Relief.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our cities are becoming overcrowded. We have overdeveloped industry. We have given our machines to all countries and they are now using the machines to supply themselves. Our industrial exports are declining rapidly and cannot be restored by treaties. That is one reason we have so many unemployed. Our harvesting machinery and tractors are now at work in Argentina, Russia and other countries. Our agricultural exports are declining. The advantage we long had as the producer of machines for cheap, mass production is passing.

What are we going to do with the overpopulation of our cities? Will not a few millions of these people have to get back to the land, in order to make a living? But they cannot do this because the country's free land has gone.

Some of the billions of dollars given for relief should have been probably put in gifts of land, on which the dwellers could have at once found employment and made a living. It is not too late to begin this policy. Rather than build so many city houses to fasten the excess population in the cities, had we not better be building something in the country—possibly houses on free land; or at least give the land to let the tenant contrive his dwelling, as in the pioneer days?

Anti-Lynch Bill Support.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a proponent of the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill now before the Congress, I feel that I speak for the vast majority of my race.

It is my opinion on that it is the duty of every honest, right-thinking American to lend his efforts to abolish forever the scar upon our civilization. Lynching of anyone, regardless of race, creed or color, should appeal to everyone as being without excuse of conscience.

There is no room in this country for racial hatred.

The Post Impressionist

Talk In The Morning.

I WAS finishing breakfast with a cigarette and The Post editorial page when an old lady came into the cafeteria. She runs a secondhand bookstore, and sometimes when I go in to look around she talks to me about everything from the splendor of Marlowe's poetry to the inefficiency and general cussedness of her assistants. She got tomato juice and toast and coffee, and sat down across from me. After she had drunk the tomato juice, she wiped her mouth with a paper napkin and leaned over to see what I was reading. Then she grinned and buttered a piece of toast.

"I see the perfectionists are at it again," she said.

"The perfectionists?"

"Yes. There in The Post Impressionist."

"Have you seen it already?"

"I read it last night. What do you think of it?"

"Well, I'd say illusionists rather than perfectionists."

"Perhaps. Anyhow, they can't seem to enjoy a writer unless they can believe that he is perfect. They like to believe writers are gods, and as soon as a critic finds even a slight taint of humanity, they berate him for it."

She bit a piece out of the toast and chewed it noisily. I said, "It makes you wonder why they don't join the church. They'd be sure of perfection there."

"Some of them belong to it already, but apparently the absolute is not enough. They need temporal deities as well as an eternal one."

"In other words they want to believe in men who are not human."

"In a way, because such a belief is a vicarious exaltation of themselves. They hate the truth worse than they hate the devil."

I pointed to the column. "It's rather amusing to see how much criticism they can ignore. Hazlitt said Shakespeare was a careless workman before John Crowe Ransome was thought of, and any number of people have said that Housman was not a great poet in the way Milton was. Of course, 'Gone With the Wind' has not had so long to accumulate judgments, but the American Mercury sat on it as soon as it was printed. You might think from reading this column that criticism did not begin until Story became housebroken.",

She crunched more toast and drank her black coffee before she answered. She was a thick little woman with a dark face, two gold teeth and a black dress like those you see in the fashion plates for 1910. "I always thought Shakespeare was more careless in his plays than he was in the Sonnets," she said. "I could show you whole passages that are slovenly and barbarous, but why should that stop me from reading him at his best, especially when he's at his best so often?"

"Then you don't mind flaws in your idols?" I asked.

"Of course not. I expect them, and I notice that when there are none the book is usually precious or superficial, like Housman at times."

"Don't you like him?"

"Oh yes, I like him, as a musician, a virtuoso who plays superbly on the more easily plucked strings of emotion. But the pessimism that some of his critics don't like is not Swinburne's or Hardy's or Strindberg's. At times he seems to think, like Hardy, that 'Crass casualty obstructs the sun and rain, and dicing Time for gladness casts a moan,' but he never says it like Hardy does."

I grinned. "You mean he says it 'not with a bang but a whimper!'"

"Uh-huh. And his whimper really comes from pleasure. It's essentially a rather easy acceptance instead of a protest."

"But you read him in spite of that."

"Certainly. After all, he did write some perfect chamber music. Get me another cup of coffee, will you? Black."

When I came back with the coffee, she had lit a cigarette.

"How about the novelists?" I asked. "I think it's easier to notice their faults than the poets'."

"Not easier to notice, but harder to read them. I stopped trying to read most of the older ones long ago. Defoe and Fielding are the only ones I'd bother with now. I skip everything between them and Hardy."

"I suppose you like the moderns like Hemingway, Dos Passos and Dreiser."

"Sometimes I'd like to wring Dreiser's neck when he gets maudlin or photographic or documentary, but I read him because he tells about important things. Hemingway repeats himself too much, but he's never dull. Dos Passos repeats himself, too, and sometimes he is dull, but he means what he says."

"How about Faulkner?"

"The possessed of the devil? I do wish he'd get his psychologies straightened out, but was there ever a diabolist since Baudelaire who could write like he does? The body of evil worried Dostoievsky, but its soul runs through Faulkner."

I stood up, and while I was putting on my overcoat, I said, "And what do you think of "Gone With the Wind?"

She jammed her cigarette into the ashtray, and looked suddenly tired. Then she tried to smile as she got into her coat. "Please," she said. "It's too early in the morning for that."

BERNARD F. MORAN.

Fair Enough

By
Westbrook Pegler.

At Old Siwash.

Galesburg, Ill.

THIS IS Founders' Week at Knox College, fondly known as Old Siwash and as the typical American fresh-water school. That may mean nothing to you, but it is hot stuff at Siwash, and they usually import a couple of speakers to sound off at the big dinner which is the climax of the celebration.

PEGLER.

This time they brought in Mr. Emanuel Hertz, of New York, who has authorized another book on the apparently exhaustible subject of Abraham Lincoln. They cannot claim Lincoln as an alumnus, because he never had much book learning—a trait in common which has made many a professional ignoramus in public life swell with homely pride—but they do claim a sort of lien on him because he once debated with Stephen A. Douglas on the slavery question from a scaffold opening off one of the ground-floor windows of the building known as Old Main.

That was the first time that Lincoln defined slavery as a moral issue, but his address is as well remembered for the fact that when Douglas referred to Lincoln as a man who had once sold whisky the rail splitter retorted that Douglas, who was something of a rum-pot, had been his best customer. That slew them.

• • • •

THEY HAVE a room full of furniture and other articles which Mr. Lincoln is said to have owned or touched or looked at, and although there are few persons living who can claim to have shaken his hand—and most of them probably are unconscionable old liars—there are others who take solemn pride in claiming to have shaken a hand that shook the hand of the great emancipator. Old Siwash alumni have a way of lowering their voices when they speak of Lincoln.

A shoe which could be credibly or even wishfully certified as having been worn by him would be carefully shellacked or gilded and placed on the mantel shelf in the museum, and even a pluck of lint off his coat would be placed under glass for the edification of the students.

It may be said, however, that the students have a fairly stout edification resistance in this particular. Your correspondent, not knowing, casually asked two little co-eds how came Lincoln and Douglas to be debating before the voters that way in a day when the election of Senators was a prerogative of the statesmen of the Legislature, including the usual proportion of petty-larceny grafters who would sell a railroad franchise for a secondhand shotgun.

They just couldn't say as to that. Neither could an alumnus who pretends to some authority on a subject know by the laundry-bag name of Lincolniana.

The contrast between Old Siwash, with her conventional, fresh-water ideas and collegiate customs and her old buildings to which tradition clings in lieu of ivy, and the University of Chicago, only two hours but many years away, one way or another, is inescapable but must be resisted. It required a whole series of pieces in the Saturday Evening Post and one of those continued-among-the-leather-belting-ads analysis in Fortune to tell what Robert Hutchins is up to at Chicago.

• • • •

WHATEVER IT IS, he seems to have a big thing there, but the sort of parents who send their young to Siwash or Slippery Rock or Spearfish Normal would regard all that as goings-on. No good can come of picking at the young one's souls, and experience has proved to generations of Siwash graduates that the way of life is to learn lessons out of books, marry, have children, work, succeed, if possible (and with none of your funny definitions of success), then pass away.

"Pass away" is the term that is generally used.

Mr. Hutchins is plagued by a reputation for precocity. He is 38 years old now, but he has been president of Chicago for ten years. And, like Willie Hoppe in billiards and Bobby Jones in golf, continues to be thought of as a boy wonder long after his first long pants. He has the stylish grace and poise of a thoroughbred and much resembles in appearance, manner and speech the only stage actor of recent years who has been able to swoon the dolls of whatever age—Mr. Alfred Lunt.

Mr. Carter Davidson, the president of Siwash, on the other hand, is only 33, but a grave young man in a new job and of the type to which life obviously is earnest and real, a meat-and-potatoes educator in a meat-and-potatoes environment. But this is no way to avoid the contrast and must be stopped lest both get sore, if they are not already, and long-word your correspondent to death at the city gate.

One trait or failing the two schools have in common—their weakness in football.

Siwash, up to a few years ago, had lost 27 consecutive games, and in the last season of that dreary span did not score a point. The quarterback that year broke loose one day, and seemed on his way to a touchdown when he stepped in the water bucket.

Siwash did not regard this as evidence of intellectual superiority. Siwash wants to win. Chicago can imagine nothing of less consequence.

For the Gardener

By Mary Lewis Scaife.

IT WOULD TAKE a stony heart indeed to miss the fascination of three books on plant life which have recently appeared on the market. The first of these, "The Garden in Color," by Louise Beebe Wilder, is truly a gem of artistic production. Classified according to seasons, the author treats approximately 500 plants, ranging from the prosaic zinnia to various species of the orchid family, with practical cultural directions for each. The 320 beautiful illustrations, in color, would in themselves serve to bring the garden indoors to the shut-in.

Another valuable contribution to the garden library is "Garden Bulbs in Color," by McFarland, Hatton & Foley. As the title implies, this volume is devoted principally to the culture of bulbs, although it includes a section on related corms, rhizomes and tubers. Like the foregoing book by Mrs. Wilder, it contains a profuse and artistic assortment of color-plates and a wealth of detailed instructions for planting and successful development. Particularly interesting are the historical background, origin of names, and legends associated with the various types treated, such as the tulip, amaryllis, gladiolus and narcissus, with only the latter of which most of us are already familiar.

A third book which falls in this class, while perhaps not of as much practical value to the average small-scale gardener, is nonetheless of definite worth to those who have opportunities to explore the haunts, habits and folklore of ferns. "Our Ferns," by Willard Nelson Clute, editor of The American Botanist, is a revised and amplified edition of "Our Ferns in Their Haunts," and will prove of service to the beginner as well as to the more advanced student of this particular type of plant life.

GARDEN BULBS IN COLOR," by McFarland, Hatton and Foley. (Macmillan, $3.50).

Canadian Parliament Debates Negotiations Pointing To British-American Trade Pact; Radio And Defense Discussed.

By Our Ottawa Correspondent.

Ottawa.

THE CANADIAN PARLIAMENT has now been in session more than two weeks and practically all its time has been occupied in the traditional debate on the formal address in reply to the Speech from the Throne which is supposed to reveal the ministerial program. This debate has no limitations about its subject matter and members range far and wide on a variety of topics, airing their pet schemes and grievances and criticizing or defending governmental policies.

During its course the opposition groups have arraigned the King ministry on different counts, but rarely from the same viewpoint, and Liberal orators have sought to rebut the criticisms leveled against it. There have been frequent references to the negotiations now afoot for a readjustment of trade relations between Canada, Britain and the United States. Conservatives have been trying to paint the Liberal ministry as committed to a policy whereby Canada's preferential privileges in the British market are going to be sacrificed for the political object of gaining the good will of the United States for British policies in the international field.

Western Liberals Hit Preference Shown East.

ONE especially significant feature of the debates has been the disposition of western Liberal members to criticize the government's tariff policy. They feel Mr. King has been much too tender to the industrial interests of eastern Canada in the light of the pledges of the official Liberal platform about tariff. Mr. Gordon Ross, one of these westerners, declared that he had reached the conclusion that no matter which party was in power, there was no longer any hope of getting a tariff policy which would please western Canada. Accordingly, he demanded that the three prairie provinces be allowed to form a free-trade enclave because it was impossible for them to regain reasonable prosperity under the existing system of protectionism.

Mr. Motherwell, who sat in several Liberal cabinets as minister of agriculture, took virtually the same view and urged that, if the government could not see its way to make further tariff reductions it must give the western farmers some kind of compensation for their onerous tariff burdens. He suggested explicity low rates for the export of grain over the Hudson Bay Railway which under present conditions is being very little utilized as an outlet for the exportation of the farm produce of the West.

Western radicals are determined to force the pace upon the tariff issue and Mr. Ross has tabled a resolution for an investigation of the administration of the customs tariff and particularly the workings of the system of drawbacks on raw materials.

The latter is designed chiefly for the benefit of manufacturers and the claims of the latter that they pass on most of the benefits of the system to the Canadian consumer are not accepted at their face value by the low tariff elements in the Liberal Party. In answer to the charges of their restless western followers, ministers have taken the line that a high protectionist structure such as was erected by the late Conservative ministry cannot be pulled down all at once without a disastrous dislocation of industry, that the reductions which they have already made in the traiff are quite substantial and that they contemplate further abatements of duties.

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation Criticized.

THE POLICIES of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, which as a semipublic utility, controls the broadcasting activities of Canada, have also figured largely in the debate. The opening of Parliament coincided with announcements that the corporation had not only with the consent of the government raised the fees for radio licenses from $2 to $2.50 per annum but has also concluded contracts with a number of American broadcasters for taking certain programs with advertising sponsorship over the C. B. C. network.

These announcements provoked a concerted campaign against the C. B. C. and its policies on the part of a group of leading Canadian newspapers; their motives were by no means disinterested as they feared a loss of advertising revenue because the circulation of most Canadian daily papers is purely local and advertisers on a national scale think they can get better results from radio programs which reach the whole country.

The complaining papers alleged that the C. B. C. was by reason of its subsidy from the public treasury and its privileged position able to offer rates for American advertising programs of a bargain-counter character and was thereby going to deprive Canadian newspapers and magazines of much needed revenue. A second line of attack was that the new policy implied a complete frustration of the fundamental purpose of the C. B. C., which was to emancipate the air in Canada from the domination of American broadcasting interests and to encourage programs likely to develop Canadian artistic talent.

The Canadian newspapers were by no means a unit in this campaign for the Ottawa Citizen and the Sifton group of papers in the west came to the defense of the C. B. C. But the private broadcasting interests, who have always hated the C. B. C. and the regulatory control imposed by it, joined in the crusade and their spokesman inside and outside the House of Commons delivered vigorous assaults upon the corporation and virtually demanded its immediate dissolution.

Moreover, it is an open secret that a number of Liberal members are very nervous about the increase in the radio license fees; it has been decreed that whereas at present one radio license suffices for each household, henceforth a separate license must be secured for each radio in a home and as a result households which have three radios will now have to pay $7.50 instead of $2. This is just the sort of thing that loses votes for a party at elections and nervous Liberals have been pressing the government to get the fees modified.

Policies Defended By Minister Of Transport.

THE MINISTER OF TRANSPORT, who is responsible in Parliament for the C. B. C., has boldly defended its policy and refused to make any concession. He cited figures to show that out of the C. B. C.'s broadcasting week of 98 hours only 8¾ hours were devoted to American advertising programs and that the net revenue derived from them was $120,000 for the year and not the hundreds of thousands of dollars which had been alleged.

He explained that the C. B. C. would this year get $350,000 from license fees and that these sums together would enable it to balance its budget and erect two new high-powered stations, one to serve the maritime provinces and the other the west. He maintained that the erection of these two stations was absolutely imperative because at the recent Havana conference on broadcasting Canada had been allotted seven clear air channels instead of six as before, and that unless they were used by Canadian stations of at least 50,000 watts her claims to them would not be respected by other nations.

The King ministry has now tabulated its estimates of expenditures for the next fiscal year beginning April 1. They reach a total of $418,968,456 exclusive of the cost of the relief and the appropriation for the annual deficit of the Canadian National Railway system. The figure given represents a decrease of some $3,000,000 as compared with parallel figure for 1937-38. But the deficit for the current year on the whole balance sheet is likely to be over $20,000,000. Moreover, revenues will probably not be as large in the coming year as in the present. Therefore there seems little hope of a balanced budget for the fiscal year 1938-39.

The votes for national defense, which at $34,034,364 shows a decline of $2,000,000, indicate that the government has been encouraged by the result of recent by-elections in Quebec, where its rearmament program was expected to be too unpopular to persevere with it.

The latest appropriations for defense are based on a policy of paying special attention to the defenses of the Pacific Coast and giving priority to air-force defense, then naval defense and, to the re-equipment of the territorial militia. Seventy-five new aeroplanes are to be purchased, 55 for the permanent and 20 for the non-permanent air force, and the personnel of both is to be increased. Two new destroyers are being bought from the British admiralty, which will raise Canada's total destroyer strength to six.

Undoubtedly there will be some grumbling among the isolationists and anti-militarists when these votes come up for discussion, but in view of the menace offered today by Japan on the Pacific, the King ministry can be assured of ample support for its program of rearmament.

Youth & Crime

By Albert Lernard.

Wanted: A New Penology.

TWO MEN unusually well equipped for the task have written an able and intelligent critique of the penal system which handles wayward youths from the ages of 16 to 21. In so doing, they have attacked less the human beings who are responsible for the administration of the law than the law itself and the rigidity of the legal machinery, which, to an almost unbelievable extent fails to correct and actually destroys. By calm exposition, aided by sufficient case history to give emphasis to their plea, these writers disclose the system and its dreadfully inhuman results. At the close, they present a workable program against which thoughtful men will have difficulty opposing any argument whatever.

The book is more than an attack on the retributive theory of justice, which has been discarded by progressive lawyers and judges in all parts of the Western world. It starts from the premise that nothing worth while can be expected from the old theories and methods. Mr. Harrison is a criminologist long engaged in practical research, Mr. Grant spent many years with boys and with their correctional and guidance problems.

Seven years ago, the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, and the Charity Organization Society combined in forming the Boys Bureau to care for homeless boys. From that grew the realization of the growing problem of delinquency. A Delinquency Committee was formed and after its preliminary report, it was decided that the writers of the present book should have the task of preparing a report not only factual but with definite recommendations for changes. While the study was made in New York City, the nature of the problem does not differ in other cities and towns. Our justice holds the same terrors and dangers to youth everywhere.

THE FOCUS of this book, the result of that study, is upon the harm done, first, by the process from arrest to time of trial; second, by the needless punishment of all whether guilty or not of the offense charged, and, last, by the absolute unfitness of reformatories for the business of reforming anybody. As to the first feature, a mere reading of the steps followed by boys seized by the police and held in jails for days, weeks, months, pending final disposition of the case, will come as a shock to those not already familiar with methods. As to the last, it has long been known that incarceration in reformatories sends forth into society a more anti-social individual than went in. How could a life featured by gangsterism (more highly organized inside than out), degeneracy and aimlessness do otherwise? It is the exceptional boy who does not sink lower through this experience.

The need for permanent coercion for those who cannot or will not change is admitted, but in a form far different from the present one. For more effective rehabilitation, there is offered a definite plan. As a first step, there shall be a new delinquency code for minors; for its administration, a Delinquent Minor Court, separated into two functions, judicial and dispositional, the latter phase to be handled after a diagnostic examination of the individual. The system henceforward will become a flexible legal and human combination based on the needs of the offender and working through them for his restoration.

Space does not permit of further elaboration here, but it is clear that police, lower court judges and magistrates, assistant district attorneys and criminal lawyers, cannot dispose of the problems of youth under present legal codes and machinery of law. Despite efforts of the intelligent members of the above named groups to evade the harshness of the law, the dangers and the damage remain. They cannot eliminate the time element, the useless imprisonment and the shock therefrom, or the necessity of sending boys, when the law compels, to places they should never be locked up in.

• • • •

THIS IS an enlightening, forceful book which should awaken laymen to the needless destruction of youth. It is written dispassionately and without sentimental tinge. The present reviewer has worked for many years within the "system" and believes that no one who has observed its crudity, indifference and stupidity could possibly uphold it. This book is a first-rate constructive effort to do away with it. If all judges and magistrates in the land, all State legislators, could read it and thus help rid themselves of the infantile, hard-minded and unimaginative thought which goes into the making and the administration of our penal laws, sudden and radical changes would be made. It would seem that into the modern state, education should have percolated sufficiently to have destroyed all reasons for adhering to a retributive theory of justice, or belief in harsh prefabricated punishment as a deterrent.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Will It Come to This?

"Good morning. How's things in your business?"

"I'm not certain. I'm waiting for the Government to tell me."

"I thought you were in business for yourself."

"So did I!"

• • • •

"How're all your folks?"

"Pretty fair. My wife was feeling sick but she got word from Washington that it was all imagination."

"Are the children okay?"

"My two boys were on the verge of having whooping cough, but a Federal commission forbade it."

• • • •

"Are you feeling all right?"

"I have terrible headaches."

"Who doesn't?"

• • • •

"They're practically compulsory, I guess. Mine trouble me a lot."

"Did you see a doctor?"

"No, but I saw my Congressman. He said it was a public duty to have 'em. I've got a bad cold just now."

"Taking anything for it?"

"What do you mean?"

"My cold's under Government control. It's been through three commissions and there's a dispute over what to do for it. I may have to wait years."

• • • •

"Are you living in the same place?"

"I'm not sure."

"Not sure?"

"No. I'd have to call up and find out. There are so many housing projects and slum clearance projects operating in my neighborhood that any home is rather temporary. I lost two of 'em last year that way."

• • • •

"Playing much golf lately?"

"Oh, yes. I play a lot now that there are three Federal golf courses in my town."

"How's your game?"

"It was all right until the United States Bureau of Golf Control took it over."

"Took over your golf game? Now listen . . ."

"No fooling! Somebody complained my game wasn't up to the Government standards and they sent four agents up to regulate it."

"Have any trouble with 'em?"

"I wanted to pull out a brand-new ball instead of looking for the old one in the rough and they denounced me as an economic royalist."

• • • •

"How's your oldest daughter Sarah these days?"

"Oh, she got married about a year ago. Had a Government wedding and everything."

"Any children yet?"

Tom McCarthy

And Don't Bring Your Wives.

"THEY'RE ALL comedians . . . when they try on the hats," he said. "And that's what's tough."

He should know. He's been a salesman of men's clothing for more years than he is willing to figure out.

McCARTHY.

"They come in the door like gentlemen," he said. "And they may be Supreme Court lawyers. But when they get in front of the three-sided mirror, with a new hat on their heads, they become comedians.

"'Where are the pistols that go with this one?' they ask. 'How much will you pay me for wearing this one?' they want to know. No, sir, selling men's clothing isn't the easiest job in the world.

"Then we've got the customer that brings in all his friends, to have them help in making up his mind. He never knows what he wants till everybody in the store has passed judgment on his choice.

"But we could put up with that," said the salesman. "Our biggest worry is the woman factor."

I told him that I thought he specialized in men's clothing, and he assured that he did. However, all too often, it seems, he has to sell the suit to the women.

"The women pick them," he said, "and the men wear them."

Wives, it appeared, are the greatest evil in the eyes of the men's clothing industry.

"In the first place," he said, "women think they know more about fabrics than the men do. But they don't. They know furs, and yard goods, but they don't know anything about men's clothing.

"Women's clothes are tailored to fit like silk stockings. Men's clothes shouldn't be. They should leave room. They should have certain natural drapes and wrinkles. But as long as there is a wrinkle, the wives think that the suit is a bad fit.

"Further, women are slaves of fashion . . . except in regard to their husbands. If the husband courted them in a single-breasted suit, he must wear the same kind of a suit for the rest of his life. They change their styles with the season, but they never want to see their husbands change.

"However, there is an exception to that. If their movie hero appears in odd jacket and trousers they'll march the husband in for the same kind of an outfit . . . even if it makes him look like something out of a comic strip.

• • • •

IT APPEARS, however, that women aren't the sole curse of the men's clothing business. The secondary curse is the writer on men's fashions.

"These fashion writers," said the salesman, "see a guy at Palm Beach or along the Riviera, and he's wearing a yellow jacket and green pants. You wouldn't want to be found dead in them . . . but since the fashion writer wrote about them, some guy comes in to buy an outfit like that.

"The chances are," said the salesman, "that there's only one outfit in the world like that. The original owner had them made by his tailor to suit his fancy. And, when we don't have them, the customer is sore.

"He doesn't realize that we place our orders for summer wear a little before Christmas. And it isn't a simple process either.

"The mill makes up sample fabrics and presents them to the manufacturers. The manufacturers show the fabrics to us. We choose the fabrics, then the manufacturer orders the mill to make up fabrics we choose. When the mill makes them up, they are then made into suits by the manufacturer, and marketed by us. But it takes almost half a year.

"So when some fashion writer comes out with a description of what is going to be the big thing in men's suits we're just out on a limb."

• • • •

BEING a salesman of men's clothing requires tact. It may even require fitting the customer badly.

"Men's suits are divided up into sizes, and lengths," the salesman said. "They're medium, short or long. We have one short guy that insists on getting a long size. The coat reaches to his knees. He likes it, and so he gets it!"

The customer is a strange and never completely understood person, according to the salesman. But he does have certain rules to guide him in that regard.

A man smoking a pipe is a customer not to be rushed. He's deliberate! The peanut chewer, or apple munching type is never a good prospect. He's usually a wisecracker. That also goes for the inveterate whistler. He really isn't interested in what you're showing him. He hasn't got his mind on it.

When you get a customer sitting down, you've got him on the run as far as making a sale goes. And if he's buying shoes he's likely to tell you his most personal affairs. There's something about getting a customer in his stocking feet.

Screwball customers are a daily occurrence in a men't clothing store, and the clerks have ceased to worry about them.

There was, for example, the customer who came in wearing a blue shirt. After the salesman had showed him a selection of colored shirts, he informed, "None of these would do at all. You see I never wear anything but white!"

Judging customers is the hardest part of a salesman's job, and the "old timer" has finally decided to give them all the same treatment . . . with the accent on courtesy.

"He came in," he said, "and he looked like a bum. He ordered 30 pairs of socks, 15 shirts, a dozen ties and a couple of suits. He was so messed up that nobody wanted to wait on him. And all the time I kept wondering how he was going to pay for them.

"He didn't keep me waiting," the salesman said. "He peeled three $100 bills off a roll and handed them over.

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

AGAIN THE SIX EMPLOYES of the SSB in Baltimore who were dismissed in May, 1937, and later reinstated with much squabbling in the interim about "union discrimination," come to official attention. We hear that the old "unsatisfactory" personnel rating cards, placed in the folders around the time of the dismissals in 1937, are still retained in the files to the embarrassment of the six in their attempts toward promotion or transfer to other positions.

The union (Local 17, U. F. W. A.) held a conference this week with Frank Bane, executive director of the SSB, and he promised an answer for today, it is learned.

One spokesman for the union related to us: "The union feels that the 'unsatisfactory' ratings of these employes have been thoroughly discredited, and have been rendered invalid by virtue of the reinstatement of the people involved. Despite the fact that three of these six employes have since their reinstatement received ratings of 'excellent' these people are being denied consideration for raises or promotions which they may deserve because their personnel folders show 'unsatisfactory' ratings."

Add Less Than the Dust Department: Or how the labors of love on books that court the arts fall with a sliding thud from $2.50, $3 and $5 brackets to the flat realm of 50 cents are announced in an FCA Lending Library sale. For 50 cents you can get "The Fascist, His State and His Mind;" "Not Under Forty" ("Not Over Forty" would be appropriate for some departments we know of.—Ed.), "Behind the Spanish Barricades," or you can get several mystery novels for 35 cents, or three for a doller. The sale comes off tomorrow.

Newspaper photographers went to the I. D. R. A.'s bowling alleys the other night especially to snap a picture of the pretty Miss Interior in colonial costume a-bowling; and they waited on Miss Interior for something like an hour, which should be a source of satisfaction to her. And she never showed up—but for a perfectly good reason: We hear that she had a date that night, with a dentist's chair; and certainly she had rather have been at bowling and having her picture taken in a pretty, swishing, colorful costume.

Dioramas

A treat soon in store: Very shortly now, the Interior museum division will open for public inspection those marvelously done dioramas in the basement of the new Interior Building . . . They have decided on a date, but are withholding the announcement for a few days . . . Of all the local museums (the smaller ones) this new one in Interior strikes us as the most engaging from the standpoint of effectiveness and skill of creation . . . In studied sequence, the dioramas tell the story of Uncle Sam's attempt at the conservation of natural resources and, incidentally, the long story of Interior . . . You have seen dioramas, but none quite like these.

The A. F. G. The Social Security Board provides the talent for the Federal show window to be offered at 10:30 tonight over WOL . . . The central entertainment will concern the adventures of a girl bent on making dough and fame in Hollywood . . . In the program are: Ruth Sneeringer, Edith Rogers, Arthur Wetherid, Nat Lewis Schein, Josephine Bertolini, Evelyn Guthman, Muriel Gee and Hy Baer.

Dr. Ira L. Bill Lets Pershing Keep $19,000 Pay

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Military Affairs Committee approved a bill yesterday which would relieve Gen. John J. Pershing of the necessity of returning to the Government approximately $19,000 of salary paid him as chairman of the World War Battle Monuments Commission.

The Comptroller General's Office had ruled that Gen. Pershing was not entitled to the benefits of an act under which military officers stationed abroad are compensated for losses through the currency exchange.

Pastors to Be Feted.

Church ministers and their wives, of all denominations, who have come to Washington during the past year, will be entertained at a reception Friday night at the Twelfth street branch Y. M. C. A., 1816 Twelfth street northwest. The event is an annual affair designed to bring new ministers into closer touch with the social welfare problems of Washington. A sextet of ministers' wives and the junior choral group of the Y. M. C. A. will furnish music.

Evolution of 'Swing' Shown to Kiwanians

The evolution of "swing" music was explained to members of the Washington Kiwanis Club by Sidney Seidenman, local orchestra leader, at the club's weekly meeting at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday.

"It is not fair to say that modern dance music is bad just because we don't like it," said the speaker. "Anyone who doesn't tap his feet with the rhythm in modern day swing music might as well say he is ready to consign himself to a rocking chair." Participating in a demonstration was a group of local musicians—Bobby Simpson, Dick Kooms, Ralph Hawkins, and Maxine Tappan.

'Big' Pictures Promised Soon By Film Scout

By Frederick C. Othman.

Hollywood, Feb. 17 (U.P.).—Folks who always are glooming about the second-rate entertainment that Hollywood manufactures have a surprise coming in about one more week.

Not since we came to Hollywood last summer have there been so many good shows, all neatly sealed in tin cans, for immediate national distribution.

The best of the new pictures for our money is "Tom Sawyer," which David O. Selznick filmed exactly as Mark Twain wrote it. It's done in color—the kind that doesn't hurt your eyes—and it's got for a star a youngster named Tommy Kelly, who seems as real on the screen as movie actors ever get.

This film cost more than a million dollars and was worth it. Another, which was produced in ten days and which the critics here panned unmercifully because they said it was "cheap," likewise kept us entertained for an hour and a half. It is called "The Black Doll" and it's one of Universal's quickie detective stories. It's got Edgar Kennedy, the master of the "slow burn," for the dumb detective, and more villains and dagger-tossing than any film this season.

Katie Not Frustrated.

There also is a little number, "Bringing Up Baby," which stars Katharine Hepburn, Cary Brant and a tiger. It's funny. A few more like this and La Hepburn will be a comedienne of note. It's a strange thing, how much prettier she is laughing than she is one of those frustrated gals, too grief-stricken even to shed a tear.

Twentieth Century-Fox has a bell-ringer, we think, in "The Baroness and the Butler." This one stars the single-name French actress, Annabella, and that suave gentleman, William Powell. The story originally was entitled "Jean," but Fox changed it, so Powell wouldn't be reminded of the late Jean Harlow.

The story is about a butler who's elected to Parliament and then falls in love with the boss' daughter, who happens to be married to another congressman.

Worth the Sweat.

Newest of the new pictures is "The Adventures of Marco Polo," which Sam Goldwyn was filming when we arrived here last August. We were surprised then to see Gary Cooper working so hard in the alkali dust of the Paramount ranch that he sweated through his clothes and had to have new ones. The result is well worth Cooper's—and Goldwyn's—effort. It also brings to the screen Sigrid Gurie, a new movie personality, who's mighty pleasant to watch.

Goldwyn's other new picture, which should be reaching the first-run screens in another day or two, is "The Goldwyn Follies." All the experts said it was fine; you also may like it, but it bored us with a plethora of talent. It got more magnificent as it went along, and louder and funnier and, first thing we knew, we were squirming.

Another picture which cost nearly as much and which had almost this same effect on the shine of our trousers was Paramount's "Big Broadcast of 1938." It did have W. C. Fields in it, though, and he's still as funny as ever.

Medal Winner Can 'Take It!'

When the six boy actors who attained fame in "Dead End" reported to support Humphrey Bogart in "Crime School," the star took them aside in heavy conference. He knew them and their habit of playing practical jokes because of personal experience with them in "Dead End."

"See that guy over there?" he asked, pointing to burly Clarence Eurist, property man of the company. "Well, he thinks he's an ath-lete."

To six youngsters in their teens, bursting with animal spirits and vigor, that was enough. All thought of playing practical jokes on Bogart forgotten, they sidled one after another up to Eurist with:

"So you're an ath-a-lete, hey? Let's see if you can take it."

Then a hard fist to the ribs, a blow to the wind, and away would go the chuckling youngster.

By nightfall of the first day on the set, Eurist was so sore that he had to anoint himself with arnica.

His good-natured acceptance of the play, however, soon endeared him to the boys. And when the boys learned Eurist holds the Navy Cross awarded for bravery in action with the United States Marines against Gen. Sandino in Nicaragua, they became hero worshippers.

Monocle Shatters, Actor's Foot Cut

Porter Hall's ineptitude in the use of a monocle last week made necessary the ministrations of a nurse. Porter cut his foot.

He is playing the part of an impressario with Olympe Bradna and Gene Raymond in "Stolen Heaven," Continental music drama.

Hall was supposed to rise from his bed, the monocle firmly in his eye, and make his way in bare feet over a wooden floor.

All went well until the monocle slipped from his eye when he was mid-way across the floor. It shattered, and Porter walked on the splinters.

HE WAS a little fellow, but there was fight written all over him when he dashed out in front of me when I attempted to cross what he concevied to be his legal boundaries.

Perhaps realizing that he couldn't quite make my weight, he called a pal from across the street. The two of them gave signs of making it a bit tough for the trespasser. With the "crime wave" still in the air—and on the streets—it began to look a little like a battle royal. To make it worse, a third party joined the altercation—a very much bigger and tougher fellow than either of the other two. They were going to tell me what for, or else!

BELL.

Having learned from several bitter experiences not to stick my chin out, I came down to their height by sitting on my heels and talking it over. I explained that I wasn't such a bad guy, as bad guys go; and that I had no idea of encroachment or exercising any mandate over alien territory to which I had no just claim. It seemed to calm them down a bit and it wasn't long before we were shaking hands, chucking each other under the chin and having a very swell time of it, indeed.

It might be well to explain at this point that the first rough-looking little belligerent was a wire-haired fox terrier. The first of his re-inforcements was a soiled and frowzy-looking poodle from across the street and the second a German shepherd I had never seen before—not the one that lives next door and accepts graciously the bones I stick through the back fence to him at such unearthly hours as 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning, my usual supper hour.

These rowdy young mugs and I now are the best of friends—I hope.

* * * *

The thought occurs to me that there might be the genesis of a drama of international complications in this Gallatin street incident—something about the encroachment of big nations upon little ones, the efficacy of a little patience and kindly consideration and all that sort of rot. Maybe I might take a whirl at it sometime—you hope not.

"Fool's Hill," by Robert Wetzel, which won the $500 award in the Bureau of New Plays' first playwriting competition, will be on the Theater Guild's schedule for next season.

The play was read by the Theater Guild's board of directors and there was a unanimous vote at the last Guild meeting in favor of its purchase and production. To make possible the Guild production it was necessary for the seven motion picture sponsors of the bureau to release the script

GARY COOPER AND CLAUDETTE COLBERT as they appear in the new Paramount picturization of the stage play of "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," directed by Ernst Lubitsch, which will come shortly to a local screen. Mr. Cooper was a Washington visitor earlier in the week with his wife, the former Sandra Shaw.

Chameleon.

Dorothy Lamour, hitherto known as the "jungle queen" because of her work in such pictures as "Her Jungle Love," today is acclaimed as Hollywood's "chameleon woman," in tribute to her versatility.

Is Golfer.

Bob Hope, wisecracking Broadway musical comedy star who makes his screen debut in "The Big Broadcast of 1938," is an accomplished golfer. He won several tournaments in and near New York.

Studio Business In Big Increase

Nate Blumberg, president of Universal Pictures Co., has notified Charles R. Rogers, in charge of production at the studio, that the company's business increased $300,000 the first three weeks of January over the corresponding period of last year.

This substantial increase of $100,000 a week since the first of the year was caused by first run bookings of Alice Faye's "You're a Sweetheart," and by subsequent bookings of Deanna Durbin's "100 Men and a Girl" throughout the country.

New Road.

A new road to stardom has been opened by Cheryl Walker, who was catapulted into Hollywood's firmament as a "talisman blonde" by way of the Pasadena Tournament of Roses, which she presided over as queen. Miss Walker's first role was with Olympe Bradna and Gene Raymond in "Stolen Heaven."

Florey's Pride.

The Napoleonic statues and miniatures observed in several scenes of "Dangerous to Know" are the personal property of Robert Florey, director of the picture in which Anna May Wong, Akim Tamiroff and Gail Patrick are featured. He is Hollywood's foremost collector of this type of bric-a-brac.

For Art's Sake.

Benny Baker broke his one and only New Year's resolution for 1938. He had firmly promised himself that he would give up smoking cigars when he learned that he is required to smoke one for practically every scene of his current picture, "Tip-Off Girls."

Averill Suffers Freak Injury

Anthony Averill, the new Warner "find" drafted from the ranks of St. Louis newspapermen, was bitten on the right hand recently by a stuffed leopard.

So deep were the wounds that William Clemens, directing "Torchy Blane in Panama," in which Averill plays an escaping bank bandit, sent him to the studio hospital at once to have his hand dressed.

It happened during shooting of a scene in which Averill, masquerading as a member of a fraternal order junketing to Panama, seized upon the lodge's mascot, the stuffed leopard, as a safe repository for his loot. He pried the leopard's mouth apart, then stuffed the stolen money down its throat. The animal's jaw snapped shut as he was withdrawing his hand.

Cowboy Powell Uses a Double In Film Rodeo

Expert Horseman Explains Hazards of the Rodeos and Their Stunts.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Feb. 17.—The Warner Brothers erected one end of Madison Square Garden inside a sound stage today, equipped it with some mean-looking steers, some horses and some experts to ride both, and recreated the annual New York version of a Wild West rodeo.

The brothers went to all this trouble for a picture called "Cowboy From Brooklyn," which ought to be as exciting as any in which Dick Powell ever appeared. The story is tricky.

He is cast as the greatest crooner of cowboy songs the radio ever produced. He struts around in chaps, yet he never has been outside his native Brooklyn and he's so scared of horses he faints whenever he sees one.

Eventually his bluff is called. He must prove that he is a real cowboy on penalty of losing a multi-million-dollar radio contract. His manager has him hypnotized by a beetle-browed professor and Powell, in a daze, enters the rodeo, where, by his daring feats of hypnotized horsemanship, he wins the grand championship. That's the plot.

What Happens?

Here's what happens: Powell appears at the rodeo, which is complete even unto excited vendors spilling ice cream cones on the audience, but he never goes near a steer. He's too valuable a property for the Warners to shove into a bull fight.

When it looks as if he's about to tackle one of the snorting beasts, the cameras shift, and a stunt man named Cliff Lyons hops into the ring. He looks like Powell, he is dressed like him and, more important, he knows how to wrestle steers.

Lyons had to go to the studio hospital to have his wounds dressed yesterday—one of the steers ripped a hole across the side of his head—but he was back today, making Powell look like Hollywood's bravest actor.

Powell's cowgirl friend is Priscilla Lane. She's a member of the movie rodeo outfit, but like Powell, her neck's too valuable to risk on a bucking broncho. She also has a double, who turns out to be a slim-faced, hard muscled youth in skirts, named Jim.

The Warners are putting on a complete rodeo for benefit of their movie customers. Most of the riders are professional rodeo performers.

Riding Injured Eyes!

We had a chat with one of them, young Johnny Slater, who wears eyeglasses when the cameras aren't turning. His spectacles became necessary, he said, after years of galloping across tanbark floors on the back of a horse.

"The pounding of the spine eventually affects the optic nerves," he said, "and so most rodeo men are forced to wear glasses."

Johnny reported that the cattle business these days has no place for high class cowboys.

"The ranches are all fenced and mechanized," he said. "They don't even have to rope steers any more to saw off their horns. A dab of chemicals does the trick.

"So the only place left for experts are the rodeos, which travel regular circuits, like baseball teams. And that leads to another funny thing. Some of the best rodeo performers never have been on a ranch in their lives. They got all their experience with wild horses and loco cattle inside the rodeo ring.

A Rising Actress Is Star at Home

Ruth Terry is not world famous yet, but success has come to her in no uncertain terms.

Word has been received at the studio, where the 17-year-old Irish beauty is currently warbling in "International Settlement," that all of Benton Harbor, Mich., the Irish beauty's home town, will be out en masse to witness the screening of her first picture, "Love and Hisses."

The theater marquee reads, "Walter Winchell, Ruth Terry and Ben Bernie." And 45 pictures of the local girl who made good adorn the forecourt.

FreckleChampions Decorate Scenery

"Wanted: 1,000,000 freckles!"

That was the gist of the demand made by Director Irving Cummings on the casting office, in requisitioning 40 freckle-faced kids for an orphanage band scene in the new Shirley Temple picture, "Little Miss Broadway."

In answer to his call, some 400 be-freckled youngsters showed up to be tried out by Cummings. He admitted that he had no difficulty in finding the million freckles, "because," Cummings boasted, "in Southern California sunshine it's always open season for freckles."

In Revival of Ace Filmusical

JEANETTE MACDONALD AND DOUGLAS DUMBRILLE in the perennially popular screen version of "Naughty Marietta," directed by Woody S. Van Dyke, which will be brought back for a week's engagement at the Little Theater, beginning Sunday. Nelson Eddy is costar.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 17.—Jeanette MacDonald came to luncheon today at my home wearing a suede ensemble of rust and yellow and a brilliant scarf. Hat and bag to match. She changes her scarfs as often as you and I wash our hands.

Jeanette's design for living is wholesome and real. She keeps her horses, Black Night and White Lady, in her own stable behind the house, and has a long private bridle path leading into the main one in Bel Air. When she's not doing a picture, she slides out of her downy couch early each morning into the saddle.

She gives great gobs of energy to everything she does, whether work or play. So the inner woman has to be replenished frequently. She eats five meals a day—not much at a time, because her tummy's tiny. She's worked out her own diet and doesn't mix starches and acids.

The daily menu, and her favorite, starts with either cereal and coffee or fruit and coffee. At 11 o'clock a cup of bullion. Lunch, when at home, is cheese souffle, green salad, baking powder biscuits and honey. Five o'clock just tea. Dinner, roast, plenty of vegetables and a simple dessert.

At present, she's torn between saving her long finger nails, grown practically under glass, and playing her new pipe organ.

Trust the Basil Rathbones to snare all the brilliant visiting musicians. While Basil's shadow was making life miserable for Gary Cooper and Sigrud Gurie at the preview of "Marco Polo," their party, given for Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Rubenstein, reached another peak. It was a small party; perhaps enjoyed more because of that.

Among the first to arrive, and almost together, were the Lubitschs and Marlene Dietrich; that's about the only time they were together. Marlene was in black velvet without a single jewel.

You knew spring had arrived when you sat down to dinner. In the center of the long table was a huge crystal candelabra. On either side, down the full length of the table—as though growing in their own beds—were white and blue hyacinths, all different lengths. Gray tablecloth and red glass dinner service. We started off with petate marmite, larded tenderloin of beef, broccoli with hollandaise, topped off with baked alaska.

At midnight, after John McCormick reluctantly gave over the piano stool, Mr. Rubenstein started to play. Gertrude Wettergren, Metropolitan contralto, sang as did a newcomer, Ray Middleton. Among the rapt listeners were the Charles Boyers, Lester Donahue, Norma Bdeslawski, Baroness Hatvany, the Max Reinhardts, Mme. Nijinsky. Lubitsch, usually the gayest guest present, sat enthralled, as did all of us.

Bob Hope has moved into a star dressing room since his hit in "The Big Broadcast of 1938." One hit will do it.

Although Bob Taylor traveled in England to make "Yank at Oxford," he never saw Oxford. The university and the studio couldn't get together on their schedule.

It was Spencer Tracy who persuaded Joan Crawford to take up polo. Since finishing "Mannequin," he's been giving her lessons at the Riviera Club.

Winsor French, who didn't like Joan Bennett's performance in "Stage Door," and said so in the Cleveland Press, is about to arrive in town to visit Kay Francis.

Won't those stars who snubbed Virginia Cherrill be angry when she returns here as the Countess of Jersey and refuses their invitations. Wonder if Gary Grant, her former husband, will give her a dinner?

Lady Plunkett is on her way, also Lord Astor and the Duke of Sutherland. Why not make it easy for our visitors and move the House of Lords to Hollywood.

Don't know what happened, but Bette Davis will replace Kay Francis in "Comet Over Broadway."

Something new is promised Earle Theater audiences by Warner Brothers' zone manager, John J. Payette, who announced yesterday that Production Manager Harry Anger will stage a "Battle of Swing" on the stage the week of Friday, March 4. For this "musical battle of the century," Don Bestor, radio and stage favorite, will cross batons with Rita Rio, "streamlined mistress of modern melody"—with no notes barred. Bestor will be bulwarked by his well-known male orchestra; Miss Rio by her all-girl band. Four rounds—in 4-4 time—will be presented daily with five on Saturday. This is at the Earle, understand, not Joe Turner's Arena!

The Washington film-going public has just missed a rare treat in audible entertainment by an eyelash, as the saying goes. It seems that the debonair Mr. William Powell, one of the suavest of the cinema's stars, was importuned to sing a bit in "The Baroness and the Butler," which comes to the screen at Loew's Capitol today, with Annabella as costar. The request met with polite, but emphatic, refusal on the part of Mr. Powell. This is what he had to say about it: "I am strictly a shower-bath profunde and if you have been hearing things about my voice, please disregard them. These reports of rippling rhythm are nothing but the echoes of my—ahem—voice struggling among the raindrops."

Would that some others who think they can sing for the films were as conscious of ablutionary delusions as Mr. Powell! But why name names?

What has become of the good Dr. Frank T. Shyne, first-aid to ailing Thespians? He should have got hold of John Emery last Saturday before the leading man in "Save Me the Waltz" attempted to play the matinee performance with a neck so stiff he could hardly turn his head. Perhaps the good doctor did. Mr. Emery seemed to be all right at the night performance. It is at that sort of thing that Shyne shines, as Rudy Vallee, Jack Benny, Walter Hampden and a long list of other stars will tell you.

"BLOSSOMS ON BROADWAY"
"THE GAME THAT KILLS"

1938 Pictures Employ Music In Novel Way

'Uncuttable Sound Tracks' Are Latest Invention to Improve Films.

The year 1938 will see a musical revolution" in the film industry that will give composers and their work more importance than ever before in the history of the screen.

That's the consensus of Hollywood's musical directors as a result of the introduction of "uncuttable music" to the scoring of movies.

In the current, Sylvia Sidney-George Raft picture, "You and Me," at Paramount, the score is interwoven with thematic strains that are vital to the life and advancement of the plot, and, according to Producer-Director Fritz Lang, cannot be cut without causing the audience to "lose dramatic contact."

The same thing is being done simultaneously in "Stolen Heaven," starring Olympe Bradna and Gene Raymond, with Andrew Stone directing. In this picture, light classical music is being employed to "point up" somber moods by sheer contrast. Frequently the music substitutes for dialogue.

Kurt Weill, European composer, who created a sensation in the musical world a few seasons ago by his original scoring of the play, "Johnnie Johnson," is the composer assigned to "You and Me," and is working in close collaboration with both Lang and Scenarist Virginia Van Upp.

Lang had marked success with this "musical scenarization" when he employed it experimentally and to a lesser degree in "Fury" and "You Only Live Once," his two previous productions.

Battle Rages In Hollywood Over Dancers

The biggest battle in the history of Hollywood is raging within studio walls, it was revealed last week, and all the furore is about legs, girls' legs!

Paramount, with approximately 525 dancers under contract for a period of several months, has practically engineered a corner on legs. And few, if any, of the possessors of the symmetrical underpinnings will be released for other studios to hire, until spring!

It is estimated by dance directors that there are approximately 700 first-line chorus girls in Hollywood who are capable of mastering any routine within a reasonably short rehearsal period.

Thus, only about 175 first-line dancers now are available for other studios producing musical pictures. Every studio in Hollywood has at least ten star dancers under permanent contract as a nucleus of all choral ensembles, so the number of girls left to make up a chorus throughout the movie capital is very, small.

The battle got under way during the filming of "The Big Broadcast of 1938." Leroy Prinz, dance director, looked over the production schedule and quietly began cornering legs.

He used 200 dancers in "The Big Broadcast" and 150 in "Doctor Rhythm," with Bing Crosby.

Virtually all of these dancers were held over for "College Swing" and "Stolen Heaven," both musicals, now in production.

El Brendel Makes Comeback in Films

Who says that movie fans are fickle to their beloved favorites?

When the familiar figure of El Brendel, Swedish dialect expert, appeared on the screen in "Happy Landing," audiences broke into a riot of spontaneous applause. It's been a long time since Brendel has been seen in pictures, and his appearance in the Sonja Henie skating picture was a surprise to the audience.

Darryl F. Zanuck, production chief at the studio, made a mental note of the fact that Brendel is still tops with the fans, and announced that the comedian has been given an important role in "Little Miss Broadway," starring vehicle for Shirley Temple.

Foster Signed By Universal

Universal, which recently signed Glanda Farrell and Barton MacLane, has added another important name to its roster of stars.

Preston Foster has signed a contract calling for four pictures a year for the next three years.

In all of the productions he will play the part of Detective Crane, the super crime solver of the famous Jonathan Latimer mystery story series.

Foster was signed for these Crime Club productions following his excellent portrayal of the detective character in "The Westland Case" a short time ago.

His next appearance as Detective Crane will be in "The Lady in the Morgue," one of the most intriguing of the Latimer stories.

Former Film Star Returns as Extra

One of filmdom's favorites of some years ago returned to picture work today when Julia Faye, star of many former De Mille successes, appeared on the set of "Professor, Beware!" the comedy which Harold Lloyd is now producing.

Miss Faye will be remembered best by theatergoers for her work in "Dynamite" and "The Squaw Man." She has not been in pictures since 1932, but has spent some time in Europe and in Eastern theaters.

Returning to Hollywood the first of December, she was advised by many former friends, among them Cecil B. De Mille, to start over again by taking extra and bit parts until she could re-establish herself.

DEFEAT: Orson Welles, who is planning a production of "Henry IV," lives at Sneden's Landing, the theatrical colony near the Hudson, where his neighbors are Katharine Cornell and Maurice Evans . . . The other day Welles and his wife started walking along the ice-covered shore of the river. The ice cracked, Welles fell into the water, and—after a three-mile hike back to his home—he was bundled into bed with hot-water bags, blankets, etc. . . . Mrs. Welles and the maid then served him hot tea, brandy and some chicken. The producer of "Henry IV" stared at the two women, wiped away the chicken grease from his lips, and sighed: "I think we'll postpone 'Henry IV.' Come to think of it, 'Henry the Eighth' is so much more interesting."

AMBITION: Meyer Kanin is the young New York artist whose brilliant career was interrupted when some scenery fell upon him, and affected his sight . . . His younger brother, Garson Kanin, was George Abbott's assistant until a few months ago, when he joined the Goldwyn organization to become an associate producer . . . Garson brought the Kanin family to Hollywood—all except Meyer, who had other plans. As soon as his family left, the artist, collaborating with Henry Ingraham, completed his first play, "We, the Willoughbys." John Golden has purchased it. If it's a hit, and the movies buy it, Meyer Kanin then will rejoin his family in Hollywood—as a successful playwright come to write scenarios.

• • • •

SUCCESS: Tommy Manville, whose four wives have cost him more than a million dollars, was giving some advice about women . . . "G'wan," he was told. "What do you know about woman? . . . "Well," Tommy confessed, 'all I know is what I read in my checkbook."

• • • •

FAME: Frederick Lonsdale, whose play, "Once Is Enough," opened last night, was in "21" with Charles MacArthur. As they were leaving, MacArthur sighed: "I wish I were as famous as you, Freddie—author of a show being produced by Gilbert Miller, etc." . . . "Here's your coat, Mr. MacArthur," the cloakroom boy interrupted . . . "Such fame never bothers me," Lonsdale replied to MacArthur . . . "And here," the cloakroom boy interrupted again, "is YOUR coat—Mr. Longwell."

CHANCE: Some years ago two motion picture technicians, Jack Leventhal and Jack Nerling, produced a one-reel short subject, while vacationing from their regular activities. They took that film to an exhibitor, who offered a contract for $4,000, in return for the exclusive rights . . . Before signing, however, they consulted an attorney, who advised them to wait, and approach M.-G.-M. That company finally agreed to distribute the short, on a percentage basis. It was the first of the Metro audioscopes, a new third-dimensional-effect idea. To date it has grossed $230,000. The technicians have collected $76,000.

• • • •

TRIUMPH: An elderly lady visted the Mercury Theater and watched the performance of "Julius Caesar" . . . After the show she walked to the stage, and there spoke to Martin Gabel, who portrays Brutus . . . 'I just had to tell you people," the lady confided, "how much I like what you're doing. I'm sure my husband would have liked it too. He was an actor. In fact, his greatest triumphs were in this very theater" . . . "What was his name?" Gabel asked . . . "His name," the lady informed, "was Holbrook Blinn."

• • • •

WORRY: Georgie Tapps, the dancer, who now is appearing in "I'd Rather Be Right," was told by an excited friend: "Do your best tonight. Fred Astaire is out front watching you—so you've got a big worry on your hands" . . . "That's right," Tapps agreed—paused and then replied: "No, that's wrong. Does Astaire worry about me, when I'm out front watching him?"

• • • •

ENTERPRISE: Nick the Greek has been nicking the bankrolls of some of Hollywood's most famous producers. He won $80,000 in one poker game . . . "I suppose you're happy now," Nick was told. "But how would you feel if you had lost?" . . . "You don't understand," the gambler explained. "To me, the greatest pleasure in life is playing and winning. The next greatest pleasure is playing and losing."

• • • •

MISTAKE: Joe Lewis again has been signed to appear at Mert Wertheimer's Royal Palms, in Miami . . . Last season Lewis demanded $1,250 a week, but finally agreed to accept $1,000 . . . At the end of the first week, Lewis received his salary, a check for $1,250. "Look, Mert," he said, "you made a mistake" . . . "No," Wertheimer returned. "You made the mistake."

• • • •

ROMANCE: Ina Claire saw Randolph Scott walking by, turned to her companion, and asked: "What does he do?" . . . "He's Randolph Scott," Miss Claire was informed. "You know—he's the movie star" . . . "Never mind all that," she replied. "Whenever I say: 'What does he do?,' I always mean 'To whom is he engaged?' "

Law Violators Scored in House

Auto

port of his view. He was ruled "out of order," however, and the debate taken up by the other members.

Won't Yield Floor.

"I'll yield when I've finished this chastising—and not before," declared the Pennsylvania legislator, striding from the Speakers' table and shaking his copy of The Post at other members who were trying to get the floor.

"I want the police to enforce laws against all—with no show of favoritism. But they can't do it if we don't let them. I've heard a member of Congress tongue-lash a policeman like I never heard before. Let's do our best to support police of the District by obeying the laws they're trying to enforce."

At this point, Representative Gardner R. Withrow (Democrat), of Wisconsin, interrupted to blame District authorities for incidents of so-called "Congressional immunity."

Calls For More Arrests.

"Police should arrest and prosecute any member of Congress found violating the law," he said, "if they don't, then they are the ones to blame."

Also carrying a copy of the paper, Representative William Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, chairman of a special House subcommittee on traffic, was next to gain the floor.

He took issue with Rich, explaining he was "sorry to see this chastising."

"Members of Congress," said Schulte, "are not all violators. Unfortunately, we have a few who do break the law—and they are the ones who are giving us all a bad name. I don't feel the entire House should be condemned for the actions of an evident minority."

He, too, quoted from the story, at the same time charging that Washington is "one of the wildest cities in the country as far as traffic is concerned."

Representative Jesse P. Wolcott (Republican), of Michigan, contended that police discriminate against members of Congress as "soon as they see that Congressional tag."

"I've seen a line of cars parked in violation of the law," he said, "and the only one that had a ticket bore a Congressional license plate."

Record "Improving."

Schulte told the House his subcommittee had already succeeded in reducing accidents in the District and said the record "is improving every day."

"Unfortunately," Schulte concluded, "there was a violation on the part of a member of Congress the other night. But I can't understand why the newspapers should condemn all of us for the mistakes of a few."

He lauded Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, and members of his command who are attempting to correct traffic conditions.

"The police are doing a splendid job," said Schulte. "The city is in better shape today than it ever was."

Meanwhile, police authorities refused to comment on enforcement policies against Capitol Hill lawmakers, except to deny that orders had gone out to "lay off" Congressional cars.

From various quarters, however, came reports of numerous other instances of "congressional immunity." A car with Alabama tags and congressional plates, it was reported, regularly occupies a "no parking" area near Fifteenth street and New York avenue every day about 6:30 p. m.

On one occasion, according to a witness, the driver drove into the space as it was vacated by another motorist who had been ordered to "move on" by a policeman. The congressional driver refused to leave. The police officer involved has consulted his commanding officer, it was learned, and a "courtesy" warning notice will be issued hereafter.

Another car with low-figured license plates, according to reports, has repeatedly harassed policemen in the vicinity of Capitol Hill on Maryland avenue northeast. It is owned by a Capitol employe and is frequently seen parked in violation of regulations.

It was further learned yesterday that a Western Representative who had been driving since January 1 with 1937 D. C. tags, finally has secured new plates from his home State.

When stopped by a policeman the other day, this Representative was quoted as saying:

"I'm a Congressman and I'll get my tags when and where I damn please."

By . . . HARLAN MILLER

In pursuit of autumnal beauty, one of Washington's great ladies, who is a little languid about paying her bills, submitted to an operation around her eyes . . .

Her famous surgeon confided to a friend that his fee was $11,500.

"But why such an odd, precise amount?" quizzed the friend.

• • • •

"My fee was an even $10,000," replied the surgeon. "But I knew there would be considerable trouble about collecting it, so I just added 15% for collection and attorney's fees."

• • • •

Heard outside the Maritime Commission offices yesterday:

"Those shipbuilders are including a yacht for each stockholder in the price of each freighter!"

• • • •

Gossip from Babel: Diplomats in Washington, a tableau vivant of jittery governments back home, are politely agog about which direction Hitler will spit in the world's eye in his hoarse, feverish bit of elocution next Sunday . . . One rumor lightens and brightens the situation: That Adolf Hitler may soon take a bride.

"—tale from the Berliner woods"

Der schoene Adolf resents the vile whispers of his aristocratic generals that he is too psychic, not physical enough, not a good pagan. The philoprogenitive generals think there should be little Hitlers growing up to fight the Reich's battles, as well as little Schmalzes and Schultzes.

He, himself, would like sons who could bomb Spaniards and Ethiopians and fly the South Atlantic with good pilots.

• • • •

If Herr Hitler undertakes to become a father as well as a wholesale godfather, his nuptials will be sanctified under scientific, almost laboratory, auspices; it will not be a marriage of Napoleon and Josephine, but a marriage of Napoleon and Louise . . . .

LENI RIEFENSTAL.

• • • •

It is more likely to be a Hohenzollern or Hapsburg princess who goosesteps beneath an arch of Nazi swords with Adolf than the movie fraulein, Leni Riefenstal, his platonic pal, or some other princess; it might even be a non-Nordic sprig. May all your troubles be little ones, Adolf, and plenty of 'em!

• • • •

CAPITAL NIGHTMARE: A country gentleman, entering the White House for a recent function, became acutely aware that his shoestring was untied. He eyed the military aides, then eyed his shoes and finally tripped himself on the red carpet . . . This restored his poise; he knelt calmly and tied his shoe string while the line waited.

"—once every three months"

You can see, at Twelfth and E streets in Washington a filling station on the site of the house where Whistler, the great painter and etcher, lived when he was working for the Government . . . He got canned for drawing pictures on Government time, so the legend goes.

• • • •

Since then they've put his "Mother" on an American stamp, and there are now several hundred artists dragging down more money than Whistler did, for drawing pictures, with the Government's blessing. WPA art for art's sake, $94 a month or doughnuts and coffee; and a little of it as good as Whistler.

• • • •

As every Congressman knows, the Army and Navy taboo the wearing of the uniform by the 1,000 or more officers stationed in and around Washington, for fear of scaring Congressmen into economy waves . . . So the officers wear civvies, and some of them might easily be mistaken for belligerent pacifists.

• • • •

But the Army requires each officer to wear his uniform to work, in the bureaux or at the staff schools, once every three months . . . This maintains their militant morale and gives slight color to the gag about wearing spurs to keep their feet from sliding off their desks; except that they don't wear spurs and don't keep their feet on desks.

Debate Tonight.

A debate between the University of Maryland and Bridgewater College will be the feature of the membership meeting of the American League for Peace and Democracy tonight at the Grafton Hotel, Connecticut avenue and DeSales street northwest.

1812 Society to Elect.

The Society of the War of 1812 will elect officers at the Cosmos Club tonight at 7.

Scottish Touch at Blind Workers' Fete

Businessmen Approve Joint Lobby Project

Association Hopes to 'Pester' Congress Into Heeding People.

A concerted lobby which will "pester" Congress into listening "to what people of the District think about the business privilege tax and a sales tax" was authorized last night by the Federation of Business Men's Associations, which has urged that the business tax be repealed and—if need be—a sales tax be levied to take its place.

Failure of Congress to heed previous requests to this effect was termed by John Paul Jones, delegate from Georgetown, as "another instance in which wishes of the people have been disregarded." Jones pledged himself to contact at least ten members of Congress today, to start the lobby going.

Wishes Told in Letters.

Theodore S. Grape, federation president, in expressing his approval, declared: "Those fellows on the Hill can be sold a bill of goods and if all 2,400 of our members get behind this I think we will get somewhere."

J. Nelson Anderson, counsel, reported that the reaffirmed wishes of the federation were conveyed to Congressional committees in letters delivered yesterday. In the letter Anderson restated its stand that under law the Federal Government is due to pay 40 per cent of the expenses of the District. If this law should be followed, no additional taxation would be necessary, he stated.

Suffrage Meeting March 18.

Charles A. Franklin, representing the District Suffrage Association, asked the federation to send delegates to a suffrage conference to be held at the District Building on March 18. The federation voted to send delegates who would be instructed to vote for national representation but not for local suffrage.

A talk on flying in the Navy was given by Lieut. Edward M. Blessman, of the Anacostia naval base. He depicted the rapid growth of aviation's uses and descriped some of the thrills and mishaps which come to the Navy's fliers.

H. J. Smith, president of the Georgia Avenue Business Men's Club, was in charge of the dinner and entertainment features at the Hamilton Hotel.

Criminal Justice Leader Outlines Community Needs

Three community needs for crime reduction were described yesterday by Dr. James A. Nolan, executive director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association, in a talk before the Cosmopolitan Club at the Carlton Hotel. They are:

1. Adequate child care, which keeps the children off the streets and away from improper associations. Dr. Nolan said Washington's facilities for this work are excellent and mentioned the boys' clubs, settlement houses, community centers and other organizations which cater to youth.

2. A law enforcement league composed of men and women who will not tolerate crime nor condone lawlessness. Such a league, he said, is the Washington Criminal Justice Association.

3. Care for the man or woman who has been imprisoned and is again free. He mentioned the parole board, the Bureau of Rehabilitation and other friends of the released prisoner who do this work effectively in Washington.

Dr. Nolan was introduced by A. J. Scullen, chairman of the forum committee. J. L. B. Murray presided.

Blind Society Cheers Adage, 'Love Is Blind'

"Love," the end man in the minstrel show at Epiphany Church told his audience of Workers for the Blind, 75 of whom were sightless, "is blind."

The audience rocked with laughter. The laughter continued as the end man, who was Milton Saul, reminded them that "the greatest eye-opener is marriage."

Among the members of the society meeting for their annual part at the church were many men and women who have proved themselves useful in life, despite the fact they cannot see. And whatever allusions the minstrels made to blindness, they greeted with gay good humor.

The minstrel show was entirely in blackface on the stage of the reception hall of the church. Saul was Brother Bones, of Americana, and at the other end was William Hall.

For the most part the minstrels were recruited from the American Federation of Government Employes. They are directed by Edward McGinnis, of the War Department.

After the show had ended, the audience went into the Willard Room of the church, where they danced. Refreshments were served.

Treat Abnormal Children Early, Asks Dr. Moore

Abnormalities of personality in children, often leading directly to insanity, should be treated from childhood by strengthening character to withstand the strains and stresses of life, Dr. Thomas Verner Moore, prominent psychiatrist and psychologist, declared last night in the public health forum at Georgetown University.

Non-social and catathymic defects in high school children, he said, are in the ascendency, especially among girls. Given patience with these various types of mental disorders, he said, cures can be effected if an early enough start is made in the process of changing temperament to character.

Dr. Moore said it is possible to forecast mental breakdowns considerably in advance. For this reason, he said, attention to these defects in children should be a function of education.

Dr. Moore, Benedictine monk and professor of psychology at the Catholic University, stressed that environment, more than heredity, has to do with the queer mental quirks apparent in most people. This is borne out, he claimed, in studies of the behavior of infants compared with a recheck of the behavior of the same infants several years later.

Civil Service Rule by One Head Scored

Rep. Ramspeck Attacks Change Proposed in Reorganization Bill.

Representative Robert Ramspeck, chairman of the House Civil Service Committee, told Government employes last night that he opposed the proposed change of the Civil Service Commission from its present three-man form to a single administrator. He believed the change, as recommended in the reorganization bill, would endanger the merit system in the Federal service.

His flat statement of opposition to at least this one feature of the proposed reorganization was made before more than a thousand members of the United Federal Workers of America in mass meeting at the Labor Department auditorium.

Five other speakers, Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach, Representatives John W. McCormack and Herbert Bigelow, Jacob Baker, president, U. F. W. A., and John Brophy, C. I. O. director, discussed pending Federal employe legislation, namely, the 5-day week, an appeals act for employes and the Federal Workers wage bill.

Ramspeck said he was more interested in correcting conditions where some Federal employes work "from 50 to 75 hours a week" than he is in the immediate pushing of the 5-day proposal. The overtime situation, he said, demands first attention and should "be corrected before taking up the situation of those now working 39 hours," he stated.

Until assurances come that any Administration can withstand all political pressure, the civil service set-up should be undisturbed, he said. He urged Federal employes not to put too much pressure on their friends in Congress, since public opinion has to be regarded. There are many Congressmen who have few Federal workers for constituents and there are many citizens who don't have an income of $1,200, the proposed minimum for Federal employes, he said.

"We want to go along with you, but don't push us too far—you might push us out of Congress," he declared.

Brophy, for the most part, related the advances made by the C. I. O., with which the U. F. W. A. is affiliated, and called the C. I. O.'s support "not a passive thing, but a growing, moving force."

Bigelow, speaking on a court of appeals for Federal employes, discussed the bills now in Congress; called a court "desirable," and "a progressive step in the development of industrial democracy." To have some impartial agency settling internal disputes "would save Congressmen a lot of bother," he said.

Schwellenbach held that the Government should practice in its own house what it is preaching to private industry, "the necessity of increasing the purchasing power of labor."

Baker introduced the speakers and recounted progress his organization has made since its establishment last June. McCormack discussed mechanics of the 5-day week bills now pending.

Throng Will Hear Dr. Walsh Lecture

Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president of Georgetown University was assured of capacity audiences for a series of lectures dealing with the Russian revolution and communism, the first of which will be given tonight at 8:30 in Memorial Continental Hall.

Reserved seats will not be held after 8:30 on any of the ten lecture nights, the Foreign Service School committee announced, owing to an unprecedented demand for tickets.

Dr. Walsh began lecturing on the Russian revolution and communism in 1924, after his return from service on the American and Papal relief missions in Russia.

Graduates Hear How Harvard Averted Constitution's Defeat

Distinguished Alumni Tell Club of Fight on Ratification in Massachusetts; Five Participants in Drafting Described.

The vital part played by Harvard men in drafting and ratifying the Constitution was outlined last night by distinguished Harvard graduates at a meeting of the Harvard Club in the National Archives Auditorium.

Massachusetts, the first important State to ratify the Constitution, approved the instrument by only 1" votes, Charles Warren, '39, noted American historian, pointed out. Of the 80 Harvard graduates in the ratifying convention, he said, 72 voted in favor of the Constitution, and these 72 made up 40 per cent of the total affirmative vote of 187. Massachusetts' ratification took place almost exactly 150 years ago, February 6, 1788.

Warren told his audience of 225 that if the Constitution had been sent to the State Legislatures instead of to the people for their approval, it would never have been ratified.

Austin H. Clark, '03, of the Smithsonian Institution, gave biographical sketches of five Harvard participants in the making of the Constitution: Caleb Strong, Elbridge Gerry, Rufus King, William S. Johnson and Benjamin Franklin (who held an honorary degree.)

The part played by Harvard men in the Constitutional Convention was described by Louis W. McKernan, '13. Frederic A. Delano, '85, was chairman of the meeting, and William R. Vallance, '12, assistant to the legal adviser of the State Department, was chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Two motion pictures were shown: "Give Me Liberty" and "Servants of the People."

Jefferson's Memorial Up To Roosevelt

Final agreement on a design and site for a memorial to Thomas Jefferson awaits only the approval of President Roosevelt, Representative Boylan (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission, announced yesterday following a second meeting.

While details of the new plan are being kept secret by the members, it is understood it calls for a new design, similar but more modest than the marble temple proposed by the late John Russell Pope.

The site, it is said, is southeast of the Tidal Basin, which originally was chosen for the memorial, and probably would necessitate the relocating of the lower part of Fourteenth street. Few if any of the famed cherry trees skirting the basin would be disturbed.

"We seem to be approaching a final agreement on this matter," Boylan said, "after consultation with the Fine Arts Commission and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

"Final decision will not be reached until after a consultation with the President."

Boylan was named chairman of a committee to call on Mr. Roosevelt. The other members are Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah; Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, and Fisk Kimball, of the Fine Arts Commission.

Representative Boylan said he would try to make an engagement with the President today.

The architects who have taken over the firm formerly headed by Pope have submitted a new design for the memorial to the commission, it is understood, and it is this which will be submitted to Mr. Roosevelt.

The design is similar to the Pope memorial, in that it has a dome as the central feature. The elaborate approaches and supporting arches, however, have been eliminated.

The tract agreed upon by the commission as a site for the memorial is in East Potomac Park between the Tidal Basin, Fourteenth street and the Potomac River. It is now largely taken up by tennis courts and a baseball diamond.

Whether the memorial will cost $3,000,000, as originally proposed, is conjectural. The President has told members of Congress he favors a simple and comparatively inexpensive memorial.

Expand Yards To Build Navy, Congress Urged

Admiral Du Bose Seeks Facilities to Complete Program in 4 Years.

By the Associated Press.

The Navy asked Congress yesterday to increase the facilities at every navy yard to permit completion of the proposed 20 per cent expansion of the fleet within a "reasonable" time.

Rear Admiral William G. Du Bose, chief of naval construction, told the House Naval Affairs Committee the improvements are essential if the building program is to be carried out expeditiously.

At the same time, Du Bose said the estimated cost of the fleet expansion would be about $1,050,000,000.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, of the Naval Committee originally had estimated the 47 new warships and 22 auxiliary vessels would cost about $300,000,000.

Contract Changes Weighed.

When Representative McGrath (Democrat), of California, asked Admiral Du Bose whether he would favor Government-financed improvement of private shipyards, Du Bose said he would leave that to Congress.

Representative Hamilton (Democrat), of Virginia, said later he would offer an amendment restricting Du Bose's suggestion to navy yards. He said the Navy Department already is considering improving the Norfolk Navy Yard at an ultimate cost of $10,000,000 to $12,000,000.

In response to questions concerning the probable effect of the Walsh-Healey Government contracts act and other legislation on the cost of naval vessels built in private yards, Du Bose said the Navy Department was consulting priate builders and looking toward modification of construction contracts in the hope that bids under the new program would be "reasonable."

Kennedy Assails Costs.

(Shortly after Du Bose testified, Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Maritime Commission, declared high bids by private shipyards threaten ot "balk our program for the rehabilitation of the American merchant marine." His commission, he disclosed, has virtually decided to reject all bids received for 12 cargo vessels.)

Du Bose estimated that with the proposed new facilities in navy yards, the Navy could complete its projected building in three or four years, including the ships already authorized.

More Witnesses Slated.

The committee voted to set aside two more days for opposition witnesses and to hear Dr. Mauritz Hallgren, Baltimore editorial writer; Benjamin P. Marsh, of the people's lobby; Dr. Thomas Healey, and Bouke Carter, radio commentator, and Lester P. Barlow, Stamford, Conn., inventor.

State Department officials said yesterday consultations among the United States, Britain and France on the question of building bigger battleships have not yet begun.

They said they were awaiting an initial move from Britain, London being the depository of the London Naval Treaty of 1936.

Walter Named Police Captain At White House

Succeeds Capt. Dalrymple; McCubbin Is Advanced to Lieutenantcy.

Lieut. A. L. Walter yesterday was promoted to the captaincy of the White House police staff, filling the vacancy caused by the death of Capt. Clarence L. Dalrymple February 4.

J. M. D. McCubbin was advanced from senior sergeant to lieutenant, and Acting Sergeant Ole Jacobson became full sergeant. Sergeants H. L. Marcey and V. M. Costello moved, respectively, to senior sergeant and second sergeant.

A member of the White House force since 1916, Capt. Walter was promoted to sergeant in 1922 and to lieutenant on October 1, 1937, when Lieut. E. M. Seamon retired. Walter entered the Metropolitan Police Department in 1903. Born in Fauquier County, Va., he now lives at 510 Third street southeast.

McCubbin became a member of the Metropolitan Police force in 1908, and was assigned to the White House 14 years later. He became a sergeant in 1930. Jacobsen, who joined the Metropolitan Police force in 1915, and came to the White House in 1924, was appointed acting sergeant last October.

Marcey entered the Park Police service in 1917, and received his White House assignment in 1922.

Dr. Williams to Talk.

Dr. Maynard Owen Williams, of the National Geographic Society, will speak to the Reciprocity Club of Washington at a luncheon meeting at 12:30 p. m. today.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Interior Department Recreation Association presents Ervine Stenson in a piano recital in the department auditorium. Program: Prelude in C minor, B flat major and G minor, Polonaise in G sharp minor, Mazurek, Op. 30, No. 3; Scherzo in B flat minor (Chopin), "Carneval" (Grieg), "Ballade Slav" (Debussy), "Danza Espanola" Granados), "Zambra" (Turina), Two Preludes (George Gershwin), "The Scissors-Grinder" (David Guion), "Poem" (Deems Taylor), "Aesthetics of Machinery" (Louis Danz), "Octave Study" (Louis Campbell Tipton.)

A fair-sized audience assembled last evening for the third program offered this season by the Interior Department Recreation Association, but interest is not yet as general as it should be in these events designed to acquaint the public with some of the talent to be found among government employes. No financial considerations of any kind are involved on either side, as the musicians are not of professional standing and auditors may attend without let or hindrance in the shape of tickets.

Some of us remember Ervine Stenson as a professional accompanist not very many years ago, and are pleased to know that absorption in other affairs has not resulted in his abandonment of music as an avocation. He has what the French so gallantly call "les beaux rests" of a skillful technique and his playing gives enjoyment to those who do not demand virtuosity as well as good tone and intelligent interpretation.

That his zest for music is keen was evident in his choice of compositions for the informal recital. He avoided the hackneyed even in his Chopin group which contained the G sharp minor Polonaise and one of the less familiar Mazureks. All the frequently performed pieces of Debussy were put aside in favor of the "Ballade Slav," an early work in which the composer's individuality was just emerging from the influence of Massenet. And the dances by Enrique Granados and Joaquin Turina were not those commonly in the pianist's repertoire.

His final group, devoted to American composers, brought forward music practically unknown to frequenters of recitals. There were two of George Gershwin's delightfully satiric preludes in which jazz flirts with the steidly classical, and a completely romantic "Poem" by Deems Taylor. "The Scissors-Grinder," a descriptive sketch by David Guion, was a welcome change from "Turkey-in-the-Straw." Louis Campbell Tipton's attractive octave study served as a reminder that he has written other things than songs. The "Aesthetics of Machinery" by Louis Danz, divorced from the impossible ambition of its title, proved a diverting exercise in mild dissonance.

Curran Brands As Lie Claim He Is a Communist

Maritime Union Head Praises Bridges, Who Faces Deportation.

Joseph Curran, head of the C. I. O.'s National Maritime Union, yesterday branded as a "lie" the charge that he was a Communist. At the same time before the Senate Commerce Committee he praised Communists for what they have done for American workers.

Curran praised Harry Bridges, West Coast longshoremen's leader and C. I. O. agent, who apparently soon is to face deportation proceedings.

Says 28 of Men Slain.

The charge that Curran and Bridges were Communists was made before the committee recently by Joseph P. Ryan, head of the A. F. L. International Longshoremen's Association.

Curran told the committee that 28 of his union members have been killed and 163 seriously injured in the past two years. Of these, he said, 17 were killed and 125 injured on waterfront picket lines.

"We believe we can prove these deaths can be traced to Joseph P. Ryan," Curran said.

Two longshoremen who have broken with Ryan, John F. Sheehan and Bernard Tunney, joined in denouncing him and at the same time voiced opposition to the bill for settling maritime labor disputes through mediation.

Communism Minimized.

Tunney gave this argument:

"We are in favor of settling our own disputes with the ship owners. What good is a union if you have a mediation board."

A report on hearings held by a House appropriations subcommittee, made public yesterday, showed that Secreary of Labor Perkins minimized the presence of communism in the merchant marine.

"I think we are unduly alarmed," she said. "American seamen seem to be just like all other Americans, good and sensible people."

Recession Forcing HOLC to Foreclose

By the Associated Press.

Uncle Sam, at the end of 1937, owned 71,733 homes through foreclosure, or about 50,500 more than a year before, records of the Home Owners Loan Corporation showed yesterday.

For several months prior to November 30, 1937, HOLC collections averaged more than 92 per cent of total billings, it was said, but the recent business decline has cast a shadow across present prospects. It was explained that more than 88 per cent of the corporation's foreclosures were started only after borrowers were delinquent more than a year.

Aid Society Saves 349 Families From Becoming Stranded

Without the help of the Travelers' Aid Society, 349 families might have been stranded in Washington without means during the last month, the society's board of directors was told by its executive secretary, Mrs. Margaret Ford, at a meeting yesterday at the organization's headquarters, 612 E street northwest.

Almost 2,800 persons have been helped by the society in the month, Mrs. Ford said. The information service maintained at Union Station was sufficient aid for 1,802 of the travelers, she said, but 1,078 persons—representing 456 families—were in serious difficulties.

The society is keeping in close touch with the remaining 107 families and believes that they soon will be cared for so that they will not burden Washington's overloaded welfare agencies, Mrs. Ford declared.

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, president, was in charge of the meeting.

Stars of Films Among Patrons Of Night Spots

By Chanticleer

Washington is being exposed to Hollywood glamour this week. At the Lotus it's Jeanette and Kalam, who have just completed a picture for Paramount. You probably remember their last effort, shown at a local theater the same week as "Hurricane." Their dance routines are smooth and effortless and up to Hollywood standards. Also featured are the Miracle Girls of 1939 and a tap trio, the Renny Brothers and Mayband.

The Troika, which we have always considered superb insofar as atmosphere and entertainment are concerned, was visited last night by three famed musicians. After the symphony concert, Mischa Elman, Hans Kindler and Micolai Berezowsky, the new Russian composer who conducted his own composition at the concert, stopped in. Mischa Elman has been in each of the three night he has spent here.

Not to be overlooked at the Troika is their famed cuisine. Exotic hors d'oeuvres, featuring much imported caviar, aromatic borscht with native Russian pirojok, and cutlets de volaille Moscovite (breast of chicken stuffed with delicate mushrooms and capers) are ambrosia to the American palate.

Discovered at the Shoreham last night—Washington's Eddie Duchin. When Barnee the popular m. c. does his specialty number at the piano, this famous maestro could well take notice. Such talent demands recognition.

The Winter Garden Revue at the Bamboo Gardens features a "Military Parade of Nations." Hammond and O'Friel do a smooth Argentine tango. Other highlights are an eccentric toe number by Dottie Dunn and an acrobatic control dance by Ginger Harris.

Celebrities have been popping up in Washington all week. At the Shar-zad Room of the Carlton Monday the Gary Coopers, of movie fame, enjoyed dinner with a party of eight. At the Mayflower the striking Ann Harding and her husband, Werner Jannsen, caused quite a sensation.

The Crown Grill announces opening of a new show headed by the Dixie Debs, formerly of stage and screen. Four beautiful girls will dance and sing for your entertainment.

At the Raleigh's Pall Mall Room, the party you've been waiting for is next Wednesday. It's the "Cruise of the Good Ship Pall Mall." The dance floor becomes the deck of the sea-going yacht and the band stand the bridge, from which "Skipper" Eddie Daniels and his rhythm-making crew navigate. The "Captain of the Galley," Chef Claude Jarring, promises some national dishes of the countries visited.

The Valentine party at the Wardman Park's Metronome Room was such a success that Manager George Johnson is planning a birthday party the night of February 22, with no change in prices.

The new barytone at the Mayfair, Perry Martin, is certainly putting life into the drab evenings of hard-working Washingtonians who stop by during afternoon or evening.

The new trio, the Music Masters, opened this week at the Hi Hat. They have only been singing a few days, but patrons seem pleased. Donald Carr, the operatic vocalist, and Dick Reger, novelty soloist, are reasons.

At the Hamilton's Rainbow Room Milt Davis and orchestra continue to provide the type of music patrons like for dancing.

S. C. V. Camp Elects.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 17.—The R. T. W. Duke Camp, Sons of Confederate Veterans, has elected M. V. Pence, local druggist, as commander. Other officers chosen were: J. F. Minor, vice commander; Rev. W. Roy Mason, D. D., chaplain; William W. Waddell, treasurer, and J. Fred Harlan, adjutant.

6,000 Tenants Get U.S. Aid in Buying

Federal land bank and Land Bank Commissioner loans enabled approximately 6,000 tenants to buy farms in 1937, F. F. Hill, deputy governor of the Farm Credit Administration, said yesterday.

Hill said although the volume of new land bank and commissioner loans declined last year, due to the smaller demand for refinancing, a much larger percentage of the money went to help buy farms. Loans to finance farm purchases accounted for 23.7 per cent of 1937 loans compared to 15.9 per cent of the 1936 total.

'Rookie' Officer Saves Gas Victim By Flying Tackle

The life of a "rookie" policeman is not easy, and depends, to a large extent, upon his resourcefulness, Private Edwin Talbot reflected last night.

Earlier in the evening, Talbot, just graduated, among other things from the Red Cross School, was sent to the home of Mrs. Martha Elizabeth Cooper, 37, of 2307 Thirty-ninth street northwest. He found her overcome by gas and gave her first aid.

While he was preparing to take her to the hospital, she ran for her window, and tried to jump to the street, two floors below. But a flying tackle, stopped her.

Mrs. Cooper was then taken to Gallinger Hospital.

'American Dreyfus' Is Here In Effort to Clear His Name

Oberlin M. Carter, Dismissed From Army in 1898, Is 81 Now.

A forty-year search for vindication yesterday brought to the Capital a man who calls himself "the American Dreyfus."

Dismissed from the army, fined $5,000 and sentenced to five years in Leavenworth in 1898, Oberlin M. Carter, today 81, still hopes to clear his name of charges which, he contends, were based purely on personal jealousy and political expediency.

Behind Carter's present mission to Washington lie more than 55,000 pages of evidence in War and Justice Department files, 27 rulings in Federal courts and numerous petitions to Presidents and Congressional committees.

Proud of His Work.

"They"—the powers that block his pursuit of justice—"know I'm an old man now . . . They are waiting for me to die, and then the case will be closed," Carter said.

But his erect carriage, flashing eye, impassioned voice and crystal-clear recollection of the dates, names and places which figure in his 40-year fight belie any suggestion that the long battle will end by default.

"I was a young captain of engineers," he begins, recalling the $3,500,000 improvement of the Savannah Harbor which he supervised in the nineties. He speaks with modest pride of the praise which his execution of the project drew from civil engineers all over the world.

Those were years of achievement, he remembers, climaxed by appointment as military attache to the American Embassy in London and then as Army engineer on the Isthmian Canal Commission.

A National Sensation.

But Carter was only a few hours out of New York, bound for London, when his successor at Savannah claimed to have uncovered evidence of fraud in contracts let by the brilliant engineer.

Within a few months the Carter case had become a national sensation. When President McKinley finally approved the court-martial's verdict against Carter—he smiles wryly—"the story nearly crowded Admiral Dewey's return to New York off the front pages."

CAPT. OBERLIN M. CARTER.

Tried to Serve in France.

"During the war I tried in every way to get to France, to serve my country as a private soldier. But they wouldn't let me."

The latest move in Carter's long struggle for vindication came yesterday when a dozen sympathetic representatives listened to his story at a luncheon in the Speaker's dining room of the Capitol.

Last night the 81-year-old soldier talked with enthusiasm of these new friends of his cause and pledged that his fight would not end until "every false charge has been cleared from the records."

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am asking for your advice, hoping it will benefit my 22-year-old son, who, at present, is driving a truck for a living. He keeps company with a 15-year-old high school girl every night, staying out until 11:30 or 12:30 o'clock. I have talked against the situation until I am blue in the face, and it does no good. He tells me they are to be married this coming June. What sort of mother do you suppose this girl has? My son has finished high school and one year's college work.

MARYANNA.

* * * *

DEAR MARYANNA: As a self-supporting young man of legal age, your son in warranted in taking the reins of his life in his own hands. It is not for you to tell him whom he shall or shall not marry. It is worse than useless to try to restrain him with verbal bullying and exhortation. By your militant objections, you are probably only adding fuel to the flame of his determination to marry his adolescent sweetheart. It is just possible that if you had kept hands off this youthful love affair from the very beginning, had kept your apprehensions, disapproval and disappointment to yourself, it would have played itself out in time.

* * * *

Your son's decision to marry, at such an early age, a girl so much younger than himself, may be nothing more nor less than reckless revolt against too much maternal management. Maybe you have been leading him around by the nose all his life, so that he yearns toward marriage as an escape from intolerable interference in his private life. Maybe the girl's greatest appeal to him is the fact that she is so young that she looks up to him as a person much wiser, older and more competent than herself; as a full grown man, in other words. Maybe you have always treated him, and still treat him, as a little boy who hasn't sense enough to come in out of the rain unless he is ordered to do so. This probably is a plain case of a man's being about to jump from the frying pan into the fire—but it may not be so much the boy's or the girl's fault as you think.

* * * *

I have no idea what sort of person the girl's mother is. I suggest you find out where she can be reached, and then arrange a meeting with her for the purpose of discussing diplomatic ways and means of preventing, or at least delaying as long as possible, this cradle-snatching marriage. It may be she is as seriously desirous of preventing it as you are, but is employing hands-off tactics rather than loud-spoken opposition. I must admit that superficial evidence, such as permitting her school girl daughter to be out every night until midnight or after, would indicate that she doesn't take the responsibilities of parenthood as seriously as you do. On the other hand, however, she may have an extremely headstrong daughter, who is emotionally matured beyond her years, and for whom she sees early marriage as not only inevitable but the best social protection. I think you will be wise in withholding judgment on her until after you have met and talked with her.

* * * *

I cannot see that there is much that you can do, of a forthright nature, to change your son's mind about the girl, or his plans to marry in June. I can only suggest that you drop the aggressively obstructive attitude, and show a tolerant, sympathetic interest in his marriage plans. You might have him bring the girl to your home, and have a friendly, kindly talk with both, in which you could point out to them the hazards and unseemly burdens of early marriage on a pitifully limited income.

Story for 'Constant Reader.'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The letter from "Constant Reader," published in your column of February 15, spurs me to comment. Once I was confronted with making a decision in a problem identical with hers. She says she is engaged to be married soon to a boy of 23; that she is an office worker and he a manual laborer, and that while he is "one of the nicest boys she has ever known," and she cares for him a great deal; nevertheless she knows she doesn't love him. She wonders whether to go ahead with marriage or to break off. I want to tell her about myself and what I did. It may help her.

* * * *

A year ago I met a man with "only an eighth grade education." He, too, was a "manual laborer, making about $30 a week." Like "Constant Reader's" fiance, he was somewhat "self-conscious" about his lack of education, and "lacking in self-confidence." Knowing these things, I was, naturally, skeptical about taking his marriage proposal seriously, for I, like "Constant Reader," am a professional woman, with a background of travel and knowledge of foreign languages, earning a good income. The man didn't even speak good English. I had the prejudices of my family to contend with—and yet I married the man.

* * * *

I married him because he was kind, lovable, fundamentally intelligent; because he was sympathetic, interesting and congenial; because, well, because I knew I should. I knew, too, that I didn't love him, but that didn't deter me. "Love comes with knowing a person," I thought; and you can't know a person until you live with him. Don't tell me persons have to be "in love" before marriage in order to find happiness with each other. How long does love last, anyway — that romantic, beautiful attraction? Two years at best, in most cases.

* * * *

It is the different kind of love which grows out of marriage that endures like the Rock of Ages. It is the love which flowers from struggling, sacrificing, from building together day by day a life together that really means something. Common interests, a common goal and the will to be happy are all you need for a starter. Good men are as rare as blue diamonds and as hard to find. What matter if a man be poor and uneducated if he has character, the will to succeed, if he loves you, and if you know you can help him realize his ambitions?

* * * *

"Constant Reader" wonders if two persons can live on $30 a week? Well, I know we live on that amount in Washington, and certainly it can be done in Baltimore, where the scale of living is so much cheaper. Since we have been married my husband not only goes to night school, but studies with a private tutor. It can no longer be said that he doesn't speak good English. And with all my formal education, he is far better informed than I, and intellectually so far superior to me that there is no danger in our household of the husband's having an "inferiority complex."

* * * *

I hope you see fit to print this and that "Constant Reader" will be interested, even though she draws neither help nor moral from it. Incidentally, I might suggest that one probable reason for our being so happy together is the fact that I had the inferiority complex to begin with.

The Pill Box in Spring Dress

MEET the new spring pill-box! It is a large daisy crown, interpreted in white or pastel tints, and finished with a piquant little veil of fine black mesh. Just the hat to give dash to your dark winter ensemble or added charm to your new spring costume. A chapeau to flatter a woman of any age!

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Feb. 17.

WHAT A BLESSED relief it is, now and then, to poke the head out of the meringue and come face to face with some girls who do something besides tilt the nose at swanky caviar-bars and struggle coyly to get into camera range at supper-clubs!

ALICE HUGHES.

That's why I enjoyed getting a free shot at Miss Fredericka Martin, R. N., who is just back from a year in a Spanish hospital, where she and six of her gallant ministering angels have been dressing and soothing the wounded in that horrible fraternal conflict, with a lot of non-relatives piling on.

Miss Martin's various hospitals are on the loyalist side, and financed by a group of American believers in what might seem an obsolete idea called "democracy." She is one of 58 American girls serving battered humanity in that gore-drenched and miserable land. But she had a big smile for the cameras!

"It hasn't been easy," says Miss Fredericka. "In air attacks we have to work by flashlight, and our hospitals have been much under fire. We have no meat, but mule flesh. But our girls, and their Spanish helpers, are brave and high-hearted!"

Now this girl, who received her training in Jersey City, is off on a tour to raise funds for the work, and will begin her labors on the West Coast. It isn't a matter of political economy, or clashing systems—it's a matter of binding the wounds of broken men, whatever the color of their ideas.

It is both slightly disheartening and yet very encouraging to meet up with such a woman as Miss Fredericka Martin. It makes us feel useless, trivial and entirely dispensable—and at the same time happy that such sisters do live and do serve when the need is vital—where "the harvest is great, and the laborers few."

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Though this is considered an offish season along the Hudson's fascinating docks, I saw an amazing sight not long ago—six ocean whippets at adjoining piers, from the little Berlin to the enormous Europa and Normandie. And before you could say "Toodle-oo," three of them darted away on cruises, toting 2,881 bodies and quite a few souls, no doubt. Think of it! I don't want to, because the very thought makes my feet itch unbearably! Desk tied! And the swells cruise now, instead of just we working people snatching a brief breath and bit of sun. When such nifties as Mrs. Dodge Sloan and Mrs. Mary Duke Biddle go ca-rusing, the thing must be considered definitely in, smart all right for the very best question-mark people!

* * * *

Grover Whalen, our handsome and alert prexy of the World's Fair, says the expo opening should rival Britain's recent coronation in pomp and ceremony. All right, Grove my friend, with the king business limp as it is, why not shop Europe for an unhorsed monarch now in reduced circumstances? Is Alfonso doing anything right now? Would it be possible to coax the Duke of W-nds-r? Let's do this thing right! Think of W-ll-s as customer-bait!

* * * *

My business takes me sometimes among costly jewels, but the other night I saw the beat of them all. These hunks of costly rock adorned the person of Mrs. Frank Vance Storrs, who was tossing a luscious shindig at the Rainbow Room before gettin' on a boat. Her amazing emeralds and other sparkling gewgaws were so wondrous that Jack Rockefeller could have turned off the electic lights and cut his monthly juice bill. Ah well, let 'em eat rubies!

* * * *

Gertrude Lawrence, of "Susan and God," is showing signs of wear and tear! I learn that she is abandoning Monday shows so that she can get away from it all, and restore her tissues during long week-ends. Her first stop was Montreal. Pull yourself together, Gertie old girl!

Two local ladies named Rinehart and Waters have hit on a crafty idea an' name for a business plunge. They call their stunt "Exterior Decorators," and they aim to visit other women, go over their wardrobes, discuss such sordid matters as clothes budgets, co-ordinate clothes and accessories, and see that you reach the best shops for your needs. You may have something, girls!

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Types of Toothache.

There are several kinds of so-called toothache, says a bulletin of the Dental Institute of America today, and at least three are not toothache at all. Of the latter, two are actually jawaches, one responding quickly to treatment and the other taking a longer period.

"The first," says the institute, "is associated with pyorrheal abscesses, with the cause external to the teeth. Gum tissues and bony support of the tooth become detached from the tooth root. A 'pocket' forms along the root, accumulating food debris which gives rise to infection. The tooth becomes loose and the twisting force of chewing may injure the remaining supporting tissues, or food may slip into the pocket and ac like a splinter in the finger, setting up an inflammatory attack. Extraction is the quickest and surest relief and recovery is usually prompt."

The second condition cited involves a dead tooth, one with a recently dead nerve or with its nerve long removed. Infection at the root end has developed anew. This tooth may have been a chronic offender over a long period without becoming sufficiently sore to force attention, it is stated.

"But one day when the bodily vitality has been lowered the condition becomes acute, the jaw swells and fever develops," says the institute. "Then the patient is sick, for infection has invaded the bone beyond the root end. More by-products of this infection are being generated than the blood stream can carry away and an acute abscess is formed, necessitating skillful care by the attending dentist.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

The Art of Conversation.

LESSON I.

"Are you a New Dealer, Mr. Poppin?"

"Me a New Dealer! Say, I would not be caught dead with that bunch of lousy Reds. Don't tell me you're one?"

"I—well, I really think the New Deal has done some very fine things——"

"Say, let me tell you something! This Administration is the craziest, the rottenest, the most corrupt, the most asinine——"

"Oh, Mr. Poppin!"

"I mean it! Listen here. Two more years of this and the country'll be bankrupt."

"You don't say!"

"Yes. Let me ask you this: Where are we going to get the money to pay this $37,000,000,000 debt?"

"Well—I hadn't thought of that."

"You women never think of those things. You're all theorists."

"I suppose we ARE rather impractical."

"Another thing, how are we going to have any prosperity when business is taxed to death?"

"I hadn't thought of that either."

"Besides, we've got to save the American system. You see it's all a matter of fundamental economics."

"You're really making me see things in a new light, Mr. Poppin."

"That's the way to talk. The trouble with you women is you're always taken in by everything new that comes along."

"You're exactly right, Mr. Poppin, I DO want to thank you for giving me a new slant on things."

"That's right. Think for yourself."

"I see things SO differently now, Mr. Poppin. It's all been SO interesting. Thank you SO much."

LESSON II.

"What do you think of the Republican coalition, Mr. Perky?"

"I think it's the lousiest, most pernicious, most antediluvian——"

"Oh, Mr. Perky!"

"Don't tell me you're for that bunch of fossils?"

"I—well, I think they have some very sound ideas."

"You do! Let me tell you something. That bunch of Tories if they keep on will bring this country to revolution."

"You don't mean it?"

"Yes. All those fat royal economists want is to reduce the free workingman to a state of peasantry."

"Well—I hadn't thought of that."

"Of course not! You women are all a bunch of conservatives."

"Well, I suppose we ARE a little afraid of anything new."

"Exactly. Let me tell you something. The only reason this country is having a depression is because Big Business is on strike."

"No!"

"Yes! Did you know this country was ruled by Sixty Families?"

"Why I never DREAMED it! That puts an entirely new light on things."

"Another thing, we've got to preserve the principles of Thomas Jefferson."

"I believe you're right."

"You see, it's all a matter of fundamental democracy."

"Oh, yes! You know I'm really beginning to see things MUCH differently, Mr. Perky."

"That's right. Think for yourself. The trouble with you women is you always accept things just as they are."

"You're exactly right, Mr. Perky. You've opened up an entirely new viewpoint to me. It's all been SO interesting. Thank you SO much?"

Dash of Gypsy Adds To Spring's Finery

Paris (AP).—Romany style dresses in brilliant organdie prints gave a dash of gypsy coloring and design to smart new clothes in the latest summer collections displayed by Paris fashion houses.

Full-skirted evening models in the Paquin collection contrasted strikingly with straight, tight, evening tailleurs in jerseys with narrow skirts, slit to a semblance of masculine trousers.

Some tailored evening jackets were trimmed with mirror glass or starched lace.

Wide-skirted white chiffon frocks were crinoline stiffened and trimmed with black laces or paillettes. Thick, shiny ruches of transparent material outlined black chiffon skirts and bordered fans.

Evening wraps included capes of Titian red fox and large, pointed shawl capes of silver fox.

Dietitian Urges Rigid Rules to Aid Profession

More Careful Selection of Candidates Proposed to Raise Standard.

IF YOU CONSIDER a dietitian as someone interested only in vitamins, minerals, calories and therapeutic diets, then you have the wrong conception of her, according to Miss Anna M. Tracy, dietitian in charge, Florida State College for Women and new president-elect of the National Dietetic Association.

In an address Tuesday night at a joint banquet of the Home Economics Club and the District Dietetic Association at the Dodge Hotel Miss Tracy pointed out that the modern dietitian is a realist who combines her knowledge of health with executive ability and is interested not only in providing meals that will be popular and healthful, but also in seeing that the business of serving food is profitable and paying.

"I find that the modern dietitian is setting a new standard for the future," she said. "The problem today is to provide good training and background for those who have the ability to become good dietitians."

Hospitals Best Schools.

Pointing out that the best type of training is as yet unsettled, she said: "At present the system of hospital apprenticeship is considered the most satisfactory way to bridge the gap between the classroom and the practical application of this theoretical knowledge in the service of food.

"There is a wide field for trained dietitians. Not only in hospitals, but also in college dormitories, and in lunchrooms there are many well paying jobs available."

Some of the qualifications necessary for a dietitian, according to Miss Tracy, are good health, a love of good food, a healthy curiosity as to how things work—and ability to deal with people. Superiors, equals—and those who must be supervised.

Selection More Rigid.

"In the past, some of the failures have been due to lack of training," she said. "I find that girls who entered training in the past haven't been able to draw conclusions from the job at hand. In some cases, even the food habits have been poor. It is impossible to teach the thing that one doesn't put in practice in one's own life."

Miss Tracy said the modern method of selecting home economics students for dietetic internship should be made more rigid.

"Every trained dietitian who is unsuccessful lowers the standards of the profession," she said. "It is unfair to the girl, as it means ten months of her life spent in a futile attempt to train for a position she is not adapted to fill."

In her appraisal of the situation, Miss Tracy advocates closer cooperation between college training and hospital internship.

Broiled Grapefruit.

Cut grapefruits in half. Discard the seeds and sprinkle each half of the grapefruit with one tablespoon of brown sugar, one teaspoon of butter and an eighth of a teaspoon of salt. Broil for five minutes—or until the tops are brown. Serve as an appetizer or dessert, warm or chilled.

Plump Persons Held Best 'Clotheshorses'

'Figurologist' Terms Bones Harder to Conceal.

Don't be discourage if you are in the classification called plump, ofr an authority on corseting who is available in a Washington store this week for consultations, claims that the fat person is much easier to fit than the extremely thin one.

Flesh can be molded easily and successfully she contends but it is most difficult to try to conceal bones. It is all done by proportions, using measurements of the figure as a working basis upon which to build a pleasing silhouette.

This scientific analysis is called "figre-ology" and emphasizes an uplift bustline, flat diaphram, long torso, flattened hips and abdomen and slightly concave midriff. It does not aim to make you streamlined or slim, that is if your figure and general build do not warrant such transformation.

The main consideration, according to his corset expert, is the right foundation garment or girdle and bra for your own particular figpre, which is properly fitted to gie an attractive silhouette and a maximum of comfort.

New garments are being presented for spring and summer—light in weight, either lightly boned or sans bones entirely. These have been designed for figures ranging from the junior miss to extra-large sizes and are as lovely to look at as they are emcient in their figure molding construction.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Sonja Henie, Glamour Girl Is Healthiest Star in Movies.

By Ida Jean Kain.

UP TO NOW glamour has somehow been associated with anemia, but Sonja Henie, who is Hollywood's latest glamour girl, is the healthiest star in the movies. While the languid beauty takes a rest cure between pictures, Sonja goes off on a skating tour.

This career of Sonja's is, in itself, a health and beauty program, and the only activity on a par with swimming for making the figure lovely. Skating strengthens the leg muscles, slims the hips and waistline, beautifies the arms and shoulders and paints roses in the cheeks. What more could you ask of a sport?

Legs Beautiful, Too.

Perfect measurements are one reason the ice queen cuts such a fine figure on skates. Her waistline is 26½ inches, bust 34 inches, hips 35¾ inches. With a waist 8 inches smaller than the bust and a hipline less than 2 inches larger than the bust, there is no question of symmetry. To have that kind of figure, exercise must be either a career or a hobby, and stenographers have to work overtime for their streamlines!

Extra Beauty on Skates.

The Sonja Henie who is photographed stepping off trains is very attractive indeed, but she is not in the same class with Sonja on skates. When this star flashes across the ice her entire personality lights up and she scintillates with an extra beauty.

Health is her most precious possession and she guards it well. Cigarettes and cocktails are not for her, and she gets her full quota of sleep every night. Even so, the strenuous life imposed by her tour has recently caused her to lose weight. It is one thing to skate for fun, as she usually does for three hours a day, and quite another to be on one's toes for thousands of people. Ordinarily her work-out leaves Sonja refreshed, because she has learned the secret of relaxing while she skates.

One Hour Will Help.

We can all take a lesson from this new glamour girl. For the average woman three hours' activity out-of-doors is an impossibility, but if the business woman will spend one hour in outdoor exercise, both her looks and career would benefit. You may not be able to engage in winter sports, but you can walk for an hour each day. This one health rule will do more for your looks than all the expensive beauty aids.

Pie Recipe Prize Goes To Winchester Woman

Mrs. Lucy Douglass Wins Post's Contest With Instructions for Lemon Cream; Coconut, Butterscotch Also Popular.

LEMON CREAM was the favorite in The Post's meringue pie recipe contest. Exactly 50 recipes were received for preparing either lemon cream or lemon chiffon pie. Coconut custard was second in popularity, butterscotch, banana, pineapple, pumpkin and peach custard were also outstanding favorites.

Choosing a winning recipe for lemon pie was difficult. The one selected is as light and airy as chiffon and since the price of eggs is decreasing it should not be too expensive for the average budget.

JEAN GREEN.

The recipe was entered by Mrs. Lucy Douglass, 608 West Cork street, Winchester, Va.

Lemon Pie.

6 eggs separated
1 cup of sugar
Juice of 2 lemons and the grated rind of 1
1 tablespoon of butter

Separate the 6 eggs and reserve 2 egg whites for the meringue. Beat the yolks. Stir in the sugar. Add the lemon juice and grated rind, the butter, and cook over hot water until thick. Stir constantly. Add this mixture to the stiffly beaten whites of the four eggs. Return to the double boiler for a few minutes. Cool. Pour into a baked pie crust, and top with a meringue made of the two egg whites stiffly beaten with 2 tablespoons of sugar, being careful to bring it to the crust around the edge of the pie. Brown in a moderate oven (350 degrees for 10 to 15 minutes).

The winning recipe for the second most popular pie was sent in by Mrs. Allan Robey, 1521 North Abingdon street, Arlington, Va. It has a rich creamy flavor.

Cocoanut Cream Pie.

½ cup of sugar
5 tablespoons of flour
¼ cup of milk
⅛ teaspoon of salt
2 egg yolks
1½ cups of scalded milk
1 teaspoon of vanilla
1 cup of shredded cocoanut

Blend sugar, flour and salt with ¼ cup of cold milk. Add to the scalded milk and cook over low heat until done. Add beaten yolks and cook 2 minutes longer. Remove from range. Add vanilla and shredded cocoanut. Cool and then pour into a baked pie shell.

Cover top with meringue. Beat the 3 whites until stiff and dry. Add the 6 tablespoons of sugar gradually, then beat until of the consistency of a marshmallow. Pile on top of pie and bake in a moderate oven until delicately brown.

The following recipe for butterscotch pie, third prize winner, has a smooth creamy filling topped with delicate meringue. It was entered in the contest by Mrs. Henry Niedfeldt, 4702 Eighth street northwest.

Butterscotch Meringue Pie.

1 cooled baked 9-inch pie shell
1 tablespoon of sugar
6 tablespoons of pastry flour
1 tablespoon of cornstarch
3 egg yolks
¼ teaspoon of salt
6 tablespoons of water
1 cup of milk
6 tablespoons of butter
1 cup of brown sugar,

Mix the flour, sugar, cornstarch, salt and water in the top of a double boiler. Heat in the milk. Place over flame and stir until milk is hot. Place over boiling water and cook until thickened (about 10 minutes), beating with rotary beater occasionally to prevent lumping. In the meantime, melt butter in a heavy sauce pan. Blend in brown sugar and cook over a low flame stirring constantly, until the sugar is dissolved and the mixture is smooth. Beat the butter and sugar mixture into the milk mixture and cook 5 minutes more. Beat the egg yolks slightly and gradually beat into them the hot milk mixture. Cool and pour into a cooled baked pie shell.

Make the meringue by beating 3 egg whites and ¼ teaspoon of cream of tartar until stiff enough to hold a point. Gradually beat in 6 tablespoons of sugar and continue beating until the mixture is stiff and glossy. Pile lightly on pie filling, being sure that it completely covers the filling. Bake for 20 minutes in an oven set at 300 degrees.

The recipe for cherry custard pie, fourth prize winner, is made with fresh cherries but canned bing cherries can be used. The recipe was sent in by Mrs. Robert Hivick, 251 West Gay street, Harrisonburg, Va., and is a grand suggestion for a Washington birthday party.

Cherry Custard Pie.

Make custard as follows: Mix ¾ cup of sugar with 2 tablespoons of cornstarch. Add a pinch of salt. Beat ½ cup of milk into 2 egg yolks and slowly add to the sugar mixture. Add another ½ cup of milk, stirring to keep smooth. Put in double boiler and cook. When heated through, add ½ tablespoon of butter. Stir fairly constantly until it is smooth and thick. This means very thick. Remove from the fire, add a good teaspoon of vanilla. Set aside to cool, but don't allow it to become altogether cold. Stir occasionally while cooling so it will not become lumpy.

To make the cherry part: Wash, drain and stone the cherries. To each cup of cherries add ½ cup of sugar. Place on stove and bring gently to a boil. Have ready a mixture of dissolved cornstarch (1 level tablespoon with just enough water to dissolve it) for each cup of cherries; thicken the cherries with this and cook rapidly so as to keep the cherries bright and red. Cook (stirring gently) until transparent or until you do not think it will run into the custard. Cool.

Pour the custard into the baked pie shell. Cover the custard with a layer of the thickened cherries. Make a meringue of the two egg whites and four tablespoons of sugar and enough vanilla to flavor. Top with the meringue and brown lightly in the oven.

Chilled Pecan Custard Pie.

1 level tablespoon of gelatin
¼ cup of water
3 eggs
½ cup of sugar
1 cup of milk
1 teaspoon of vanilla
½ cup of chopped pecans.

Soften the gelatin in cold water for 5 minutes. Add the egg yolks and sugar to the milk and cook over boiling water until of custard consistency. Add the softened gelatin and stir until dissolved. Add vanilla and chopped toasted pecans. Cool, and when mixture begins to congeal, fold in the egg whites beaten with 2 tablespoons of sugar.

For Jaded Appetites

Broiled steak served sizzling hot with a garnish of whole stuffed onions and glazed carrots banishes menu worries. To make the steak tender and flavorful, follow modern principles of meat cokery in its preparation.

Left-Over Cheese.

Often, after serving a platter of assorted cheeses, you have a few unappetizing-looking odds and ends left over. Wrap each kind separately in waxed paper, cover them and store them in the refrigerator. They will come in handy for salad, sandwich or canape mixtures, or for dressing toast or crackers served with soups. Milder cheeses add a pleasing flavor to vegetable, meat or fish sauces.

Spaghetti Dish.

A casserole of canned spaghetti can be made more attractive by sprinkling the top with plenty of grated cheese that will take on a pleasing brown when properly heated in the oven. Some of the canned Vienna sausages, or frankfurters, cut into strips and placed over the top of the spaghetti before it is baked make another style of "fixing" bound to bring favorable response from the family.

Today's Low Meat Costs Make Beefsteaks and Roasts Cheap

But Housewives Must Know Modern Methods of Cooking to Achieve Best Flavor, Juiciness and Economy.

THE MODERN BRIDE is finding it true that a well-fed husband is a contented one. Few have failed to note the happy look that comes into a man's eyes when, after a hard day's work, he comes home, asking, "What are we having for dinner tonight?" and hears the answer "steak." It makes the whole job of menu-planning worthwhile.

Lowered meat prices have provided headlines for market news for many weeks. This makes steak for dinner not only popular but economical.

The steak illustrated above is the answer to every man's dream of a perfect meal. For this, select a porterhouse or sirloin steak cut from 1 to 2 inches thick. Slash the outside fat at intervals to prevent curling. Preheat the broiler for 10 minutes. Place the steak on an oiled rack and put in at a height so that the top of the meat is 3½ to 4 inches under the flame. Let the steak cook without turning for 7½ minutes, if the steak is cut 1 inch, or 15 minutes if cut 2 inches thick. Cook the other side an equal length of time. Keep flame moderately high, reducing it a little toward the end of broiling.

Butter, Lemon, Gravy Sauce.

Pour a sauce over the steak, made by adding 2 tablespoons of butter and 1 tablespoon of lemon juice to the steak drippings. Pour this over the steak and serve with stuffed onions and whole cooked carrots.

The recipe for broiling follows the modern school of thought that searing is unnecessary. The old theory that the crust formed by searing the meat provides a seal for retaining juices has been exploded. The advantage of a moderate temperature for broiling is that it causes little or no spattering of the oven, and is more economical.

These same principles of meat cookery should be applied in the preparation of the roast. Meat cooked by true roasting is never covered. It is placed in the roasting pan fat side up so that the fat as it melts will drip down over the roast, providing moisture during cookery. If a lid is used, the steam will make the roast the texture of pot roast.

The old theory that salt should be added after the meat is cooked to prevent loss of juices is true. However, in the case of the roast, there is relatively little exposed surface and what juices are drawn out enrich the gravy. A low temperature is recommended for cooking all roasts. Modern experiments have shown that there is more shrinkage if the temperature is high, also flavor and juiciness are decreased.

The time of cooking will depend not only on the temperature of the oven but also on the cut of the meat and whether or not it is ripened. Ripening decreases the cooking time. Use a meat thermometer, if you would know accurately when the roast is done.

Cherries Are Timely Recipe Suggestions

Cherries and cherry recipes fill the food pages this week. The occasion is Washington's Birthday.

Of course, there are many different kinds of cherries. In the sweet cherries, we have white, black, and red ones, and if you are horticulturally minded, the best known varieties are Royal Anne, Black Oxheart, White Oxheart, Tartarians, and Bigarreaus. The sour cherries are red and the best known varieties are the Montmorency and Early Richmond, and it is the general belief that the cherry tree which George Washington is alleged to have chopped down was one of these varieties.

Cherry pie, cherry cobbler, and cherry tarts are the most common uses for red sour cherries. They are canned without the pits to make it easy for the housewife to use them, but with added sugar, they, as well as the sweet cherries, which are usually canned with the pits, make an excellent dessert fruit.

Artist in Icing Gladdens Kin By Her Cakes

Each Holiday, Birthday or Other Fete a Chance for Mrs. Oates.

By Nancy Ellis.

EVERY holiday, birthday and wedding anniversary gives Mrs. Mary Oates, 1445 Spring road northwest, an opportunity to express her art in frosting. Cake baking is her hobby.

Last week the occasion for cake baking was a golden wedding anniversary. The cake was baked in the form of a cross with the center square decorated with a shell design and white roses. The second layer was covered with white roses highlighted with gold shot. The third tier held the golden wedding motif. On each point of the cross was a heart-shaped cake covered completely with yellow roses and purple violets.

"I forget from one cake to the next just how long it takes to prepare them," she confessed. "It took about 12 hours of constant work to prepare this one, but I love doing it. I enjoy it as much as other women enjoy sewing or painting."

Learned In New Orleans.

Mrs. Oates became expert in the fine art of cake decorating after her husband died when she and her sons were living in New Orleans. With time on her hands she took lessons in pastry decorating from a French chef and learned how to make birds, flowers and fruit in frosting.

"Special equipment is necessary for making a cake," she said. "I do all decorating with a pastry bag, and, of course, need a different type tube for each thing I do. There is a special tube for making leaves, another for rose petals and another for violets. Really, I have dozens of them in all sizes and shapes. With them I am able to make almost any type of flower or bird."

"In decorating a cake, I always make the flowers first. These are made on nail heads from tinted frosting and allowed to dry. Sometimes I make the inside of a rose petal white and the outside pink. This is not so difficult. The most difficult part in making flowers is seeing that the icing is of just the right consistency. If it is made properly, it takes only a few minutes to shape the flowers."

Boils Her Icing.

Mrs. Oates recommends boiled icing for cakes. Her reason is that it dries more quickly, has a satin sheen, and the colors from the decorations do not run even in damp weather. Her icing is made only from egg white and sugar. No butter is used.

"When I first started decorating, I used uncooked frosting made with powdered sugar and water heated to blood heat," she said. "This was simple to make and if poured over the cake quickly was satisfactory. I found, however, that on damp days this type of frosting became moist and if the cake was trimmed the colors faded into the white. I now use boiled icing altogether, for it is satisfactory in all types of weather."

Friends, Relatives, Glad.

Her cake for commencement parties is a sweet girl graduate. The round cake is a skirt, the top a china doll decorated with the pastry tube. A wide brimmed hat is covered with yellow, pink, blue, and lavender roses. There is a corsage of flowers at the shoulder and the whole dress is ruffled in vari-colored icing.

Instead of the usual bride and groom, Mrs. Oates prefers to decorate the cake for a shower with a large bird carrying a wedding ring. Sometimes the names of the bride and groom are written on the cake and the whole cake decorated with roses.

Another cake that has proved popular was made for a stork shower. The cake was baked in the form of a basket with even its handle made of icing. The basket was decorated with white roses, but in the center were placed five huge roses of different colors and in the center of each was a baby doll's head.

Is it any wonder that friends and relatives of Mrs. Oates are glad that she has a hobby?

Best Salad Green Recipes Will Win Post Food Prizes

Spring vegetables bring salad greens. These crisp succulent vegetables are served at their best in a tossed green salad with oil dressing. The recipe contest is awarding five cash prizes for your favorite combinations. The first prize is $3, the second $2, and there are three prizes of $1 each.

The market now includes radishes, chickory, lettuce, spinach, cauliflower, new cabbage, green onion, carrot, celery and tomato, to mention a few of them. How do you use these seasonable vegetables in salad? To enter your recipe in the contest, write out your recipe clearly, giving complete directions for preparation and mail to Jean Green, The Post Food Editor, before February 28.

Vegetable Plates.

Here are six nice vegetable plate combinations: (1) Broccoli with Hollandaise sauce, beets, banana fritters, green beans; (2) creamed eggs on toast, cheese-stuffed celery, buttered spinach; (3) poached eggs in spinach nests, browned eggplant fingers, creamed onions; (4) corn souffle with creamed mushrooms, spiced beets, asparagus, pickels; (5), broiled tomatoes on cheese toast, creamed carrots and turnips, spiced pear; (6) creamed peas, mashed squash, French fried potatoes, buttered beets.

New England Style Recipe for Chowder

Suggested for Use With Sea Food Dinner.

Mrs. J. B. Knight, 3141 Highland place northwest, has requested a recipe for clam chowder to serve with the shrimp and lobster dishes published on last Friday's food pages.

This recipe is for chowder prepared in true New England style.

Clam Chowder.

¼ cup of salt pork
1 onion
2 cups of diced potatoes
1 pint of fresh clams
2 cups of boiling water
1 pint of milk

Heat the diced salt pork in a heavy aluminum saucepan over a low heat until the fat is extracted. The crisp pork may be removed with a skimmer if desired. Brown the onions in the fat. Add the potatoes, water and salt and boil until the potatoes are tender. This will take 12 minutes. Chop the fresh clams. Heat to boiling in their own liquor. Add the clams to the milk. Heat to boiling and add to potatoes. Serve at once with pilot crackers.

Gingerbread Topping.

Creamed cheese mixed with chopped dates and nuts makes a tasty topping for freshly baked gingerbread or it can be used as a filling for two layers of chocolate or spice cake.

Many Attend 'At Home' Of Mme. Troyanovsky

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Soviet hospitality was dispensed in the grand manner yesterday afternoon when hundreds of Capital residents flocked to Mme. Alexander Troyanovsky's first official "at home" of the season.

A lavish buffet . . . a bar that seemed to draw every guest sooner or later . . . a profusion of roses and carnations decorating the spacious rooms of the Soviet Embassy were noticeable features of the reception that drew fully as many men as women. For more than two hours a steady line of guests climbed the marble stairway, passing a seemingly endless line coming down.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Scores of official, diplomatic and social notables surged around the long table in the dining room where tea and coffee, the richest of tea-time tidbits, sandwiches and strawberry ice cream were served. In the smaller room down the hall another table groaned beneath an outlay of sandwiches and cake; while the bar in one corner offered vodka as its chief attraction. Other drinks also poured freely in that popular spot.

Mme. Troyanovsky received her guests in the second-floor reception hall. Her plum-colored velvet dress, fashioned on simple lines, was exceptionally becoming, and the big orchid on her shoulder blended nicely with her costume.

From the reception hall, the general order of drifting was toward the dining room, and thence to the small salon . . . and back again once more. But the going was difficult. Anyone who could negotiate the round trip in less than half an hour was an exception.

Ambassador Mingles Among the Guests

Since the "at home" was Mme. Troyanovsky's, the Ambassador was relieved of the monotony of saying "how do you do" to the seemingly endless stream of callers, but he did his part in entertaining the guests. He was here, there and everywhere during the party . . . chatting with fellow members of the Diplomatic Corps, greeting Senators and Representatives, and holding a little court of his own in one corner of the dining room as the party was nearing its close.

Among the guests arriving early were the Irish Minister and Mrs. Michael MacWhite. "This will be our last time to visit you," Mrs. MacWhite said to her hostess. As everyone knows by now, the Irish Minister and his wife will leave soon for Rome. There were farewells for them from many of their acquaintances who probably saw them yesterday for the last time.

The Counselor of the Soviet Embassy, Constantine A. Oumansky, did a good job of assisting the hostess yesterday, as did other members of the embassy staff. Glimpsed among the guests were many diplomats, a number of Senators and Representatives, a sizable section of officials and a sprinkling of residential Washingtonians.

...y and ...ented in the ...assumed enormous ...ns before the party was ... To mention at random a few of the guests—there were the Minister of Finland and Mme. Eero Jarnefelt, the latter in a black ensemble; Miss Yoeh E. Wang, daughter of the Chinese Ambassador, who arrived with the Counselor of the Chinese Embassy and Mrs. Zuang Teh Ing; the Turkish Ambassador, Mehmet Munir Ertegun; the Czechoslovak Minister and Mme. Vladimir Hurban; the Siamese Minister and Mme. Abhibal Rajamaitri.

Also, the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza, the Financial Counselor of the Rumanian Legation and Mme. George Boncesco, Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel H. Dimitriu, also of the Rumanian Legation; the Lithuanian Minister and Mme. Povilas Zadeikis; Senora Giner de los Rios, wife of the Spanish Ambassador; the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera.

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, was among those arriving during the latter part of the reception. Mrs. Sol Bloom and her daughter, Miss Vera Bloom, were greeting friends on all sides; as were Mrs. McCook Knox and her daughter, Miss Kathleen Knox. Mrs. George Pettingill was there; also, Mrs. McKenney Mallan in a handsome black ensemble; Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. Pierrepont Moffat, who made an early entrance and a quick departure, and Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis.

Mrs. Stanley Reed was also glimpsed in the crowd, as were Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Mrs. Louis Caldwell, Senator Theodore Green, J. Crawford Biggs, Mrs. Peyton March, Mrs. Paul R. Greever, Mrs. Preston McGoodwin, in a becoming rust-colored outfit; Mr. and Mrs. Richard N. Hogue, Mrs. W. D. Leahy, Baroness von Below, Mrs. Lawrence E. Imhoff, Judge and Mrs. Melvin H. Dalberg, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic William Wile and scores of others.

Harrisons Back From Switzerland

The United States Minister to Switzerland and Mrs. Leland Harrison arrived in New York yesterday on the liner Manhattan and are expected to come immediately to Washington for a round of festivities in their honor.

Mr. Harrison is a career diplomat who has had numerous important posts, including those of Minister to Sweden and Assistant Secretary of State. He and Mrs. Harrison have many friends here.

Mrs. Charles Hofer and her son, Myron Hofer, will give a luncheon for the Harrisons tomorrow and James Clement Dunn, political advisor to the State Department, will entertain at dinner for them that evening. They will stay at his home during their visit here.

• • • •

Luncheon Given By Mrs. Clark

Mrs. Bennett C. Clark entertained at luncheon yesterday in her Spring Valley home in honor of Mrs. Ned Brunson Harris and Miss Margaret Hart. The latter could not attend the party because of illness, but a number of her friends and fellow newspaper women were on hand to enjoy the pleasant event.

Tall vases of roses and calla lillies decorated the drawing room and the library where small tabels were set up. A big bowl of lillies centered the dining room table at which the luncheon was served, buffet fashion.

The hostess wore a black crepe frock trimmed with white lace and set off with orchids on her shoulder. Mrs. Harris had chosen a black and red ensemble, with a wide-brimmed red straw hat to match the vest of her black crepe dress.

While three of the small tables accommodated four guests each, the table at which the hostess and Mrs. Harris sat was laid for six guests, including Mrs. Cordell Hull, whose handsome black frock was worn with a purple felt hat; and Mrs. Stanley Reed in a black ensemble. Also at the larger table were Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor and Miss Doris Fleeson.

Among the other guests were several newspaper women: also Mrs. James C. Breckenridge, of Quantico, Va.; Mrs. Harry B. Hawes, Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, and Mrs. Harry Blair.

Miss Sollers Will Be Feted

Miss Dorothy Sollers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Peterson Sollers, of Baltimore, and her fiance, the Rev. Duncan Fraser, whose wedding will take place in Baltimore February 23, will be guests of honor at a buffet supper which will be given by the brother and sister-in-law of the bride-elect, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Sollers, of Baltimore, on the evening before the wedding. Other members of the bridal party also will be present.

Miss Sollers made her home in Washington for several years with her aunt, the late Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock. Because the bride-to-be is in mourning, parties given for her have been extremely simple and limited to immediate relatives and intimate friends of the family.

It is expected about 30 or 40 persons from Washington will attend the wedding in Baltimore at Memorial Church.

Mexican Embassy Secretary Is Guest At the Shoreham

The retiring Second Secretary of the Mexican Embassy, Dr. Manuel Gonzalez y Gonzalez, was guest of honor at a Dutch treat dinner given last evening at the Shoreham. Mr. Gonzalez y Gonzalez will leave shortly to be Charge d'Affaires of the Mexican Embassy in Nicaragua.

Among those who participated in the dinner were the Mexican Ambassador and Senora Castillo Najera; their daughter, Senorita Erma Castillo Najera; the Counselor of the Embassy and Senora de Quintanilla and the former's sister, Senorita Lulu Quintanilla; Senorita Lupe Davila, Dr. de Alba, sub-director of the Pan American Union; Mrs. de Alba, and their daughter, Miss Laurita de Alba; the First Secretary of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Fuentes, and the First Secretary of the Ecuadorean Legation and Senora de Crespo.

Also the Second Secretary of the Spanish Embassy and Senora de Pitaluga; Raimundo Cuervo, Second Secretary of the Mexican Embassy; Andres Pastoriza, jr.; Sebastian Valverde, Mercedes Alfonseca, Camacho Lorenzana, Commercial Attache of the Colombian Legation; Jose Ignacio Smith and Maruca Tercero.

Mr. and Mrs. McConihe Return to Washington

Mr. and Mrs. F. Moran McConihe have returned from their wedding trip and are at the Anchorage until tomorrow, when they will move into their residence on R street.

Mrs. McConihe was before her marriage last month Miss Marguerite Hagner, and is the daughter of Mrs. Randall Hagner.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon.

THIS MOUNTING SENTIMENT against cocktail parties is we have decided, directed only against people who give large affairs in small houses. The "pay-back" parties, where everybdoy is invited just because he or she has been nice to the hostess, are gradually disappearing from the Washington social scene, and people are getting wise to the fact that five-to-seven entertaining can be truly delightful if the guests are congenial and there is room enough to sit down.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Such a party was that given yesterday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Richard Southgate in honor of the latter's sister, Mme. Coletti-Perrucca. The Southgates' home on Kalorama Circle is most attractive, with its large drawing room, which opens onto a terrace. Yesterday this room looked particularly attractive, with its white walls and dark red brocaded curtains set off with vases of tulips and freezia.

MME. COLETTI-PERUCCA is here for a week before returning to New York. She and her Italian husband live in a villa in Florence for which she will sail after her stay in Manhattan. Yesterday she looked particularly smart in a sort of tailored suit-effect of blue sequins, an unusual combination. This evening Mr. and Mrs. Southgate will give a dinner in her honor.

Pouring tea for a while in the dining room, with its green walls and beautiful silver, was Mrs. James M. Helm. Mrs. Joseph Flack, whose husband is with the State Department, took her place for a while.

Others seen were the Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. Victor Mallet; Keith Officer and Philip Broadmead, also of the Embassy; Mrs. Keith Merrill—Mr. Merrill is ill with bronchitis; Frau Herbert Scholtz, Miss Barbara Pierce, who leaves today for a week of skiing in Sunapee, N. H.; Ralph Snowden Hill, Mrs. Emery Smith, Mr. and Mrs. John Summerlin, and Mrs. Albert Dewey, who wore a black gown with a square neck and diamond clip and a matching hat.

• • • •

HAROLD HINTON, who sails next Wednesday for England with Ambassador Joseph Kennedy, was also present. He said that Mrs. Kennedy, who is now in Palm Beach, expects to sail two weeks later to join her husband.

Col. and Mrs. Harry N. Cootes, other guests, said their daughter, Mary Cootes, is having a whirl in Cairo, where she went with the International Telegraph Conference. In the late spring Miss Cootes will join Gracyn Wheeler, fourth ranking tennis player, for a tournament tour which will begin in Cairo and go on to Athens, Naples, and Budapest. If she squelches enough foreign competition, the District of Columbia champion hopes to make Wimbledon in the spring. Merritt Cootes, who is with the Foreign Service, hopes to join his parents here in a few weeks on leave from Haiti. Then this traveling family hopes to get away to Europe to join their tennis minded daughter.

COMING AND GOINGS: Mr. and Mrs. F. Lammot Belin will return tonight from a visit at the Florida plantation of Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis. The Swedish Minister and Mme. Bostrom are already back after ditto . . . Mrs. Higgins Chapin is in New York at the Ritz Carlton. She will not return to her Foxhall road residence for a week . . . Mrs. Breckinridge Long and her daughter, Miss Christine Long, have been spending a week in New York.

Miss Jean Gilbert Honored at Parties

Miss Jean Gilbert, whose marriage to Roger William Moister, jr., of Summit, N. J., will take place tomorrow afternoon in the Bethlehem Chapel of Washington Cathedral, is being entertained in a last-minute whirl of pre-nuptial parties. Miss Gilbert is the daughter of Mrs. L. Daniel Gilbert of this city, while the prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Moister, of Summit.

This afternoon, Miss Leonie McCoy, maid of honor, will give a luncheon for the bridal party; later in the day Mrs. Elias Hussman will entertain at a cocktail party at her home for the bride-elect. This evening Dr. and Mrs. George B. Trible will be host and hostess for the rehearsal dinner.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Leslie Coyle Norman entertained at luncheon at Pierre's for the bride-to-be and her attendants. Mr. and Mrs. Lester Gibson feted them at a cocktail party in their apartment at the Ontario.

Miss Elliott Lewis, daughter of the Dean of the University of Virginia, who is a bridesmaid, and who roomed with Miss Gilbert at Sweet Briar College, arrived in Washington yesterday.

Peters Leave Tonight For Visit to Boston

The Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Marc Peter will leave tonight to spend the week-end in Boston with their sons and daughters-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Marc Peter, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. George Peter. They will return to the Capital after Washington's Birthday.

Mrs. G. P. Greer, Lieut. Veeder Wed

Announcement is made of the marriage of Mrs. G. Parks Greer and Lieut. William Schuetze Veeder, U. S. N., which took place Wednesday in Elkton, Md.

Mrs. Greer is the daughter of Mrs. J. E. Parks, of Ridley Park, near Philadelphia, and the late Dr. Parks, formerly of Wilmington, Del.

Lieut. Veeder is the son of the late Commodore Ten Eyck De Witt Veeder, U. S. N., and the late Mrs. Veeder, of Washington and Greenwich, Va. He returned last fall from China, where he served on the U. S. S. Edsall, and is now on duty at the Navy Department in Washington, where he and Mrs. Veeder will make their home.

Mr., Mrs. Dwight Davis Return From Florida

Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis returned to Washington yesterday from their plantation in Tallahassee, Fla.

Both will be on hand on Sunday for the pre-view at the Washington Gallery of Modern Art, of which Mrs. Davis is chairman. Among those entertaining at luncheon before the event are Mr. and Mrs. F. Lammot Belin and Mr. and Mrs. Jay Pierrepont Moffat.

Miss McLendon Becomes Bride At Greensboro

Mr. Worthington Weds Officer's Daughter; Couple on Cruise.

An out-of-town marriage with many Washington angles was that of Miss Mary Louise McLendon, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Lennox Polk McLendon, of Greensboro, N. C., and Ralph Worthington 3d, son of Mrs. Ralph Worthington, of Washington, and the late Ralph Worthington, of Cleveland, Ohio, last evening in Greensboro.

The ceremony, by candlelight in the First Baptist Church, was solemnized by the Rev. J. Clyde Turner, and Dr. Charles F. Myers, the assisting clergyman.

Mrs. Adam Luke Matron of Honor

The matron of honor was Mrs. Adam Keith Luke, jr., of New York, sister of the bridegroom, who was gowned in yellow net styled on princess lines and topped with a bolero jacket of matching lace. Miss Ethel Worthington, another sister of the bridegroom, was the maid of honor.

The bridesmaids included the Misses Frances Grubbs, Marjorie Pye, Beverly Anne Sharpe, Louise Overton, and Dorothy Clendenin, all of Greensboro. They and the maid of honor wore dusty blue net, fashioned on princess lines to the knee and then breaking in to the soft, small ruffles of a very full skirt. The flower girl was little Jane Howard Holderness, of Greensboro.

The best man was Adam Keith Luke, jr., of New York, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, while the ushers from Washington were Aldrich Dudley, Frank H. Hamilton, jr., and William P. Blum. Arthur C. Twitchell and William Klenke, of New York City, were also ushers as was L. P. McLendon, jr., brother of the bride, and a student at Baylor Military Academy, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Reception at Greensboro Club

The reception following the ceremony took place at the spacious Greensboro Country Club.

The former Miss McLendon is a graduate of Salem Academy, in Winston-Salem, N. C., and of Mary Baldwin College, in Staunton, Va. She is the granddaughter of Charles Brantley Aycock, a former Governor of North Carolina. The bridegroom attended Choate School and received his degree from the University of North Carolina.

Mabel Boardman To Give 'At Home' Sunday Afternoon

Next week promises to be a gay one, beginning with the "at home" which Miss Mabel Boardman will hold on Sunday afternoon at her residence.

Mrs. Joseph Leiter will entertain at a cocktail party on Wednesday afternoon, and that evening Representative and Mrs. Robert Low Bacon and Mr. and Mrs. William McK. Dunn will give dinners in their respective residences. Thursday evening Mrs. Hennen Jennings and her son, Coleman Jennings, will entertain at dinner. Mr. Jennings was recently named head of the Community Chest.

Mrs. Doherty and Mrs. McLean Will Be Hostesses at Lace Ball

Mrs. Clark D. Stearns Also Will Entertain at Miami Fete Tonight for the Benefit of the Milk Fund.

Mrs. Henry L. Doherty, Mrs. Edward Beale McLean and Mrs. Clark D. Stearns, of Washington, will be among hostesses entertaining large parties at the Helen Lee Doherty lace ball for the benefit of the Greater Miami Milk Fund at the Miami Biltmore Country Club tonight.

Mrs. Doherty and her daughter, Mrs. Theodore William Wessel, the former Miss Helen Lee Doherty, are again chairmen of the ball, the outstanding social event of the year in southern Florida. Mrs. Wessel, the wife of the Danish Charge d'Affaires in Chile, has sponsored the ball each year since it was first held in 1934.

Other committee members from Washington assisting Mrs. Andre E. Rickmers and Mrs. John E. Norman, the active co-chairmen, include Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer and Mrs. Auth Bryan Owen Rhode. Mrs. George H. Earle, wife of Gov. Earle, of Pennsylvania, is also on the committee.

Lighted opalescent balloons, shining against a background of flowering jasmine and tropical foliage, will form the setting for the ball. The more than 600 guests will dance to two orchestras in the ballroom and on the club's terrace which will be transformed into a tropical garden.

The highlight of the evening will be the showing of lace fashions, created by French and American designers, which will set the styles for next summer's wear in the North. Climaxing the fashion show will be a military wedding with Miss Betty Marie Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Alton Jones, of Coconut Grove and New York, as the bride. Carrying out the theme of the ball, the bride and her attendants will all be gowned in lace.

Twenty sub-debs dressed in quaint blue and white milkmaid's costumes, will assist the general committee.

Off to Miami.

Mr. and Mrs. Gould Shaw, of Warrenton, Va., and their daughter, Yolande, have gone to Miami, where they will spend several weeks. En route Mr. and Mrs. Shaw paid a visit to another daughter, Penelope, a student at the Graham-Eckes School, in Daytona Beach.

Mrs. Copeland Is 'At Home'

Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, wife of Senator Copeland, of New York, received guests at her "at home" yesterday afternoon from 4 to 6 at her apartment at the Shoreham. Carnations filled the rooms, and, as always, Mrs. Copeland's unusual collection of antique glass and vases attracted many admiring comments.

The hostess, who wore a dark blue taffeta dress trimmed with net, was assisted by Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Minister of Norway; Mrs. Morris Sheppard, wife of Senator Sheppard, and Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, wife of Senator Lodge.

Others at the tea table during the afternoon were Mrs. John F. Dockweiler, wife of Representative Dockweiler; Mrs. Prew Savoy, daughter of Senator John G. Townsend, jr., of Delaware; Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Charles Maas, Mrs. Roberta B. Martin and Mrs. Harry R. Daniel.

Also present as special guests of Mrs. Copeland were 21 New York girls who are students at Chevy Chase Junior College.

Polly Wirgman To Be Married

Mrs. William Wayne Wirgman yesterday announced engagement of her daughter, Polly Wayne, to Sterling Ruffin Bolling, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wilmer Bolling.

Miss Wirgman is a direct descendant of Gen. Anthony Wayne, who figured in the Revolutionary War. She was graduated from Holton Arms School, and made her debut in Washington society two years ago.

Mr. Bolling was a student of St. Albans School and the Westminster School in Connecticut. He is a nephew of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Lindsays Hosts At Dinner Party

The British Ambassador and Lady Lindsay entertained last evening at their second dinner of the week.

Ranking guests were the Portugese Minister and Mme. de Bianchi, the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close, Justice James C. McReynolds, Justice and Mrs. Stanley F. Reed, Mrs. Key Pittman, and Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings.

Others present were Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Murray, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Mr. and Mrs. Gaspar Bacon, Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, jr., Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, Mrs. W. S. Mann, daughter of the South African Minister and Mrs. Close; Baron Mario Bucovich, Mr. John Hammond, and Christopher Bramwell and Benjamin Plunket, of the embassy staff.

WPA Plan May Supply Maids Here

Demonstration Centers Likely to Solve D. C. Servant Problem.

Mrs. Steele Describes Project to Women's Democratic Club.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The problem of securing well-trained domestic help will be solved eventually for Washington women if the household demonstration centers of the WPA continue to expand their constructive program, Mrs. Mary Steele, director of women's professional projects believes. Mrs. Steele yesterday described the work carried on in the District at the meeting of the educational committee of the Woman's National Democratic Club, of which Mrs. Allen C. Phelps is chairman.

A second center, located at 400 South Capitol street, has just been equipped and is soon to be opened. The first, at 1114 O street, has been in operation some months. The legal sponsor (which is required for every WPA project) in this instance is the Board of Public Welfare, with the District of Columbia Employment Service as co-sponsor. In addition to these, an advisory committee is being formed, comprised of prominent women, both Democrats and Republicans, who are interested in the plan and its possibilities. Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, is honorary chairman, and Mrs. Loren Johnson, chairman. Among other members are Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, Miss Margaret Frazer, Mrs. Philip Chappell, Mrs. Edward Larkin, Mrs. Walter Ufford, Mrs. Rodney Bean and Mrs. William I. Slade.

The law under which WPA projects are established makes no provision for training unskilled workers, Mrs. Steele pointed out, although often this would be the solution of their problem. Unless we can eventually place these people, and work ourselves out of a job, we shall not have accomplished our purpose," she said.

Each project is designed to meet a specific need in the community and the household demonstration plan serves the two-fold purpose of instructing those who visit the center in correct ways to make a bed, set a table and cook a meal, and giving employment to those who conduct the demonstrations.

The imperative need for training colored women for domestic service became evident when it was found there were many jobs available in this field but few of the unemployed women equipped to hold them.

One of the problems in setting up the demonstration centers, Mrs. Steele said, has been that of securing a suitable house for the rent allowed—15 per cent of the assessed valuation. In sections desirable for such a project, the valuation was so low, it was impossible to rent a house for that amount. The new center on Capitol street has been made available through the co-operation of colored Government employes, who have pledged $22 of each month's rent to supplement the WPA funds.

The first check was presented to Mrs. Steele last week by Elizabeth McDuffie, who is one of the maids at the White House, and whose husband is valet to the President.

Furnishings have been contributed by business firms and individuals, the kitchen equipment including a large gas stove and electric refrigerator. On the third floor is a small kitchen where a girl, before being "graduated" and sent out to a new job may have experience preparing test meals without the supervision she has received in the main kitchen.

Women in Washington who have long been perplexed with the problem of finding competent household help, welcome the idea of being able to secure maids who are well trained. The plan is also expected to establish a standard for domestic service which will result in better pay and proper hours for the workers.

Mrs. Steele discussed the Household Demonstration Centers as but one of the WPA projects in the District and invited the women of the club to make a tour of them all—an invitation they expect to accept, substituting the trip for a morning meeting.

Projects are not superimposed on the community. They are established as a result of a study of labor classifications, Mrs. Steele asserted. The large sewing project is one which is expensive because of the cost of materials, she pointed out. At first there were 2,300 women employed; now there are 900. The materials are provided by the sponsors as in all the projects, and the garments, over 200,000 of which were produced last year, are kept in the surplus commodities warehouse and distributed to relief clients through the Board of Public Welfare and to public institutions.

There is in no sense competition with industry, for everything given is to supplement what the needy person is able to buy with his income, she said. There were also 6,000,000 pounds of food distributed last year and 75,000 dozen eggs to relief clients, all handled by relief labor.

The school lunch problem is made more difficult because of there being no kitchens in the elementary schools, Mrs. Steele explained. The WPA provides the relief labor, 197 men and women, and the food, prepared in the central kitchen of 1840 Wisconsin avenue, is delivered by truck to 89 public and parochial schools. Among the 20 projects which have been set up, Mrs. Steele mentioned also that if the Council of Social Agencies, the Self Help Exchange, which is partly relief labor; the Federal art, music, theater and writers' projects.

Flowers Grow Bigger and Better Out in California

Phi Delta Delta Installs Tonight

The twentieth annual initiation service of Zeta Chapter of Phi Delta Delta International Legal Sorority will be held tonight at the home of Harriet Clarke, 1823 Phelps Place, at 9 p. m. A dinner at Ivy Terrace will precede the services.

Those to be initiated are: Miss Josephine Ayre, Miss Ardis Blackburn, Mrs. Helen Clagget, Mrs. Kathreen Mechem, Miss Lois Harris, Mrs. Dorothy Roth Wilson, Miss Frances Wylie, Miss Letha Scott, Miss Roseanna McQueston, Miss Caroline McMillen, and Mrs. Elizabeth Enochs. Miss Sara May Hammond, attorney at Social Security Board, who will be admitted to associate membership, will also be a guest of honor.

The international organization was founded on November 11, 1911, at the University of Southern California, for the purpose of promoting a higher standard of scholarship and of professional ethics and culture among women in the legal world. Among the members are: Mabel Walker Willebrandt, former Assistant Attorney General, honorary president of the sorority; Vashti Burr, international president, and also president of the Women's Professional Panhellenic Association; Judge Annabel Matthews, president of the Women's Bar Association; Ann O'Neill, assistant legal adviser, Department of State; Ruth Bryan Owen Rohde, former Minister to Denmark; Judge Mary O'Toole; Jeanette Rankin, first woman member of Congress; Lena Madesin Phillips, president of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women; Jean Nelson Penfield, honorary vice president of Phi Delta Delta and past President of Kappa Kappa Gamma; Margaret Hays Sebree, national President of Phi Delta Gamma; Mary Love Collins, national president of Chi Omega; Louise Fallegant Galleher, national vice president, Young Democrats. Helen Martell, president of the Washington Panhellenic Association is a member of the Zeta active chapter.

Zeta Chapter was installed at George Washington University on February 15, 1918. One of the chapter founders, Laura Volstead Loman, was the first woman to graduate from the law school. Another, Bess Newsom Florence, past president of Kappa Alpha Theta, was the first woman in the State of Arkansas to serve on the bench as special chancellor, and the first woman to receive the John Bell Larner medal, awarded annually to that member of the graduating class at the George Washington University Law School who attains the highest average in the entire course for the degree of bachelor of laws. The only other woman who has received this medal is Phoebe Morrison, also a member of Zeta Chapter, who is now the only woman associate professor of law at Yale University.

Harry Blagdens to Join Mrs. Thomas Bradley

D. A. R. Begins Washington's Birthday Rites

150 Attend Luncheon at Gadsby's Tavern in Alexandria.

Extension Washington's birthday celebration for the D. A. R. started with a luncheon yesterday at Gadsby's Tavern in Alexandria, where 150 of District society's leading historians gathered for the first of a series of patriotic observances.

Mrs. Lee R. Pennington, State historian, presided. The program, combining the Washington's Birthday and the U. S. Constitution Sesquicentennial observance, began with a tour of the three buildings comprising historic Gadsby's. The D. A. R.'s first visited the room, in which Washington, at the age of 21, was commissioned a lieutenant colonel of the Virginia militia. With headquarters established there, he recruited two companies of provincial troops. They say the room where he met with the committee to inaugurate plans for the framing of the Constitution and where he later returned for the first celebration of the ratification and that where he was entertained by his fellow townsmen on his retirement after eight years as president. They also visited the ballroom where he and Mrs. Washington attended the first public celebration of his birthday.

Following the tour, the group returned to the headquarters room to hear Mrs. Robert M. Reece, of the Board of Governors of the Tavern, which is maintained by the American Legion, and a member of the Mount Vernon Chapter of the D. A. R., tell of the part Gadsby's Tavern played in the stirring days preceding framing of the Constitution.

Referring to Washington's farewell address, she admonished the D. A. R.'s to form the habit of turning to that historic document for the answer to problems arising during any crisis in our Government.

Charles C. Well, superintendent of Mount Vernon, discused the personal side of Washington's life during the period of the Constitutional Convention, and Mrs. Robert E. Bier, historian of Dolly Madison Chapter, read a paper on "Washington and his Colleagues at the Constitutional Convention", quoting excerpts from The General's diary.

Guests at the speakers' table, in addition to Mrs. Pennington, were Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, honorary vice-president general; Mrs. John M. Beavers past vice-president general; Mrs. Charles Carrol Haig, state regent; Mrs. Reece, Mrs. Bier, Mrs. Donald M. Earll, state vice-chairman of the historic committee; Mrs. H. H. Thompson and Mrs. J. H. Wheat, past state historians and Dr. Franklin Bohanan, rector of Old St. Paul's Church.

Six Years' Work in a Week Closes Busy Anacostia Span

1 The Eleventh Street (Anacostia) Bridge rises for repairs to hinges overburdened when Army Engineers recently dredged the river in that area. The span was raised and lowered 100 times in a week for a tug and its barges, more ups and downs than in the previous six years. Repairs are to be completed some time today.

2 Workers with a pneumatic drill operate upon the massive hinges which carry the brunt of the burden when the span reaches skyward to let a boat pass through. The bridge serves Congress Heights, Bolling Field and Anacostia and many a motorist found an unexpected detour yesterday when the bridge was closed.

Less Cracks, More Facts. (Yes, Boss.)

Walter Johnson won more American League games than any other pitcher . . . with 416 in 21 years . . . but Cy Young won 511 in 22 years operating in both leagues . . . I liked Robert (AP) Myers' line about Former Jockey Earl Sande who may turn out to be "The Great Ziegfeld" of this winter's racing . . . Sande has Stagehand ready for the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby and Sceneshifter on edge for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap . . . incidentally, Sande had stage ambitions once, having taken voice from a Washington teacher . . . Badminton will get you if you don't watch out . . . the game was imported from England 45 years ago, flourished a while and Rip Van Winkled for 20 years . . . it has sneaked up on the Nation gradually since . . . it is sort of tennis played with a "shuttlecock" or a piece of cork that has sprouted feathers . . . I'm not sure but it probably was invented by a man who tired of chasing tennis balls . . . the game was named after Badminton, estate of the Duke of Beauford and not after a poorly mixed mint julep (How that Haight gets around).

Navy Boxing Team Picked

Coach Webb Selects Men to Face Syracuse.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 17.—H. M. (Spike) Webb, veteran boxing coach at the Naval Academy, today picked the team that will meet the fighters of Syracuse University at Syracuse, N. Y., on Saturday.

Commander O. O. Kessing, boxing representative, will be in charge of the Navy squad during the trip. The team will leave here tomorrow night.

115 pounds—George Daunis, Little Rock, Ark.

125 pounds—Al Barbee, Oklahoma City, Okla.

155 pounds—Herb Benham, Flat River, Mo.

165 pounds—S. E. Wagenhals, Minneapolis, Minn.

175 pounds—Alfred Wallace, Gulfport, Miss.

Heavyweight—Al Bergner, Kankakee, Ill.

Jim Adamick, Thomas Meet

Bout With Louis Promised Winner of Bout.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 17.—Jimmy Adamick, youthful Detroit heavyweight, and Harry Thomas, of Eagle Bend, Minn., meet over the 10-round route in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night, with a "tuneup" shot at Champion Joe Louis promised the winner.

Two-ton Tony Galento, Newark's more or less famous "night stick," was originally billed to oppose Thomas but eliminated himself ten days ago when he pleaded an injured hand. Adamick, a protege of Jack (Doc) Kearns, was selected to substitute.

If Louis disposes of Nathan Mann in a 15-round title match booked for the Garden next Wednesday night, it is Promoter Mike Jacobs' plan to pit the Brown Bomber against the Adamick-Thomas winner on April 8. The scene would be Detroit's Olympia Arena, if Adamick wins; Chicago, if Thomas emerges the victor. Louis, under contract to fight four times a year under Jacobs' direction, has agreed to this program.

Adamick, who has scored 40 knockouts in his 47 professional fights, virtually all of them against unknowns, will be making his first appearance in New York. Thomas was knocked out in eight rounds by Max Schmeling last December.

Billy Beauhuld, Jersey City lightweight, and Irving Eldridge, of New York, will fight the 8-round semi-windup. Another eight will bring together Al Roth, New York, and Jimmy Vaughn, Cleveland. They also are 135-pounders.

Nagurski Is Victor Over Indian Rassler

Redskin Grappler Gets Too Enthusiastic Over Mat Title and Nagurski Gives Him the Works in 17½ Minutes—Good Crowd Sees Show.

Bronko Nagurski, reformed Minnesota fullback, laid his world wrestling championship on the last night at Turner's Arena and laid Chief Chewacki alongside it when the Indian waxed a little too enthusiastic in his endeavors to lift it.

The end came just 17½ minutes after the start, approximately 17 of which were spent with both parties attempting to commit mayhem on a minor scale. The bout topped one of the best cards Joe Turner has assembled this winter, and sent all of the 1,673 fans home happy.

In the other matches, Al Periera tossed Bronko Valdez, pinch-hitting for Dean Detton, in 17 minutes with a body slam; Ram Singh drew with Hans Steinke; Orville Brown threw Walter Podolak in 10½ minutes with another body slam; and Chief War Eagle put the kibosher on Joe Bonica in 14½ minutes with a—yep, you guessed it—a body slam.

Nagurski started very briskly about the business of bumping off the city's No. 1 ranking villain, bowling him over with three vicious flying tackles. Chewacki, who as Gypsy Daniels once knocked out Max Schmeling in Berlin, retaliated with his usual strangle-hold, and succeeded in cutting off a large portion of Nagurski's wind before it was broken.

Bronko retaliated by tossing Chewacki out of the ring a couple of times, and the second time the Chief re-entered armed with a heavy board from which protruded a gleaming, tooth-like nail. He was disarmed quickly and given a punch on his distorted beak for the act. The next time Chief went hurtling through the ropes he landed in the front row of Section E, and the bald-headed gent in row 3 promptly arose and challenged him to a fist fight.

Chewacki got in some dirty work along about the fifteenth minute, gnawing on Bronko's arm like a mongrel biting into a juicy bone. He drew blood, and Nagurski drew the line of similar tactics by giving the Indian the old heave-ho. The Chief bounced up and down like an elevator with the hiccoughs before Nagurski piled on and pinned him for three pats.—ATCHISON.

Bucky Buscher Named Manager Of Orlando Team

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 17.—Alton (Bucky) Buscher, former four letter man at Maryland University, today was named manager of the Orlando Club, of Central Florida League.

Buscher, who starred at baseball, basketball, football and track at Maryland before graduating two years ago, will be a playing-manager. He is an outfielder. Since graduation, Buscher has played outfield for Atlanta in the Southern Association and Hartford in the Eastern League.

Jack Stonebraker, also a Maryland U. star of recent years, will play beside Buscher in the Orlando outfield, J. M. Coffee, Orlando owner, announced.

Catholic U. Star Paces The Scorers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 17.—A Catholic University quintet, outclassed and run absolutely ragged all the way, was overwhelmed by Long Island University's Blackbirds, 84 to 28, in the Brooklyn College of Pharmacy's bandbox gymnasium tonight. Never once out in the lead, and never generating even the semblance of a scoring threat, the Cardinals absorbed a beating wherein L. I. U.'s 56-point margin outdid any scoring efforts by any New York team this season.

It was the twelfth victory in a row for L. I. U. and the second setback for the Cardinals. Catholic U. dropped a 63-45 decision to John Marshall College in the first game of their Northern tour in Union City, N. J., Wednesday night.

Whatever solace the Cardinals might obtain in this defeat might be gained from the fact that Wayne Ambrose, the Cardinals' husky forward who holds the District scoring record, tossed in six field goals for a total of 12 points. He was surpassed only by Abe (John) Bromberg, L. I. U. guard, whose 14 points was the highest total registered in the game.

Carroll Tries Hard.

But while three other Blackbirds garnered ten of the points, with plenty of eight and seven point totals sprinkled through the lengthy L. I. U. lineup, Maurice (Irish) Carroll was the only other Cardinal to score a respectable total. Irish, plugging his heart out, managed to sink three goals from the floor, and was in on every one.

Whatever hopes C. U. might have entertained when Carroll scored the first field goal of the game were dashed when L. I. U. proceeded to run 19 straight points. Vic Miller sank a foul for the District five, but L. I. U. put the pressure on relentlessly to lead, 35 to 9, at the half.

Goals in "Cascade."

The Brooklyn five, starting the second half, resumed where they left off and from there until the bitter end it was nothing but a cascade of L. I. U. goals pouring through the rim. Four of Ambrose's six goals were scored in the second half, but they were like chaff in a whirlwind. They just didn't matter. Rocco Pirro, the Cardinals' center, was banished from the game late in the second half on fouls. He was the only one forced to leave on this account.

The victory closed L. I. U.'s home season.

Cowboy Howard Scott Beaten by Paul Junior

Portland, Me., Feb. 17 (AP).—Paul Junior, 139, Lewiston, hammered out a newspaper decision over Cowboy Haword Scott, 137, Washington, D. C., in a 10-round boxing bout here tonight.

Although Scott scored often with long lefts to the head, he was so weakened by Junior's steady barrage of kidney blows that the Lewistonian took all but one or two rounds.

Tendler Will Second Lou Gevinson Monday

By Lewis F. Atchison.

The big news along the rialto is that Lew Tendler will be in Lou Gevinson's corner Monday night when the Southwest southpaw squares off with Irish Eddie Dunne at the Arena.

Tendler, if you recall, is the Philadelphia left-hander who gave Lightweight Champion Benny Leonard two extremely tough battles, and had him out on his feet in one, only to be talked out of victory. They were classics, as any old-timer will testify.

Well, there is Tendler coming in to second Gevinson, and over in the opposite corner will be the old champion, Leonard, handling the sponge and bucket for Dunne, whom he happens to manage and train. The set-up is perfect, for a Dunne-Gevinson match, without the trimmings, is a tempting dish for any fight fan in any locality. Tendler and Leonard add color and another angle.

What help can Tendler be to Gevinson, you ask, when he couldn't whip Leonard, and old Benny's gonna match wits with him again and with a good fighter carrying out his instructions? The truth is that Tendler could whip Benny, but made the mistake of listening when he should have been throwing fists in the ring.

Some Brain Work!

It was in the seventh round of their fight at Boyle's Thirty Acres in 1922, that Tendler caught the champion with a left that all but flattened Leonard. He was out on his feet, an easy target for a puncher of Tendler's ability, but quick thinking saved him. Through bruised, puffed lips he taunted the challenger.

"Is that your best punch, Lew? I always thought you could hit!"

Tendler was astounded. The man had absorbed his Sunday punch and was joking about it. It was bewildering. What did he have to do, slug him with a sledge hammer? Tendler lost heart, Leonard regained his poise, finished the round in good shape and went on to win the decision. One more punch and he would have been a beaten champion, but Tendler never realized how close he came to winning the title.

The two are friends now, but somewhere in the back of his head Tendler still carries the memory of that fight, and a haunting memory it is. Perhaps that is why he may have a word of good advice for Gevinson Monday night. Advice to keep punching. Let the other fellow do the talking, he may win a debate, but in boxing they pay off on punches.

Lefties Stick Together.

It may be that Tendler would like to see a southpaw win the crown that was denied him, for lefties have a tendency to string along together. Gevinson could boost his lightweight stock considerably by whipping Dunne, who, while not rated, is reckoned one of the smartest youngsters at his weight fighting today. Tendler might welcome the opportunity to help stop the protege of the man who thwarted his titular aspirations. Undoubtedly he does, or why would he accept the bid to second Gevinson?

Gevinson, incidentally, is fit and ready for the test. We may see a new southpaw Monday night, for the weight bugaboo no longer hounds the boy. No longer is it necessary to diet before a fight, to refrain from drinking water 48 hours before the first bell, and be constantly hounded by a fear of not being able to make the weight.

Gevinson looks like a champion in the gym. He looks better than he did while training for the Armanda Sicilia scrap, and he didn't have too much trouble with Armanda. By Monday he should be ready to face not only Dunne, but one or two other top-flight lightweights.

Eastern League Slates 112 Games

Chestertown, Md., Feb. 17 (AP).—Members of the Eastern Shore Baseball League considered today a tentative 112-game schedule for the 1938 season.

Sent by league directors for study prior to the adoption of a schedule at the Dover, Del., meeting February 20, the proposal opens the season on May 5, and closes it September 5, Labor Day.

The league will operate six days each week, with off days on Monday. All games will be played at night except Sunday when games will be played in the afternoon. Salisbury will travel away from home on Sundays because an ordinance forbids Sabbath games.

'Tuffy' Ready To Play Here; Deal Is Likely

Redskins' Owner to Attend League Meeting; May Get Star There

By Bob Garrison.

Alphonse "Tuffy" Leemans, one of the greatest players ever to carry a football for a local college, may replace Cliff Battles in the Washington Redskins' backfield, The Post learned last night.

With only the actual signing of the contract remaining before Battles, All-League halfback, becomes assistant football coach at Columbia University, George P. Marshall, owner of the local club, last night issued a formal statement of "good luck" to the former West Virginia Wesleyan University star, then turned his attention toward Philadelphia and the league meeting.

Battles' reported salary is $4,500. He succeeds Herb Kopf, new coach and athletic director of Manhattan, and will report for spring training slated to start about March 25.

Marshall and his head coach, Ray Flaherty, will attend the annual meeting of the National Professional Football League at the Quaker City tomorrow and Sunday, hoping to land the former George Washington University star from the New York Giants.

Although Marshall and Flaherty denied that they are seeking Leemans in straight trade, both expressed a desire to add Leemans' name to the Redskins' lineup for next season.

"We'd Be as Strong."

"Why, with Baugh throwing the ball and Leemans in there running for us, we'd be every bit as strong as we were with the Baugh-Battles combination," said Marshall at the very mention of Leemans' name.

As officers of one league club are not permitted to sound out players of rival teams as to signing contracts, Marshall stated that he was unaware as to whether Leemans had any desire to transfer his affiliations from the Giants to the Redskins.

It is no secret, however, that Leemans, whose feats on local fields over a three-year period earned him a tremendous local following, is eager to return to the city which gave him his start and which still backs him to the limit.

Ironically enough, both Battles and Leemans are employed by the same concern here in the off-season.

Battles Long in Service.

Since Leemans left George Washington University in 1935 he has played two seasons with the New York Giants, being leading ground-gainer of the circuit in his first season. Battles has been a member of the Redskins for six years, having been a member of the original eleven when it was formed in Boston in 1932.

As to what the local club would be willing to part with to obtain the services of Leemans, Marshall and Flaherty agreed that it was presuming too much to even consider a bargain, both holding to the opinion that such a deal would have to be made at the suggestion of the New York team.

"Leemans probably is the most valuable man on the team in the opinion of the Giant coaches," Flaherty said, "and we can only hope that it might be our good luck to land him in a deal. However, there are nine other clubs in the league that would also welcome the opportunity of grabbing him."

Statement Is Released.

Speaking of Battles' decision to quit pro ball and sign as assistant to Lou Little at Columbia, a fact reported exclusively by The Post ten days ago, Marshall said that he had offered him more money to play with the Redskins next year than he will earn at Columbia, Battles' decision was irrevocable, he said. Thus he issued the following statement:

"We wish Cliff Battles every success as a coach or in any other capacity he occupies. He will prove himself a credit to any person or organization with whom he affiliates himself.

"After he had married and obtained a nice position here we had hoped he would make Washington his home.

"I am sorry, for the sake of the Washington fans who have supported the team so well, that he has seen fit to move his activities to New York City. I believe he had a bright future in this city."

As he has said previously, Battles told The Post that he had no intention of moving his residence from the Capital, but on the other hand looked forward to a future in the business in which his is presently connected.

"As far as pro football is concerned, I am through. I figure that the few remaining years that I might still have in me as a pro football player can better be spent in other fields. I look forward to working with Lou Little with a great deal of pleasure and hope that the fans in this city will realize my position in the matter."

Battles said that, besides the Columbia offer, he also has had an offer from Adrian Lindsey at the University of Kansas to come there as backfield coach of the Jayhawkers.

Leemans currently is playing professional basketball with a local team and is understood to have been mentioned as a possible addition to the George Washington University coaching staff, which was revised recently.

Mount Rainier Five To Meet Bladensburg

Both the junior and senior teams of Bladensburg High School will play host to Mount Rainier's basketballers today in a Prince Georges County game. The first game is scheduled to begin at 3 p. m.

The Mounts, who defeated Bladensburg in their first encounter several weeks ago, will find the going a little tougher when the opening whistle toots for the senior engagement. This is due to the fact that Bladensburg has several new faces appearing in their line-up and will be playing on their home floor.

Galapas, Jockey Merritt Up, Wins Hialeah Sprint, Paying $27.70

Martin Colt Wins While Drawing Out

Maetall, 11-10 Choice, Second; Lawrin Fast-Closing Third.

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 17.—Townsend B. Martin's colt Galapas and Bobby Merritt, veteran lightweight jockey, added to the list of surprises at the meeting by scoring a long-shot victory in the sixth race here today. The event, a 6-furlong test for 3-year-olds that included six hopefuls for the Flamingo stakes, saw Dewitt Page's Maetall, favorite at odds of 11 to 10, losing to the $27.70 for $2 shot by a length and a half.

Lawrin, representing Herbert M. Woolf's Woolford Farm Stable, was a game closing third, three lengths further back, with Now Then a soundly beaten fourth. Galapas, perfectly riden by his Newark, (N. J.) pilot, ran the distance in 1:11 3-5. It was his first winter victory in five attempts. Although he raced close up on occasions. The colt ran without blinkers today, which probably was an important factor.

Maetall is known as the champion "second horse" in training. The Maemere Farm colt finished in that spot four times in a row in Saratoga stakes last summer, was rested up, then ran second to the older star, Wise Prince, in his recent debut as a 3-year-old. Today's event was strictly a two-horse affair virtually from the break, with Galapas outlasting his more highly regarded rival in the closing drive.

Lawrin was advance favorite for the Flamingo until his crushing defeat in the recent Bahamas Handicap—won by Lavengro—a race in which it was reported he suffered slight cuts behind. The son of Insco lacked early speed today, but regained some of his prestige by the strong manner in which he gained on the two leaders through the stretch.

Maetall and Galapas raced like a team, the former slightly in front until the sixteenth pole. Then Merritt drove the Martin colt to the front and drew away.

The talent thought that the fast but stopping Time and Again was dropped into a spot where he hardly could lose in the second race. But the colt backed up in the stretch as he had been doing and finished just out of the money, Bail Out, at better than 10 to 1, caught Petit Fours in the last nod to win one of the closest camera finishes of the meeting. State Witness was a close third. Petit Fours cut down the favorite's long lead and seemed headed for success until Bail Out, coming from far out of it, forged alongside the filly in the last sixteenth and drove on to victory.

The third race, a split of the second event, found favorite players breaking the ice. They backed Sure Lad in the field of maiden three-year-olds and did not have to fear the result once the colt broke on top and opened up a commanding lead. Irving Anderson brought the mount home with three lengths to spare over My Wo, which nosed out Dark May for the place. Sure Lad returned $6.80.

The Calumet Farm silks of Warren Wright flew victoriously for the second race in a row when Teddy Weed won the fourth purse in a jog by six lengths. Irving Anderson again was in the saddle. Ethelmont was a length in advance of Odessa Frank for the runner-up honors. Teddy Weed, a $5 for $2 choice, won with even more ease than did Sure Lad. He sprinted well clear of his ordinary opposition and was not extended, completing the one mile in 1:39 3-5.

Johnny Londren brought A. G. Tarn's Faust, a one-time member of the Wheatley Stable, from lengths out of it to score a surprise victory in the six furlongs of the fifth contest. The Winnipeg-owned 5-year-old charged over the leaders on the outside and won by a neck going away. He returned $31. Buttersilk also did her best running in the stretch and was second by three lengths over Aglow, the pacemaker. Black Mistress, the favorite, and Escohigh, the second choice, could not keep up with the pace and tired.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ODDESA BEULAH, $7.50, $3.50, $2.80; SWEET PATRICE, $2.80, $2.30; INSCOELDA (Woolford Farm entry), $2.70.

ODDESA BEULAH bore out slightly after the start, gained steadily after crossing the main track and wore SWEET PATRICE down in the final strides. SWEET PATRICE, fractious at the post, broke alertly and drew out in the early running, but then faltered in the stretch run. INSCOELDA, a trifle slow to get going, gained rapidly in the last furlong and finished fastest of all.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:37. Off 2:37½. Winner, W. Maloney's ch. f. (3), by Ariel—Precipitate. Trained by A. G. Robertson. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23, 0:46 4-5, 1:14 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BAIL OUT, $22.40, $10.50, $5.90; PETIT FOURS, $10.30, $6.60; STATE WITNESS, $9.30.

BAIL OUT, away slowly and outrun early, began to improve his position on the extreme outside in the final three furlongs, and wore PETIT FOURS down in the closing strides. PETIT FOURS, well up and saving ground in the first half mile, came around the leader entering the stretch, took command a sixteenth out, but was unable to stave off the winner's bid. STATE WITNESS secured clear passage on the inside for the entire trip, responded determinedly to pressure through the stretch and wore TIME AND AGAIN down in the final drive.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:06. Off 3:07½. Winner Calumet Farm's br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SURE LAD, $6.80, $4.70, $3.60; MY WO, $5.40, $3.40; DARK MAY, $3.60.

SURE LAD, breaking fast, drew out in the early stages while being rated in front came wide into the stretch but maintained his advantage with determination and had something to spare at the finish. MY WO broke in tight quarters worked her way up gradually on the outside and closing gamely to pressure outlasted DARK MAY. The latter was troubled on the stretch turn and again through the stretch and hung in the final drive.

FOURTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:32. Off 3:34. Winner, Calumet Farm's br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TEDDY WEED, $3.00, $3.60, $2.90; ETHELMONT, $3.50, $2.80; ODDESA FRANK, $4.80.

TEDDY WEED took command at once, held his opposition safe for speed and steadied until midway around the turn, opened up a commanding lead at his leisure to win as his rider pleased. ETHELMONT, eased off in the early pace in the final three furlongs, responded gamely when called upon and saving ground, shook off ODDESA FRANK in the stretch run. ODDESA FRANK, hard urged throughout, finished stoutly, but was not the equal of the leaders.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:02. Off 4:04. Winner, A. G. Tarn's ch. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAUST, $31.00, $14.90, $7.90; BUTTERMILK, $11.30, $6.20; AGLOW, $6.20.

FAUST, showing decided improvement, moved up with determination while circling the field in the last three furlongs, winning full of run and going away. BUTTERMILK, well up and saving ground the entire trip, assumed a brief lead through the stretch, but was no match for the winner in the final drive. AGLOW, quickest to begin, set a rapid pace, raced ESCOHIGH into submission and faltered through the stretch, yet held the others safe.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,100; allowances. The Marco Polo. For 2-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:32. Off 4:40. Winner, T. B. Martin's dk. b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GALAPAS, $27.70, $8.10, $4.30; MAETALL, $3.40, $2.60; LAWRIN, $3.50.

GALAPAS, in close attendance of the leader and forcing a swift pace all the way, responded courageously through the stretch to a vigorous drive, and was going well at the finish. MAETALL, hustled to the front in the opening sixteenth mile, displayed high speed while saving ground, and appeared to weaken suddenly when the real test came. LAWRIN broke in close quarters, moved up rapidly in the run down the backstretch, but appeared to stumble a couple of times, gained steadily when in his stride and closed going strong.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:09. Off 5:11. Winner, Mrs. W. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RITZ BROTHERS, $20.20, $8.20, $4.80; BLAZE D'OR, $40.20, $17.70; WEE EMMA, $5.80.

RITZ BROTHERS, away forwardly, followed the pace under light restraint until well straightened into the stretch, closed gamely under pressure and drew out at the end. BLAZE D'OR, quickest to begin, showed fine early speed, held on stoutly when challenged, but was no match for the winner. WEE EMMA, rated in the early running, responded with courage under punishment to hold PRINCE DEAN safe.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:39. Off 5:41. Winner, Dattner Stable's br. s. (7), by Cee Jay Jay—Lady Donna. Trained by P. McCabe. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Two-dollar mutuels paid—YENOC, $14.30, $6.40, $4.30; STONE MARTIN, $6.10, $4.40; FIDELIS, $4.10.

YENOC drew out with a rush rounding the first turn, opened up a winning lead entering the stretch, but faltered the last furlong and was ridden out briskly to withstand STONE MARTIN'S bid. The latter, always in closest pursuit of the leader, closed gamely and was gaining steadily at the finish. FIDELIS, under slight restraint until midway around the last turn, finished resolutely, but never threatened the leaders.

Columbus' Perfect Ring Record at Stake Tonight

Appalachian Will Be Met At Turner's

Explorers Face Battle to Keep Record Intact; Citadel Is Next.

Columbus University's seven-year undefeated boxing record that last week was extended to 21 victories and two draws since 1931, rests squarely on the spot at Turner's Arena tonight.

The Fighting Explorers will play host to the ringmen of Appalachian State Teachers College, of Boone, N. C., at 8:15 o'clock, while on next Tuesday night, Washington's Birthday, the Citadel's Southern Intercollegiate championship aspiring "Light Brigade," from Charleston, S. C., will be entertained at the same hour.

Both Appalachian and The Citadel threw scares into Columbus U.'s great team of a year ago when they boxed the locals to 4-to-4 draws. Coming back this season with improved representation and well represented in every class, they are hopeful of bettering these performances.

Glove Champions.

Appalachian is stepping out tonight with four newly crowned North Carolina Golden Gloves champions and as many runners-up and the distinction of having routed North Carolina State, conqueror of Duke, by a 6-to-2 margin, and the University of Tennessee, 5½ to 2½.

Though defeated by Duke in early season, 5 to 3, the formidable invaders have picked up momentum as the season progressed until they now are ranked on a par with the finest teams of the Southland.

Of particular interest tonight will be the performance of four Appalachian boys in George Corn, 125 pounds; Garnett Clark, 145 pounds; Earl Smith, 155 pounds, and Len Wilson, heavyweight.

Tonight's Lineup.

Terp Team Faces Guard

Injured Maryland Boxers Face Tough Test.

Maryland University's maimed mittmen were patched together yesterday into a make-shift line-up for tomorrow's bouts with the Coast Guard boxers after a siege of injuries had just about wrecked the team.

Coach Heine Miller has seen seven of his eight regulars injured within the past two weeks. After three of the men who were out last week had returned to the squad Monday two more were injured and are feared to be lost for tomorrow.

Nathan Askin, 145-pounder; Bob Bradley, 125-pounder, and Dick Johnson, 155-pounder, who were injured and sick last week are in good condition and will start against the Sailors. But John "Moe" Egan and Ralph "Blackie" Pearson are now on the injured list and are doubtful starters.

Egan, 165-pounder, was the victim of a strange accident and is suffering from a sprained back muscle, while Pearson is working with a badly damaged nose, having hurt it in practice. Egan fell from the looker-room bench last week and may give way to Newton Cox, sophomore squad member.

Benny Alperstein, National Inter-Collegiate 135-pound champion, and Joe Henderson, heavyweight, and George Dorr, 115-pounder, will fight in their weight classes.

Coast Guard Academy has split even in two previous matches, having defeated Toronto University, 5-3, and dropped a meeting to Yale, 5-3.

Flags Will Tell Fans If Cubs Win or Lose

Chicago, Feb. 17 (AP).—There will be a lot of flag waving at Wrigley Field, home of the Chicago Cubs, this summer—informative flag waving.

If the flag is blue with a white "W," baseball fans home bound from their daily tasks will know the Cubs have won. If it is white with a blue "L," it will signify a loss. After dark, the flags will be replaced by electric lights, also blue and white.

The idea was projected last summer by Owner P. K. Krigley after a discussion of the New York Giants' practice of hoisting a win or lose flag. Wrigley plans to have a background of other flags, including the City of Chicago's "I Will" and a new Cub flag, designed by himself.

U. S. Amateurs Win.

Rio de Janeiro, Feb. 18 (U.P.).—The All-Star United States amateur basket ball team scored the second straight victory of its South American tour tonight, defeating the Liga Carioca quintet, 31-22.

Gregario in Starting Line-up for Pitt Clash

Georgetown Courtman, Who Never Got Chance in High School or College, Has Finally Earned a Regular's Role.

By Bob Garrison.

They used to say that Mario Gregario would be a great basketball player if he ever got a chance to crash a starting line-up, but he hardly ever got the chance.

Through high school and college it went on like that for seven years, but now the story seems to have come to happy ending.

MARIO GREGARIO.

For Mario, local boy, will be in the starting line-up of Georgetown University's Hoya five tomorrow afternoon, when it takes the floor against Pittsburgh University's strong team at Tech High, and that's occasion for a story.

A product of the Washington Boys Club, Mario chose to cast his lot with the Tech basketball team when he was old enough to enter secondary school and started on the very gym floor where tomorrow he will make a triumphant return.

His first visit to that floor did not turn out any too successfully. Coach Artie Boyd had a crew of tall boys, and in comparison would have had to give Mario a second look to see him. He didn't give the second look, so Mario didn't get a starting job that year.

Today at 21 years of age, Mario stands 5 feet 9 inches tall and weighs 155. When he entered Tech he was several inches and pounds under those marks. As a result he was used only as a substitute. He got into many games, however, and it was then that the "if Mario could only get a starting assignment, he'd be all right" talk began.

He decided to transfer to Central rather than await another trial at the Eckington school, and the next fall found him reporting to Coach Burt Coggins at the Mount Pleasant school. But Ollie Tipton and Carroll Shore had decided to attach themselves to Central after a year at Roosevelt. Then there was Jack Moulton, an all-city center from Baltimore, who had enrolled at Central that term.

Add to it that Bill Burke and Lewis "Buddy" Nau were already at Central and you have five reasons why Mario didn't make that starting team. He ended up No. 6 man on that 1932 squad, which was later to prove itself one of the greatest aggregations of schoolboy cagers ever assembled on an eastern hardwood. The team was only as strong as its sixth man, however, and Mario aided the starters no end by ably filling a forward or guard position at any time.

True, the next year found him on the first team, but all the other boys had gone and it was an inferior team that he captained.

Then he entered Georgetown, the same Georgetown that he will represent tomorrow against Pittsburgh. There he reported for basketball practice. And once more height, so important a factor in college play, handicapped him.

Mario is well-proportioned, possessor of a barrel chest and well-developed arms, and has an uncanny ability to pass quickly and in one direction while looking in another. Coach Freddy Mesmer was quick to see these things, but still height was against him.

Now in his senior year, after having begun from his same bench position, Mario has been elevated to the starting team. Elevated over several of the same boys that he has been forced to understudy for three years. The failure of those boys to click meant only one thing. If a line-up change was to be made, it was only natural that Mario be given the starting assignment.

That's what happens tomorrow at 2 p. m. He has started two other games this year and his splendid showing, plus the poor showing of several teammates has prompted Mesmer to start Mario, satisfied that he will fill the gap.

The same story doesn't hold true in baseball, however, for he has been a member of several of the city's best sandlot teams, was a star at Central and has played several position on the Hoya nine. He is a graceful dancer, once giving an exhibition in his high school class' farewell chapel.

He will be graduated from the Georgetown Foreign Service School in June but his only diplomacy will be used to help him with his work at the new $235,000 Southeast Boys Club, where he will be athletic director.

Tomorow's game will be the Hoya's next to last home clash, having only a game with Carnegie Tech remaining next Wednesday. It will be their eighth Eastern Conference game, and they will be after their fourth victory. With Mario in the starting line-up will be John Frank, Capt. Mike Petrosky, Tommy Nolan and Harry Bassin, two other local boys.

Rough Riders Must Beat Tech To Retain Chance for Crown

Tilt Slated on Tech Floor at 8:30 Tonight; Eastern, Leaders, and Wilson Meet in Opener.

By Jack Munhall.

Tech's leather lungers, who all but shoved Western out of the interhigh basketball race in an upset last Tuesday, pleasantly anticipate doing the same to Roosevelt when they meet tonight at Tech gym.

This game, scheduled at 7:30 precedes a fuss between title-bound Eastern and Central, the series doormat, which has lost eight games.

Roosevelt's bare-legged lads, who have been one of the surprises of the series, still retain an outside chance of sneaking off with Western's title and a slightly better chance of sharing it with Western or Eastern. They have snared five of seven games and occupy the second position along with Western, 1½ games arear of Eastern, which has bagged seven victories in eight starts.

Either Roosevelt or Western, but not both, however, may yet win the championship or at least tie. Since they meet next week one must be eliminated that the other survive. For either to annext the title it must sweep its remaining contests while Eastern loses to both Central and Western.

Such a happening is most improbable, but for the sake of delving with data, here's what conceivably could happen. Roosevelt could slip by the dangerous Techmen, dispose of Wilson and then knock off Eastern and grab the banner. Provided, of course, that Eastern somehow could score less points than Central and also lose to Western. Or Western could spank Eastern and then Roosevelt and keep its crown.

Returning to realities, however, it would not be even mildly startling should Tech end all speculations as far as Roosevelt is concerned. Bruce Kessler's charges have improved steadily and now are a test for any scholastic five. Sydney Schulman, a newcomer working well with Moe Tannebum and big Vince De Leon, has given Tech a well-balanced attack to add to an already stiff defense.

Roosevelt will rely on Billy Robertson who has subsided since he engineered a one-man rebellion against Eastern, scoring 15 points before he took a shower. Hymie Perlo and Jack Smith, two February recruits who transformed the lagging Riders into a title threat, will play.

Eastern figures to deal Central still another licking unless Russ Lombardy, Lee Lusby and Clint Quantrille suddenly develop paralysis of the shooting eye and spread it to Howard Hancock and Ralph Matera, who can tell.

Atlanta, Feb. 17 (AP).—Robert Eldridge (Bob) Smith of Atlanta a former major league pitcher, said today he had accepted terms to manage the Jacksonville club of the South Atlantic League.

Spring Card Is Announced By Maryland

Terps List 23 Baseball Games and Other Sports Events.

By the Associated Press.

College Park, Md., Feb. 17.—The University of Maryland announced today spring sports schedules for 51 games in baseball, track, lacrosse and tennis. Thirty are to be played here.

Baseball tops the schedules with 23 games, 14 at home. Teams on the four schedules include Harvard, Penn State, Princeton, Navy, Army, Ohio State, Michigan and members of the Southern Conference.

May 7, date of the annual Maryland scholastic track games here, will provide a field day for sports fans. Varsity events scheduled here for that day are: Virginia in track; Washington and Lee in baseball and Catholic University in tennis.

The outlook is good for all four sports. No team will be affected by spring football practice since Coach Frank Dobson holds off-season drills only for members of last fall's freshman squad and those not playing spring sports.

The schedules are:

TRACK.

April 9, Virginia Tech, at Blacksburg; 11, Washington and Lee, at Lexington; 16, V. M. I., here; 23, William and Mary, at Williamsburg; 29-30, Penn Relays, at Philadelphia.

U.S. Hockey Team Eliminated; Bows To Switzerland, 1-0

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Feb. 17 (AP).—The United States hockey team was eliminated from the world amateur championship tournament tonight when defeated by Switzerland.

It was the second straight loss for the Americans in the semi-final bracket and tomorrow's game between the Swiss and Czechoslovakian teams will determine which will go to the finals.

In other matches today England defeated Sweden, 3 to 2, and Germany downed Hungary, 1 to 0. Canada, idle today after beating Germany yesterday, will be a heavy favorite to beat Hungary tomorrow and enter the finals. England must get by Poland tomorrow to reach the championship playoffs.

W.-L. Five Defeats Fredericksburg

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 17.—Washington-Lee High, of Clarendon, eked out a 29-28 triumph over Fredericksburg High here tonight, staving off a late rally to cling to the 1-point victory margin.

Led by Alex Anderson, the visitors led, 14 to 10, at half time and were always in the van. Anderson scored the twenty-ninth point with a field goal that proved to be the winning basket as Lewis, Bennoney and Branscomb led a late assault on the basket that brought the hosts' score to 28.

Anderson's 10 points were high for the night, with Lewis pacing the losers with 9 markers.

Strafaci Enters Golf Semifinals

St. Augustine, Fla., Feb. 17 (AP).—Frank Strafaci, of Great Neck, N. Y., reached the semifinals of the championship of golf club champions today with a 4 and 3 victory over I. L. Merrill, jr., of Daytona Beach, Fla.

William Holt, Syracuse, N. Y., defeated J. L. Collins, Canton, Mass., 4 and 2, and qualified to meet Strafaci tomorrow.

Burleigh Jacobs, of Wauwatosa, Wis., defeated Bobby Walker, Jacksonville, Fla., 4 and 3. Jacobs has been the "giant killer" of the tournament.

Revolta 5 Under Par In New Orleans Golf

Cards a 67 in Pro-Amateur to Set Record and Serve Notice on Pros in $5,000 Crescent City Open Today.

By the Associated Press.

His batch of booming drives and iron shots into a stiff wind gave him a 67, five below par 37-35—72 and a new record for the City Park course. Revolta's fiery round came in the pro-amateur event, and, although not good enough to win, put his salaried mates on notice he was ready again.

JOHNNY REVOLTA.

Eight birdies rolled off Revolta's clubs during the round, but he faltered a bit on the more difficult incoming nine and slipped two bogies onto the card. The curly-haired Evanston, Ill., professional, trailed by a tremendous gallery that plodded along under the constant threat of rain, bagged birdies on the last two holes to crack the record.

Slammin' Sam Snead, the White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., clouter, made a belated appearance. Tournament officials had been informed he would not play in the 72-hole event starting tomorrow.

Ky Laffoon, of Chicago, teamed with Fred Haas, jr., the New Orleans Walker Cup star, to win the pro-amateur with a 65, 7 below par.

Bracketed at 66 in second place were Jimmie Thomson, the Shawnee-on-the-Delaware professional, and Myles Morrison, New Orleans amateur, and W. D. Stackhouse, San Antonio, Tex., professional, and C. M. Rogers, his New Orleans amateur partner.

An eagle and three birdies on the first six holes helped to give big Ed Dudley, of Augusta, Ga., a 69, and Dick Metz, of Chicago, carded a subpar 71 for the round.

Shenandoah Quintet Bows To Episcopal

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., Feb. 17.—A fourth quarter rally, climaxed by Billy Preston's one-handed toss in the final ten seconds of play, gave Episcopal High School's quintet a 31-30 victory over Shenandoah Valley Academy here this afternoon in a hectic contest played in the new Episcopal gym. It was Episcopal's third victory in the State prep school title race against two defeats.

After trailing throughout most of the game, the Maroons entered the final quarter on the short end of a 27-22 score. Then Goodwin Rhett dropped one in from the center of the floor to start the rally. "Red" Bradfield followed suit and scored on another long shot, and Rhett put the Maroons out in front when he broke through to score from under the basket. A foul shot by Len Hall brought the Cadets up even again at 28-all, but another foul by Preston again gave the locals the lead by a single point.

Prior to the final period, Episcopal had led only once, when they assumed a 3-point advantage mid-way of the second period. The Cadets got busy before the half-time whistle sounded, however, and at the intermission they were leading by a 17-14 count.

Ed Hall, of Shenandoah, was high scorer for the day with 8 points, while Stanley Wojciecowicz, a cousin of Fordham's great grid star, was runner-up with 7.

W. Engelhardt and Jack Devine defeated Alperstein and Finkelstein, 21—12, 21—9. C. Engelhardt and C. Waldon defeated Erskine and Millberg, 21—8, 21—7.

Hitting the Headpin

Eight of the city's leading duckpin artists will leave for Willimantic, Conn., today for the Eastern Sweepstakes and the $1,000 in cash awards in the 15-game event on Saturday.

The members of the Occidental Restaurant team have a match with the famed Blue Ribbon team tonight, Nick Tronsky, Jack White, Mike Paginol et al. The local team will be composed of Astor Clarke, Bill Krauss, Perc Wolfe, Dutch Neuman, Joe Freschi and Ollie Pacini. Hokie Smith, defending champion in the Eastern event, and Joe Harrison will also make the trip.

Three important bowling events are scheduled from Sunday through Tuesday. The Lorraine Gulli Sweepstakes, with an all-star field, including Ida Simmons and other Connecticut, Richmond and Baltimore stars, will be run off Sunday at Convention Hall, with Ethel Brewer, of the Oriole City, defending her title.

Two events are carded on George Washington's Birthday, the Margaret Lynn Handicap Sweepstakes, at Arcadia, and the renewal of the Occidental-Regal Neon Sigh rivalry at Convention Hall, for a $1,000 purse.

The Lynn event is to be rolled in two shifts, at 2 and 7 p. m., and is open to men with handicaps of 106 and under, and women with 103 and under. Highest league averages will apply. The entrants will be taxed two-thirds of the difference between 106 and 108. Five-game totals will decide the winners. The entrance fee is $2.00, including games.

The Occidental-Neon battle will see the former team seeking to avenge a 6-pin defeat suffered before nearly 1,000 fans in a charity match at Christmas. Howard Parsons was the hero of the latter match and will be in the Regal's line-up next Tuesday.

Four Cardinals Sing Swan Song

Four seniors at Catholic University completed strenuous workout sessions yesterday for their final bouts as members of the Cardinal boxing team, tomorrow night, against the strong University of Pittsburgh team.

Tex Guinan, 115-pounder, Sully Greco, 158-pounder, Capt. Freddie Mix, 145-pounder, and Leo Katalinas, heavyweight, seniors, went through final preparations for the last match of their careers, determined to emerge victorious in their final appearances as collegians.

The Cardinals are undefeated this season, having defeated Western Maryland, Maryland, Duke and Villanova in succession. Another match with City College of New York was to have been held March 3, but due to misunderstanding in schedules it has been canceled.

Jacobs Advances.

Blase New Yorkers Will Go Indoors Today to See Outdoors Show

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 17.—Paradoxical as it may sound, New Yorkers will go indoors to see the great outdoors tomorrow.

The occasion will be the unveiling of the National Sportsmen's eight-day show—a huge panorama of the North Woods, the Grand Banks, tropical resorts and even equatorial Africa.

In a space of a few minutes, the tired New Yorker will be able to leave behind the noise and bustle of the city and travel to the "land of his dreams."

He can see tempting trout in their natural habitat, watch deer and bear roam the woods, see the Eskimo, Indian and North Woods guide at work and play, loll beneath the pines in a luxuriously furnished cabin or enjoy the "white hunter's paradise" in West Africa.

To aid the sportsman in enjoying his brief vacation, there are the many needed accessories—fishing tackle, guns, boats, cooking utensils, automobiles and what have you. He can even test his eyesight on one of the several rifle ranges.

The three floors of the Grand Central Palace looked more like a League of Nations today as the exhibits were completed. On the big "Lake" and nearby the men of the North practiced for the many novel contests—log-chopping, sawing, canoe tilting, log-rolling and fly and baitcasting.

An Eskimo and his family worked hard to get their village in shape; six tribesmen from Africa enjoyed the spotlight as they danced and posed for cameramen in their native village, while nearby four baby lions roared and monkeys chattered. Adjoining the village were 40 different specimens of stuffed animals which may be hunted in Africa.

Needahbeh, who again will be master of ceremonies at the "Lake," tuned up with his imitations of cries of wild life and native Penobscot Indian songs. Other Indians, including members of the Dakotas of the Far West, the Sioux and the Ojibways of the Hudson Bay country, mingled with the working men.

The chief of the Montagnais carefully guarded one of the biggest exhibits that included the largest lake and brook trout ever caught in North America, 60-pair of different snow shoes, a kenitik which has traveled 40,000 miles along the Hudson Bay, and a huge Eskimo oomrak, made of walrus hides and paddled by Eskimos between King Island and Nome.

Buying Flurry Jumps Wheat 3c Per Bushel

Advance Is Attributed to Possibilities of Inflation.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 17.—In a sudden outburst of flurried buying, wheat values shot straight skyward almost 3 cents a bushel from an early low level today.

Nervousness over trade talk of inflation possibilities inspired much of the buying. The inflation talk was an accompaniment of Washington official conferences which were assumed to be dealing with proposed hoisting of commodity price levels.

The chief flare-up in the wheat market came after announcement that Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau had been invited to appear before the Senate Military Committee relative to a war loan bill. Later, however, something of a wet blanket was thrown on the market by evidence that export demand for North American wheat had dwindled to nearly zero.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures showed moderate reactions from the day's top quotations but were 1 cent to 1⅞ cents above yesterday's finish; May, 94 to 94¼; July, 89⅝ to 89¾. Corn, 1¼ to 1⅜ up; May, 60⅜ to 60½; July, 61¼ to 61⅝. Oats, ⅛ to ⅜ advanced. Rye, showing 1 cent to 1⅜ bulge, and provisions 2 cents to 25 cents jump.

Cotton Prices Climb $1 a Bale

New York, Feb. 17 (AP).—Cotton advances were extended $1 a bale today as commodity prices generally moved higher. May sold up from 8.95 to 9.07 and closed at 9.06, with final quotations 17 to 20 points net higher.

The market opened 6 to 9 points higher in sympathy with steadier cables and on foreign and commission house buying. Buying was general and seemed to be based on recent interest displayed in Washington in low commodity prices. Although there was considerable profit taking, prices closed at practically the best for the day on renewed trade buying and covering.

Housing Projects Lift Building Total

New York, Feb. 17 (AP).—Several large housing developments contributed importantly to an increase in engineering construction awards compared with last year, the weekly report of the Engineering News-Record showed today. The total, covering the week ended Tuesday, was $45,001,000, against $42,558,000 in the 1937 period and $54,31,000 in the preceding week.

Private projects accounted for $21,077,000 of the total against $17,860,000 in the 1937 week and $30,556,000 in the preceding week. A $4,000,000 residential development in Springfield, Pa., was listed, along with housing pdojects in Richmond, Houston, Baltimore and Glenrock, N. J., involving $800,000 to $1,000,000 each.

Insurance Playwright.

Harrison R. Hathaway, Chartered Life Underwriter and member of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association, made his debut as a playwright yesterday at the regular monthly luncheon of the association at the Willard Hotel. His one-act comedy, "By Any Other Name," was presented as the feature of the meeting and its enthusiastic reception by the membership established Mr. Hathaway as the association's playwright and actor.

The play tells the story of a businessman who regards life insurance as money to be left at death to his widow and son. He is approached by one of his customers, a widow, who owes his firm an overdue account. Her husband died, leaving life insurance money, which she, as Inflation Sentiment Leads to Bidding Up of Stocks and Commodities; U. S. Bonds Lower.

New York, Feb. 17.—Stocks and commodities moved ahead as speculators began to take heart on President Roosevelt's promise to put up prices, in spite of the uninterrupted stagnation of general business. Stock prices were higher all round with sales volume of close to a million shares, the largest in two weeks. United States bonds were slightly easier as dollars found a little support, possibly on anxiety in Great Britain over the rapid rise in the pound sterling. May wheat closed 1¼ cents higher at 94⅛ cents a bushel.

Buying of stocks was lively at times, after a firm but quiet opening, and The Sun's index of industrial stock prices was restored to the January 25 level. Farm implements, steel, metal, rubber, motor and chemical shares were popular, natural with the aid promised commodity prices by the Government and the passage of the new farm bill which is bound to shove huge piles of taxpayers' money into the hands of farmers who will spend some of it for new equipment, motor cars and the like. Price advances were from 1 to 4 points. Goodyear, Goodrich and United States Rubber were active.

Sales volume in Nickel, Steel, Chrysler, Bethlehem, United States Rubber, General Motors, Anaconda, General Electric, Goodyear, Deere and Case made up about 25 per cent of total trading. Among the best gainers were Telephone, which beat back nearly to the price at which it sold before the dividend rumors began to circulate, duPont, General Motors, Case, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Oliver, St. Joseph Lead, General Electric and Westinghouse.

RKO improved. Safeway Stores looked softer. Dome Mines retreated 2 points and other gold shares weakened slightly. Tractions were less active. Railroad stocks moved up on talk of a freight rate decision within ten days. A few of the oil shares did well.

While business and the speculative markets are undecided, watching in wonderment and hoping for the best, the energies of the economic managers at Washington are being directed along three main routes. One is toward complete control of farming, another is to supply credit to "small" business, and the third is to lift commodity prices. All three efforts are beside the point and bound to end in futility if nothing worse.

Price Fixing Madness.

It ought to require no great amount of illustration, argument and study of economic history to show the impossibility, and indeed undesirability, of commodity price fixing over an extended period and for a variety of commodities. Only the most drastic interference with production, markets and individual initiative can do anything, and even in such a case little can be done with commodities enjoying a world markets, such as grain, cotton and other farm products.

Presumably the Government supposes its new farm control law will enable it to handle farm products, and will leave it free to devise some fresh scheme to raise other prices. A hint of the nature of any such scheme was given at the time the Treasury announced that brakes would be put upon gold sterilization.

Reports from Washington indicate that the price-control plans are to involve "selectivity" in commodities. Copper, for example, may be set at 10 cents a pound, but perhaps leather will be allowed to double in price. That ought to stir up a hornet's nest of distress among the industries concerned, to say the least, and even in theory such a scheme is thoroughly bad, for it would tend to increase and perpetuate price disparities. Nobody who ever is going to serve in any Government office ever will have the wisdom to fix commodity prices, and two men will do a job twice as bad as that which one man might do.

On the efforts of the Administration to lift prices and stimulate business through credit expansion, the old difficulty persists, namely,

"Little Fellow" Bull On Stocks in Week

Buying orders by the "little fellow" on the New York Stock Exchange in the week ended February 12 totaled $19,044,237, or $2,615,396 more than selling orders, the Securities Commission reported yesterday. Buying orders totaled 22,738 involving 548,816 shares. This compared with 18,133 selling orders for 488,477 shares.

that of making business take credit that is available. Simply on the desire to exchange depreciating paper dollars for something more tangible, commodity prices could be forced up if something drastic were done toward inflation, as for example, a further devaluation of the dollar. That is unlikely for the present. Meanwhile the effects of high and rising excess bank reserves is bound to be felt but slowly.

Farm Control.

Only one thing is reasonably certain about the new farm control bill, namely, that it will prove to be worse than any of its predecessors. The Hoover scheme for a farm board was a nightmare. It helped to bring down prices of farm products and cost taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars. The AAA was much worse. It failed to do anything more than greatly to lift prices to consumers, to lose, perhaps permanently, much of the American foreign market for farm products, notably cotton, and it cost much more than the farm board plan. The soil conservation affair was as bad as the AAA except that the Supreme Court forced it to go without the processing taxes and therefore the pressure on consumers was a bit lighter. The new scheme will cost more—the Administration admits—but nobody can guess how much more, before farmers will find out that they have been tricked by politicians who want to use billions of taxpayers' money for political purposes.

Bank Clearings Are 23% Less Than Year Ago

Louisville Only One of 22 Leading Cities to Gain Over Previous Week.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 17.—Although bank clearings for most cities were on a five-day basis during the latest period, total volume was only slightly under that of the preceding full week. The unfavorable contrast with the totals for the corresponding period of the previous year, however, continued for the fourteenth straight time.

The aggregate for 22 leading cities of the United States for the week ended Wednesday, February 16, according to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., amounted to $4,297,187,000. This compared with $5,578,636,000 for the same 1937 week, giving a decrease of 23 per cent. In the year-to-year comparison for the preceding week there was a drop of 23.1 per cent.

The five-day turnover at New York was $2,564,498,000, a drop of 25.2 per cent from the $3,428,949,000 for the similar 1937 period, while the outside centers furnished a total of $1,732,689,000, which was 19.4 per cent under the $2,149,707,000 recorded last year. Clearings for the latest period dropped $25,629,000 from the total of the week preceding.

Excess Reserve Off 50 Millions

By the Associated Press.

The lendable excess reserves of the Nation's banks decreased $50,000,000 to $1,360,000,000 in week ended February 16, the Federal Reserve Board said today.

Total reserves increased $11,000,000, to $7,216,000,000, principally because of a decrease in Treasury cash and an increase in gold stocks.

The Reserve banks again switched from Government bonds to notes, selling $5,000,000 of the long-term securities and buying similar amount of the short-term variety.

Brokers' Loans Rise $16,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $588,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented an increase of $16,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $1,009,000,000.

Chicago, Feb. 17.—Electric output of the public utility operating companies in the Standard Gas & Electric Co. system for the week ended February 12, 1938, totaled 100,840,828 kilowatt-hours, an increase of 0.8 per cent compared with the corresponding week last year.

Steel Prices to Hold For Second Quarter

Pittsburgh, Feb. 17 (U.P.).—Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, major subsidiary of the U. S. Steel Corporation, announced tonight that prices of hot rolled steel products will be the same for the second period as prevailed in the first period.

Maintaining of present steel prices through June was expected to promote a mild influx of orders from buyers who may have been delaying purchases as a result of recurring rumors that steel prices might be changed from the second quarter which ends July 1.

As other steel companies are expected to follow the lead of U. S. Steel in maintaining prices, it is believed that present wages also will be maintained

Notables Hear Last Rites for Adm. Grayson

With simple but impressive rites, Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, friend and counselor of the Nation's great, was laid to rest on the brow of a windswept hill in Arlington Cemetery, within the boundaries of his beloved native State of Virginia.

Services before burial in Arlington were held at St. John's Church, Sixteenth and H streets northwest, with the Rev. Oliver J. Hart, rector, and the Rev. Albert H. Lucas, headmaster of St. Alban's School, officiating.

President at Rites.

The funeral was attended by notables, headed by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt and Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes. Cabinet officers, Senators and Representatives, as well as members of the Diplomatic Corps were included among the mourners.

After the services in the church the funeral cortege proceeded down Constitution avenue and across the Memorial Bridge to the entrance to Arlington Cemetery, where the Navy Band and a naval escort were waiting.

To the strains of "Onward, Christian Soldiers" the body of the Admiral was borne to a grave surrounded by flowers, not far from the last resting place of the President and Chief Justice William Howard Taft.

"Taps" Sounded at Grave.

At the graveside prayers were said by the officiating clergymen and "taps" was sounded, but no salute was fired.

So great was the crowd that desired to attend the funeral services at St. John's that hundreds were turned away or kept waiting in the streets during the 20 minutes of funeral prayers.

At Arlington the throng covered the hillside as the body of Admiral Grayson, physician to President Wilson, was lowered into the grave, shortly after the band had finished playing "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

In accordance with the request of the admiral's family no honorary pallbearers were named. Active pallbearers were drawn from enlisted men of the Navy.

Harry L. Gosnell Funeral Is Today

Funeral services for Harry L. Gosnell, 52, of Silver Spring, Md., retired master sergeant of the Army Medical Corps, will be held today at 10 a. m. at Walter Reed Hospital. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery with Masonic rites. Sergt. Gosnell died Tuesday at Walter Reed.

Born at Glen Rock, Pa., February 19, 1885, Sergt. Gosnell joined the Army Medical Corps in 1905. During and after the World War he was in charge of the vaccine department of the Army Medical School in Washington.

Soon after his retirement from the Army three years ago, he joined the staff of the Georgetown University Medical School as technical assistant in the pathology department.

He was a Scottish Rite Mason and a member of Costello Post, American Legion. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Eva Gosnell, a son, Everett, his mother, Mrs. Lucinda Gosnell, of New Freedom, Pa., and several brothers and sisters.

Rites Tomorrow For Maj. Glasgow

Funeral services for Maj. Lawrence B. Glasgow, 49, Infantry, U. S. A., who died Tuesday at Hot Springs, Ark., will be held with military honors at 10 a. m. tomorrow in Arlington Cemetery, with Chaplain Ora J. Cohee officiating.

Maj. Glasgow was on duty here from 1924 until 1926 in the Operations and Training Branch of the War Department General Staff and again from August, 1933, until July, 1934, while he was attending the Army War College at Fort Humphreys.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Edith G. Glasgow, of Hot Springs, Ark., and two sons, Lawrence G., and Hugh Glasgow.

Honorary pallbearers will be Lieut. Cols. Herbert J. Lawes; Edwin F. Harding; Roscoe B. Woodruff and John F. Landis, and Majs. Francis G. Bonham and Leven C. Allen.

G.A.Ockershausen Rites Tomorrow

Funeral services for George A. Ockershausen, 86, retired Georgetown cigar manufacturer, will be held at his home, 2918 Olive avenue northwest, at noon tomorrow. Burial will be in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Ockershausen died at his home Wednesday night. A native of Hesse, Germany, he had lived in Georgetown for 62 years. He retired 15 years ago from a cigar manufacturing business he conducted. He was a member of the Concordia Lutheran Church.

Surviving are two sons, Fred C. and Harry J. Ockershausen and three daughters, Mrs. Jane Henry, Mrs. Gladys McMillan and Mrs. Joseph Carroll.

Harry Glotzbach Dies at His Office

Harry E. Glotzbach, 57, died yesterday while alone in his office at 923 Twelfth street northeast. Ill for several months, he was stricken with a heart attack.

A native of Washington, Mr. Glotzbach had engaged in the fuel business here for 30 years. He was a member of the Holy Name Church, the Carroll Council, Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus, Washington Lodge No. 15, B. P. O. E., and the Northeast Citizens Association. He had formerly served as a director of the Northeast Savings Bank.

Clashes Mark Civil Service Act Hearings

Retirement Amendments Debated by Senate Sub-Committee.

Hearings on several bills to amend the civil service retirement act were concluded yesterday by a Senate sub-committee amid sharp clashes among witnesses.

An early report is expected to be made by Senator Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, chairman of the sub-committee, to the Civil Service Committee.

Harry B. Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission, defended a proposal that the Federal Government have an equal option with the employe to compel retirement after the employe had reached a certain age and served a specified number of years.

Employe organization spokesmen, on the other hand, objected to the double option, contending only the employe should have the right to decide whether or not to retire.

TRUSTEES' SALE OF VALUABLE TWO-STORY BRICK DWELLING CONTAINING SEVEN ROOMS, TWO BATHS, HOT WATER HEAT, 1 CAR GARAGE, AND KNOWN AS PREMISES 1843 IRVING STREET NORTHWEST.

By virtue of a certain deed of trust duly recorded in Liber No. 6785, Folio 526 et seq., of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of the party secured thereby, the undersigned trustees will sell, at public auction, in front of the premises, on WEDNESDAY, the SECOND day of MARCH, A. D. 1938, at THREE FORTY-FIVE O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described land and premises, situate in the District of Columbia, and designated as and being lot 68 in the subdivision made by Kennedy Brothers, Incorporated, of lots in Square 2566, formerly Block 20, "Ingleside," as per plat recorded in the Office of the Surveyor for the District of Columbia in Liber 54 at folio 4. Subject to the right of redemption by the maker of the aforesaid deed of trust, her heirs and assigns within a period of sixty days from date of sale not excluding Sundays and holidays as provided in said deed of trust.

TERMS OF SALE: One-third of the purchase-money to be paid in cash, balance in two equal installments, payable in one and two years, with interest at five per centum per annum, payable semi-annually, secured by first deed of trust upon the property sold, or all cash, at the option of the purchaser. A deposit of $500.00 will be required at time of sale. All conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps, etc., at cost of purchaser. Terms of sale to be complied with within ten days from expiration of redemption period, otherwise the trustees reserve the right to resell the property at the risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after five days' advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C.

THOS. J. OWEN & SON, AUCTIONEERS,
1431 EYE ST. N.W.

Notice of Trustees' Sale of All Remaining Assets of Mount Vernon Savings Bank.

To holders of Participating Certificates in the Mount Vernon Liquidating Trust, and Creditors, Stockholders and Debtors of the Mount Vernan Savings Bank, and all others concerned:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the undersigned Trustees of the Mount Vernon Savings Bank, in liquidation, pursuant to authority in them vested, will offer for sale, at public auction to the highest bidder or bidders, at the office of Thos. J. Owen & Son, auctioneers, 1431 Eye St. N.W., or at such other place to which the sale may be adjourned, beginning THURSDAY, MARCH THIRD, 1938, between the hours of Nine-thirty o'clock A. M., E. S. T., and Twelve-thirty P. M., and between the hours of One-thirty P. M. and Five o'clock P. M., and each business day thereafter at the same place and during the same hours, until all items are sold, all the remaining assets of the MOUNT VERNON SAVINGS BANK except cash and cash items, consisting of improved and unimproved real estate and equities therein, first and second trust real estate notes, stocks, bonds, secured and unsecured promissory notes, judgments, accounts receivable, overdrafts and other choses in action, office furniture and fixtures and other chattels, and unknown claims and non-ledger assets, if any, less such items as may be paid or otherwise disposed of prior to the date of sale herein mentioned, such changes to be announced at the time of the sale.

A descriptive list as of December 31, 1937, of the remaining assets so offered for sale is contained in a schedule which may be examined by prospective bidders at Room 206, Machinists Building, Ninth Street and Mount Vernon Place, Northwest, Washington, D. C., or at the office of the auctioneer on the date of sale. Catalogues of the assets to be sold will be available on and after February Fifth at Room 206, Machinists Building, Ninth Street and Mount Vernon Place, N. W., to prospective bidders upon making a deposit of $50.00, which deposit will be refunded upon the return of such catalogues.

Said assets will be sold without recourse and without warranty of any kind or character.

All assets will be offered for sale, item by item, as listed in the catalogues. When all of the individual items have been offered for sale, the assets will then be offered for sale as an entirety, and if the highest bid as an entirety received and noted exceeds the total of the bids for individual items received and noted, the assets will be sold to the highest bidder as an entirety; otherwise the assets will be declared sold to the makers of the highest bids received and noted for individual items. No bids for individual items offered will be received and noted only on condition that the said items may subsequently be offered and sold as an entirety.

Bidders on the assets as an entirety must qualify by making a deposit of $25,000.00 with the auctioneer, in cash or certified check or cashier's check on a bank or trust company in the District of Columbia, before making a bid for the assets as an entirety. All persons may qualify to bid for individual items by depositing with the auctioneer, in cash or certified check or cashier's check on some bank or trust company in the District of Columbia, any amount not less than $50.00, and upon making such deposit will be issued a catalogue to be returned at the close of the sale, and will be entitled to bid on any item or items totaling not to exceed ten times the amount of such deposit.

Any person not having qualified as herein provided will be required to pay, in cash or certified check or cashier's check on a bank or trust company in the District of Columbia, for any item at the time such bid is received and noted, and upon failure to make such payment the auctioneer will immediately proceed to re-offer such item for sale and no further bid shall be considered from such bidder.

Any amount deposited by a successful bidder to qualify which is less than the total purchase price, will be retained and applied on account of the purchase price; any amount deposited by a successful bidder to qualify in excess of the purchase price will be returned to such successful bidder.

Any or all deposits made by any bidder for an individual item may, so far as applicable, be applied on account of the required deposit in order to qualify him to bid when the assets are offered for sale as an entirety.

Any deposit received from an unsuccessful bidder will be returned to him when the item shall be knocked down to some other bidder.

Any successful bidder may assign or transfer his bid.

The purchaser may, at the time of settlement, deposit with the Trustees on account of the purchase price, at their distributive value, Participating Certificates of the Mount Vernon Liquidating Trust entitled to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale.

TERMS OF SALE: ALL CASH. Settlement to be made at Room 206, Machinists Building, Ninth Street and Mount Vernon Place N. W., Washington, D. C., within thirty days from date of last day of sale or the deposit will be forfeited, and such asset or assets resold at the cost and risk of the defaulting purchaser after five (5) days previous advertisement of said resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C., or without forfeiting deposit, Trustees may avail themselves of any legal or equitable rights against defaulting purchaser.

Rents, taxes and insurance, etc., on real estate, or any other prepaid item, will be adjusted as of the date of settlement. Examination of title, conveyancing, recording, notary fees and revenue stamps, on real estate transfers, to be at the cost of the purchaser.

All real estate sold subject to encumbrances and leases, if any, as stated in the catalogue or announced at the time of sale.

Bob Burns Says—

One of the most insincere things I've ever seen is the way some of these actresses greet each other when they meet at parties out here. The other night, one of 'em met another one at a party and she says, "Oh, hello, darling—you're looking so wonderful tonight—how are you?" And she walked up and gave the other one a big kiss.

After a while, I took her to one side and I says, "Now, I want'a know why you kissed her like that—I thought you didn't like her."

The actress says, "I certainly don't like her—I hate her."

I says, "Well then, why did you kiss her?" and she says, "Well, don't you see how terrible her freckles show up on her chin where I kissed the powder off?"

Nolan - Jenkins Trial May Go To Jury Today

Justice Cox Orders Lawyers to Speed Up 6-Week Hearing.

Justice Joseph W. Cox yesterday ordered attorneys to speed up the trial of William J. Nolan and Benjamin D. Jenkins, who are charged with 16 instances of false pretenses and one of conspiring to commit false pretenses. The six-week trial is expected to go to the jury late today.

Nolan and Jenkins are alleged to have sold conditional bills of sale for automobiles to the Munsey Trust Co. and to have sold other bills for the same automotive units to the Universal Credit Co.

Nolan offered a letter purporting to have been signed by an official of the credit company, which indicated the company knew the contracts previously had been hypothecated. Samuel F. Pickering, of the Department of Justice, testified in his opinion the last one-third of the letter was spurious. Ira M. Gullickson, Metropolitan Police Department expert, testified the entire letter was genuine.

Justice Cox allotted three hours of argument to each side. Assistant United States Attorney Wilson concluded his opening statement late yesterday.

Post-Grad Clinic To Open at G.W.U.

A symposium on obstetrics this afternoon and tonight will launch the sixth annual post-graduate clinic of George Washington University Medical School, which will extend through Saturday.

Sponsored by the A. F. A. King Obstetrical Society, tomorrow's sessions at the medical school will be presided over by Ralph I. Jacobs, society president. The attending physicians will be welcomed by Dr. Earle B. McKinley, dean of G. W. U. Medical School.

Speakers scheduled to present scientific papers are Drs. P. Brooke Bland, F. Bayard Carter, and Walter Schiller. Dr. Samuel M. Dodek will give a brief prefatory address on the activities of the A. F. A. King Society.

D. C. Astronomers Visit Observatory

Members of the National Capital Amateur Astronomers Association met at the Naval Observatory Wednesday to hear a lecture of spectroscopy by Eula Sauls Treadway, spectroscope expert and graduate of the University of Mississippi.

Following instructoins by Miss Treadway as to use of the spectroscope, members were permitted to use the 12-inch telescope at the observatory.

On a motion made by U. Sherman Lyons, associate astronomer at the observatory and vice president of the association, and Stephen Nagy, president, members voted to accept Miss Treadway as a permanent member of the organization.

Newark Beer Heir Sued in Seduction

Miami, Fla., Feb. 17.—Gotifried W. Krueger, of Newark, N. J., 36-year-old heir to a large brewing fortune, today was sued for $150,000 for a breach of promise to marry by Marie Young, 33, Chicago.

Miss Young, a dark-haired, blue-eyed employe of a Chicago advertising agency, charged she was seduced and suffered "loss of character, shame, sorrow and impairment of her matrimonial prospects and her social status."

Miss Raye's Father Sues Her Manager For $150,000 Balm

Los Angeles, Feb. 17 (AP).—Peter F. Reed, father of Martha Raye, screen comedienne, today sued Peter Baumann, one-time night club caterer, Miss Raye's manager, for $150,000 for alienation of Mrs. Reed's affections.

Reed, a vaudeville performer, also sued Baumann, Miss Raye and his former wife, Mrs. Maybelle Hooper Reed, for an accounting of Miss Raye's earnings from January, 1936, when he says he sent Miss Raye and her mother to Hollywood, until last August 27, when the actress became 21 years old.

Reed charged that since January 15, 1936, Baumann has carried on a campaign to win Mrs. Reed's affections.

Mrs. Reeds' divorce from Reed is due to become final next month.

Banquet Is Tendered E. G. Herndon, Retiring

More than 50 persons attended a banquet at the Wilard Hotel Wednesday in honor of E. G. Herndon, senior mechanical engineer of the Navy Department, on the occasion of his retirement after more than 20 years of service.

Herndon, who recently celebrated his 70th birthday, was appointed an engineer in the Navy Department by President Roosevelt, then Assistant Secretary of the Nay. As senior mechanical engineer he has had charge of specifications for contracts on all purchases of heavy machinery for naval ships and the Navy Yard.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 N T	Pass	2 N T	Pass
3 N T	Pass	Pass	Pass

Both North and South bid optimistically. North's raise was shaded and South's rebid highly questionable.

West opened the deuce of spades. Before playing from dummy declarer considered his chances for making two spade tricks. One chance, obviously, was to find East with no honor except the Ace. This condition demanded that the lead be allowed to ride to the nine-spot. If East had the Queen, it was immaterial whether dummy played the Jack or the seven. If East had the ten, the Jack was the right play. Finally, if East had two honors, any play was hopeless. On the assumption that there was just as much chance that East had the Ace as any other single honor, declarer ducked in dummy. He never had a chance to correct the error. East shifted to the heart Queen and by the time declarer had established the diamonds the defenders could take three heart tricks, two spades and the diamond Ace.

Declarer's analysis of spade possibilities had been correct, but it had overlooked the vital feature of the hand. What he should have seen was that if the first trick was taken by East with any spade honor, it would be fatal, since a heart shift was almost certain. Thus, as the one chance for success, declarer should have put on dummy's Jack of spades, not merely in an effort to win two spade tricks, but in the greater effort to keep East off the lead.

As the cards lay, the Jack would hold and a diamond lead would knock out West's Ace. It is true that West could still defend successfully by shifting to a heart but this shift would be very difficult for West to make; at least twice as difficult as a heart shift on East's part.

Co-operation Asked.

Full co-operation in the forthcoming renovizing campaign was urged by Joseph Gardner in an address before the D. C. Landscape Architects Club. Chairman of the public relations committee, Gardner outlined a plan whereby landscape architects could aid property owners in solving problems of design and general arrangement of landscape materials.

Doctor Urges Yearly Ear Test For All Pupils

One-Tenth Affected, Fowler Tells Society for Hard of Hearing.

Yearly ear tests for the Nation's children were recommended yesterday by Dr. Edmund Prince Fowler, president of the American Society for the Hard of Hearing, following a Nation-wide survey which showed that one-tenth of all boys and girls in school are victims of defective hearing.

Dr. Fowler declared that hearing deficiencies among children contribute to traffic accidents, help develop criminal tendencies, lead to inferiority complexes, and often cause needless scoldings from parents and teachers.

"Three million of the 30,000,000 school children in the United States are victims. . . . Only 1,062,373 boys and girls had their hearing tested during 1937," the survey report stated.

The society said that through its national committee, which has representatives in 108 cities, a public education campaign for the prevention, correction, and improvement of defective hearing will be undertaken.

Carpenter Held In $5,000 Demand Upon Rich Broker

Federal agents have arrested Frank Cornelius Vander Plas, 39-year-old carpenter of Montclair, N. J., on charges of attempting to extort $5,000 from Gerald M. Livingston, New York broker, it was announced here yesterday by J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Vander Plas, after his arrest at Montclair, confessed that he wrote three threatening letters to Livingston, the most recent closing with these words, "This is your last warning."

The first letter to the broker, mailed from New York, June 14, demanded that a payment of $5,000 be made in small bills or a member of Livingston's family would disappear.

Born in Holland and now an American citizen, Vander Plas is married and has three children.
